When Dr. Carter G. Woodson inaugurated Negro History Week in 1916, he cited a two-fold objective. First, he sought to instill within black youth a sense of pride in their heritage and a knowledge of the struggles of their ancestors. Second, he hoped to remind all Americans of the need for continued struggle in the quest for a truly equalitarian and Free America.

Fifty-one years following the first celebration, these objectives remain timely for those who seek a better America for all regardless of race, creed, color, or class. In keeping with Dr. Woodson's vision, the Black Education Program of Eastern Washington State College sponsors the Fifty-first Annual Negro History Week Celebration.
