Your experience during COVID-19:

It's so strange this experience

Never thought my life would be like this

If I looked at myself in the mirror

April before, now eighteen months after

Would I know who I was?

Before just a child, unsure, optimistic

Not sure where I was going , unguided, unrealistic

No responsibilities, unrestrained and free

Not sure who I wanted to be

I didn't know who I was

Life can change so fast sometimes

It kind of sounds like just one of those lines

That people say when they see other people

But now I know firsthand the sentiment's real

Starting to know who I was

Would I have guessed before all this started

That eighteen months later someone would call me their father

That another lost soul would choose me to marry

And that this lost boy would finally be happy

Now I know who I am
