EQUAL PAY FOR COMPARABLE WORK:

For many office workers, "equal work" is not enough. Job segregation in the office is so severe that women clericals who feel underpaid can rarely find a man doing "equal" --i.e. similar--work to compare herself to. Instead of working alongside her, the more highly paid man may be in the next room doing a job that is different--but equal in skill, responsibility, and educational qualifications.

THEREFORE, in recent years, increasing attention has focused on the concept of "equal pay for work of comparable worth," or "pay equity." Women doing jobs that require a certain level skill and responsibility, it is argued, should receive a salary equal to those of men doing jobs requiring equal skill, responsibility, etc.

EWU Women's Center, one of the sponsors for "equal pay for work of comparable worth" is co-sponsoring a regional conference on Comparable Worth. The conference will be April 4, 1981 at the University of Washington.

Those who wish to attend the conference should contact Pat Coontz at the Women's Center.
