When the fall quarter opens this fall, Eastern Washington University will begin its one hundred and second year. For several reasons the 1983-84 academic year will be special:

First, this fall marks the beginning of the first full year of operation for the Higher Education Center in downtown Spokane. A special dedicatory program is being scheduled for October or November. The Center is open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday and during the day on Saturday. We invite you to tour the building at any time. The lobby always has a good art display.

Second, in September the Washington Council for Postsecondary Education will be considering several new degree proposals for Eastern. The degrees under consideration are:

Bachelor of Science in Computer Technology

Bachelor of Science in Computer Information Systems

Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Technology

Master of Science in Computer Science

Master of Science in Computer Science Education

When these degrees are approved, EWU will move into a new era of technical education, a step destined to help our students better prepare for the world of high tech. In addition, these degrees will be a significant stimulus to the Spokane economy.

Third, this fall brings to campus the finest group of new freshmen and transfer students to enroll at Eastern. Included in this group are 11 high school valedictorians, 2 salutatorians, 17 Presidential Scholars with high school GPA's from 3.80 to 4.00; 19 University Scholars with GPA's from 3.50 to 3.82. Many of these students are enrolled in the EWU Honors Program, a program rapidly becoming one of the finest in the Northwest.

Fourth, this fall, for the first time, Eastern's men and women will compete in NCAA Division I in intercollegiate athletics. Football is still Division II but moves to Division IAA next year. Eastern women compete in the Mountain West Athletic Conference which includes Montana, Montana State, Idaho, Idaho State, Boise State, Weber State and Portland State. The men's program is independent but competes against the same schools plus Northern Arizona and Nevada-Reno.

Fifth, we begin the 1983-85 biennium with a new and significantly improved budget. We thank Governor Spellman and the Washington State Legislature for this improved funding. With these resources we are able to restore some of the programs that were cut during the recession as well as generally improving the university's instructional programs.

We thank all of our alumni and friends for their support. We pledge to make 1983-84 our very best year.

New Higher Education Center opens

The opening, on April 25, of the new Higher Education Center in Spokane represents a significant first step in Eastern Washington University's second century of service to the region.

Located at W. 705 First, the center succeeds the Bon Building as a coordinating site for the university's academic programs in the city. Everyone agrees, however, that the center's capabilities and potential far exceed that of its predecessor.

"The amount of utilization is much greater than anyone had predicted," said EWU president H. George Frederickson.

The new building has 60,000 square feet of space, four floors, a lower level, 34 classrooms, spacious malls, a convenient location and adequate parking. It houses a full range of university services including admissions, advising, financial aid, Associated Student activities, a library, a cafeteria and an art gallery.

Among the center's most advanced features are a computer terminal room containing CRT terminals and high-speed printers; a micro-computer lab with clusters of Apple II micro-computers with graphics printer; and a teleconferencing capability for transmission and reception of information via communications satellite.

As originally planned, the center will provide a base for teaching, research and public service—a medium in which local educational and corporate institutions may offer learning activities that range from one-hour community forums to highly sophisticated master's degree programs.

While the center was conceived to better meet the educational needs of the community, university planners say the potential for use is almost limitless.

"It will always be an on-going process to identify the needs of the community," Robert Hille, acting director of the center, said. "And to adjust and develop our services to fulfill those needs."

Robert J. Salsbury, Jr., director of programming, has a philosophy almost identical to Hille's "It's a simple equation," he said. "Find out what people need—and get it for them. The center will be many things to many people."

That is already apparent.

On the lower level, the Lower Cafe is becoming a full-blown restaurant operation, attracting many downtown shoppers and business clientele. The free lecture series offered at noon is popular among brown baggers and other luncheon patrons.

In the lobby, EWU's art gallery will host an Andy Warhol exhibit this fall and several other national and international artists throughout the year. There are plans to acquire a grand piano and to present dance, music and theatre performances. Salsbury predicts the lobby will become a "cultural magnet."

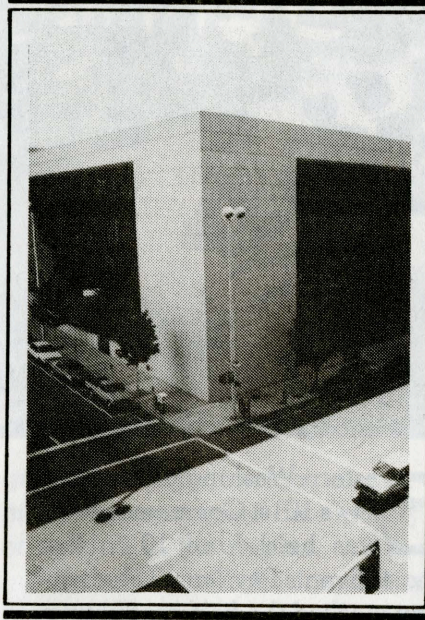

The fourth floor also has numerous possibilities—with meeting and conference rooms and an assembly space that will accommodate 200. In May, Salsbury said, the fourth floor was the scene of a prime rib sit-down dinner for 200, complete with silver, china and crystal.

Hille, Salsbury and Jack Quinn, acting director of housing and food services, worked as a team after the former bank building was acquired last fall to bring the center "on-line"—or ready for occupancy. They worked with vendors, contractors, architects and building code inspectors. And they had a few problems.

The problems arose in the attempt to convert bank offices into classrooms on the third and fourth floors. The additional occupancy would require more fire exits—at a substantial cost. They had to change their plans. "It was a rude awakening to us," Hille said, "but it has worked to our advantage, to the center's advantage and to the student's advantage."

A portion of the classrooms intended for the third and fourth floors were moved to the lower level. In the open space that remained, attractive, comfortable central malls were established where students can meet, study or rest. Classrooms now surround the malls, along the outside walls. Each room has a view. "It couldn't have worked out better if we had planned it that way," Hille said.

The team chose furnishings for the new center with the comfort of the adult working student in mind. Tables and padded chairs have replaced the tablet-armchair that is typical of most classrooms. "Our chairs have the widest seats on the market for adult learners," Salsbury said.

Quinn, who said he spent many nights in old chairs and enclosed rooms at the Bon Building, wanted to get as far away from that as he could. "I really empathize with the lady or gentleman who works all day and comes to school at night," he said. "So we put a person in a chair and measured them. And then we asked them, 'Did you have enough room?' There was no guesswork about it."

Hille said the difference between the Bon and the center is dramatic. "However," he said, "it should be emphasized that the resources provided to students are much greater in terms of personnel as well as hardware. The services offered at the center are much more comprehensive than those at the Bon."

In less than six months of operation, the center has become established as a vital, important part of downtown Spokane. There is wide acceptance of the many non-credit workshops and seminars that are offered—and the list of organizations and businesses that use the center continues to grow.

But while university officials say the center's development has surpassed all expectations, they also say this is just the beginning. Future plans include a grade school program involving young scientists, a high school honors program for high achievers and cooperative programs with area colleges and universities. Although the center has been open for several months, it has not been officially opened. Dr. Frederickson said a formal ceremony is being planned and will take place sometime this fall.

Commencement: Eastern begins second century

Some 1,400 Eastern students received bachelor's and master's degrees in the June 10, 1983 commencement ceremony.

Eastern Washington University's 101st Commencement was held June 10 in the Special Events Pavilion. The ceremony marked the first graduating class of the institution's second century of operation.

Governor John Spellman, who participated in ceremonies opening Eastern's centennial in October, 1981, delivered the principal address to 1,400 graduates their families, friends and the general public.

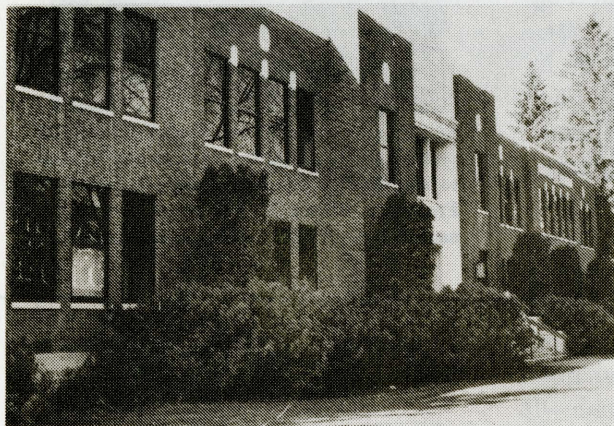

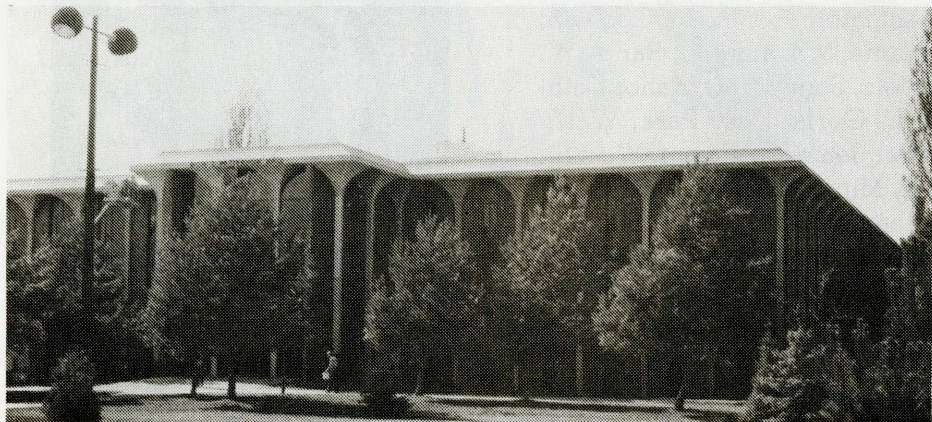

"You couldn't have graduated at a better time," Spellman told the graduates. "The whole world is turning in our direction." Spellman also said that Washington's higher education system had survived two years of turmoil—and that he hoped they had learned that higher education must be supported with tax dollars.

Although rain canceled the Grande Marche of faculty and students across the campus, it didn't dampen the spirits of graduates who cheered, applauded and launched champagne corks during the celebration. A crowd of nearly 5,000 family members and friends attended the ceremonies.

In addition to appearing as commencement speaker, Spellman was awarded the Clarence D. Martin medal from EWU president H. George Frederickson. Also honored were Dr. Norman V. Vigfusson, professor of Biology, and Dr. Mohammed Ikramuddin, professor of geology, who received the Trustees' Medal and $1,000 awards.

Wilson Medalion Award
 Trustees' Medalion Award

The highest award given to a graduate went to psychology major Patricia L. Gould as the first graduate of the university's honor program.

The day's agenda of activities included a rededication of Martin Hall, which opened as home of the Departments of Psychology and Applied Psychology last fall after a three-million dollar remodeling. The remodeling, initiated in 1979 with a state budget allocation, gives the two psychology departments the most up-to-date facility of its kind in the region.

Martin Hall, which is named in honor of Eastern alum and former governor of the state of Washington, Clarence Martin, was formerly the campus elementary school. Old timers will remember that varsity basketball games were played in the gymnasium, which had the first electric scoreboard in the region.

The university's plans to open commencement activities with the burying of a time capsule containing relics of the university's first 100 years had to be canceled because of the rain.

Graduates receive Mary Shields Wilson Medallion Award

The Mary Shields Wilson Medallion Award, established in 1981 as a tribute to Mrs. Frederick Wilson, Jr., is given to twenty graduates each year. Mrs. Wilson served on the Eastern Washington University Board of Trustees from 1968 to 1981 and was chairwoman of the board on three different occasions. The medallion award program recognizes those outstanding graduates who have distinguished themselves both academically and in the extracurricular activities of the university.

The 1983 recipients are: Maria G. Balsam, Tri-Cities, Washington; Linda S. Brincken, Latah, Washington; David A. Brookbank, Spokane, Washington; Doris M. Butler, Spokane, Washington; Pam J. Carlson, Vancouver, Washington; Jeanine M. Coghlan, Spokane, Washington; Randy W. Daniels, Sandpoint, Idaho; Kathryn L. Gerla, Deer Park, Washington; James R. Hamm, West St. Paul, Minnesota; Eric L. Hartley, Cheney, Washington; David S. Henley, Spokane, Washington; Lisa M. Jackson, Raymond, Washington; R. Ellen Kremer, Spokane, Washington; Scott R. Marrs, Cheney, Washington; Marlene D. Morrow, Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Daniel K. Parkhurst, Deer Park, Washington; Brenda J. Ray, Seattle, Washington; Pao Vue, Spokane, Washington; Anne C. Wagner, Marysville, Washington; and Joy E. Zellmer, Davenport, Washington

The Mary Shields Wilson Medal, given to 20 outstanding graduating seniors as a tribute to longtime Board of Trustees members Mrs. Frederick Wilson, Jr., was presented for the second time at EWU's 101st Commencement.

Golden Reunion observed

Members of the Class of 1933 gathered to observe the 50th anniversary of their graduation June 9 and 10 during commencement activities on the EWU campus. Class members of 1930 through 1935 as well as several retired faculty members and administrators joined the 1933 graduates in their Golden Reunion celebration.

Reunion activities began June 9 with a dinner at the Ridpath Hotel and continued June 10, Commencement Day, with a reception in the Red Reese Room of the Special Events Pavilion for the golden grads, retired faculty and administrators.

Following the 11 a.m. commencement ceremonies all classes and retirees attended an alumni luncheon in the council chambers of the Pence Union Building. After lunch, walking and driving tours were conducted to reacquaint the alums with their alma mater.

Vigfusson, Ikramuddin receive Trustees' Medal

Dr. Norman V. Vigfusson, professor of biology, and Dr. Mohammed Ikramuddin, professor of geology, have been awarded the Trustees' Medal—Eastern Washington University's highest faculty award. EWU president H. George Frederickson presented the award to the two faculty members during commencement ceremonies June 10th.

The Trustees' Medal was established to honor faculty members who possess outstanding qualities in teaching, research and service and who promote the highest standards of academic excellence. It is accompanied by a $1,000 award, contributed by the EWU Foundation, as a means of rewarding excellence above that which is expected of all faculty members.

Vigfusson, who joined the EWU staff in 1969, is recognized as a master teacher by students and colleagues and for his research in the field of genetics. Of special significance is his work in developing techniques for measuring the potential of a pesticide or herbicide to cause genetic damage. The techniques have direct applications and are of national importance in screening the more than 25,000 new synthetic organic compounds that are produced each year.

Since coming to EWU in 1976, Ikramuddin has developed one of the best geochemical labs in the nation. His reputation as a teacher and researcher has attracted many gifted students. Ikramuddin's work has produced new techniques for the chemical analysis of geological materials such as meteorites, rocks, soils and waters. The EWU lab is now the only place in the world capable of analyzing for extremely low concentrations of gold and certain other elements.

Sadie Camp Peterson — 94 years young

Sadie Camp Peterson 94 years young

At age 94, Sadie Camp Peterson is full of wit, wisdom and life. Wherever she goes, she makes friends. And when she leaves, they miss her. That was the case last March when Sadie moved from Clarkston, Wash., where she lived with her son, to Raymond, Wash., to be near her daughter. Even the local paper took note of her leaving. "She's the most active and wonderful 94 I know," columnist Annie Barnea wrote. "They're sure going to miss her at the Wednesday dances!"

Sadie was known around Clarkston for her health and diet hints, which she frequently shared with friends: Lots of fruit and vegetables, preferably uncooked, no white refined sugar, beef, or dead starch foods and plenty of vitamins. "I spend quite a bit on vitamins and minerals," she says, "but even so it's much cheaper than the alternative."

She was also known for her love of dancing—"It keeps you young and limber," she says—and she never missed the Wednesday afternoon dances at the Gerontology Center. Her partner, more often than not, was a woman. "There is an abundance of single women for partners," she says. "At Senior Citizens, you see many women dancing as partners. Anything to keep moving."

Sadie was born in 1889 in Chat-anooga, Tenn., where her father died when she was just seven years old, leaving the family practically destitute. She came west with her mother and older sister, moving to Oakesdale and then Farmington, Wash., where her mother took in sewing and the two girls worked at whatever honest jobs they could find.

One of the highlights of Sadie's school years was her membership in an eighth-grade girls's basketball team. They made their own uniforms and played their games in a warehouse. "We were never beaten," she says, "we were a rather wild bunch." In later years, Sadie produced her own winning team—a group of fourth grade boys at the Sylvandale School near Raymond where she was teaching in 1947.

Sadie graduated from Farmington High School in 1909 and took her first teaching position at the Belshaw Country School five miles out of town. She boarded with a farm family, worked for her keep and walked to and from school. Her days began at 4 a.m.; her salary was $50 a month, most of which she kept.

Sadie's involvement with Eastern began in 1911—when she enrolled in Cheney Normal School—and continued for more than 50 years. Records show her attending Eastern as late as 1962. "Oh, I went there longer than that," she says. "When I left I only needed 20 more credits for a master's degree. But I figured I'd graduated from the place three times—so I'd better quit."

There were 300 students enrolled at Cheney Normal in 1911, Sadie says, and it was professor N.D. Showalter's first year as principal. One dance was allowed that year—the first Friday night of school. Sadie met Lot C. Peterson that night, a graduate of Cheney Academy, the high school precursor to Cheney Normal. They were married in 1913 at Fort Benton, Mont. They rode home in a lumber wagon.

"We took up a homestead near Fort Benton," Sadie says. "Near was 11 miles out of town and no horses nor a car." Lot taught at a little country school three miles away, walking there in weather that sometimes reached 40 degrees below zero. "We had a lot of fun out there," Sadie says, "but the winters were severe—and the thunder storms scared me to death. We got out of there after about a year."

Sadie and Lot taught school throughout their lives, Sadie for 21 years. She didn't retire completely until she was 71. Lot taught at Rockford, Rosalia and Cheney. He was the principal of Cheney Grade School under John C. Almack when Almack was superintendent of Cheney Schools, Sadie says. He had been teaching at Renton for 23 years when his health failed in 1940. He died in 1944.

Sadie says she is proud of their years of teaching. Many of her pupils still write her. "On my 92nd birthday," she says, "I got cards and letters from all over the United States and Hawaii—from my youngsters thanking me for what I did for them."

When it comes to talking about her life, Sadie says she doesn't know what to say. She doesn't know what might be important. "I'm getting on to 95 you know, and I don't feel so important anymore. But," she adds, "I still like a good time. I'm not ready to sit in a rocking chair."

A few weeks ago, Sadie sent Diane Showalter, Director of Alumni Relations, a picture of herself taken when she was 64 years old. "Being as I am 94 past," she wrote, "I don't look quite like that but I still smile." She signed the letter "Sadie Camp Peterson—94 years young."

Hochkeppel competes in Geneva

William Hochkeppel leans back in his chair and adjusts his glasses. On Aug. 29th, he will play the saxophone at a prestigious international competition in Geneva. A flood of impressions come at you: Youthful optimism, dogged determination, underlying anxiety.

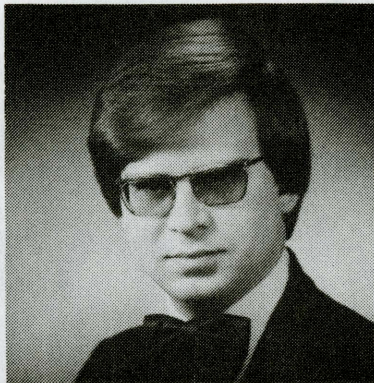

He is young—just 29—but in five years at Eastern, he has more than proved himself. As director of bands, he conducts a symphonic band, a marching band, a wind ensemble, a jazz ensemble and a lab band. And as a professor of saxophone and a competitive player, he has every reason to be confident. Since his graduation from Northwestern University, he has entered a dozen competitions, winning a national title in 1977 and making it to the semi-finals in an international competition in Gap, France, in 1978.

The Geneva competition, however, is the competition.

He sighs: Seven major musical works must be ready at all times. He has practiced so much, his lips are tender—a condition he can't afford. He worries: Perhaps he will sneeze or do the unimaginable—play a wrong note!— and be eliminated in the first round. All the time, energy and expense will have been for nothing.

But that's not the worst part.

This is the 39th International Competition for Musical Performers. The competition involves all aspects of musical performances — and it rotates. The saxophone competition only comes up every 13 years. And there are age limitations which vary according to the instrument. Sax players are only eligible between the ages of 15 and 30. That's right. Hochkeppel will be too old for the next competition. This is his one and only chance.

There's one other thing.

Although a first prize of 7,000 Swiss Francs may be awarded, the jury is under no obligation to award a first prize. The jury will only award a prize if the performance merits it. Hochkeppel says he doesn't know if they've ever awarded a first prize. In other words, Hochkeppel could go through three rounds, end up as one of the three finalists and not receive a prize. On the other hand, he says, "It might be a first."

Dr. James Edmonds, EWU professor of music, will serve as Hochkeppel's accompanist in Geneva. Edmonds, who has accompanied Hochkeppel for four years, is already in Europe on an annual vacation tour. The two men will meet in Zurich. They will have four days to prepare the two and one half hours of music required for the competition.

"I keep equating it to the pentathlon in the Olympics," Hochkeppel says. "it's a big job keeping all the works ready. And it's hard to play that much music as well as you'd like."

During the first round, two major works must be performed—and 200 contestants will be cut to ten. The second round is comprised of recitals that require players to perform four major works. In the third and final round, the three finalists will play a concert with full orchestra.

Hochkeppel says the real prize isn't the money—$3,000 American—but is the prestige and personal gratification that comes with winning such a competition. He will be competing against world class players. And a first or second prize could open other doors, he says.

There is one ironic twist to the Geneva competition that, while it shouldn't favor Hochkeppel, probably won't go against him either, Dr. Frederick Hemke, who is regarded as the leading saxophone virtuoso in the United States, will be on the international jury of eight judging the competition. Hochkeppel studied under Hemke at Northwestern. In fact, Hemke was his mentor.

Hochkeppel and Edmonds have scheduled a homecoming recital at 8 p.m., September 22. The recital is in honor of Edmond's mother who will be celebrating her 90th birthday. The recital is entitled "Music From Geneva" and will contain all of the music from the Geneva competition. "Hopefully, Hochkeppel says, "it will be a victorious work."

Sublett photographs show at Cheney Cowles Museum

Chris Sublett, after denying his heritage for 16 years, proved Thomas Wolfe wrong: He came home.

But that's an understatement.

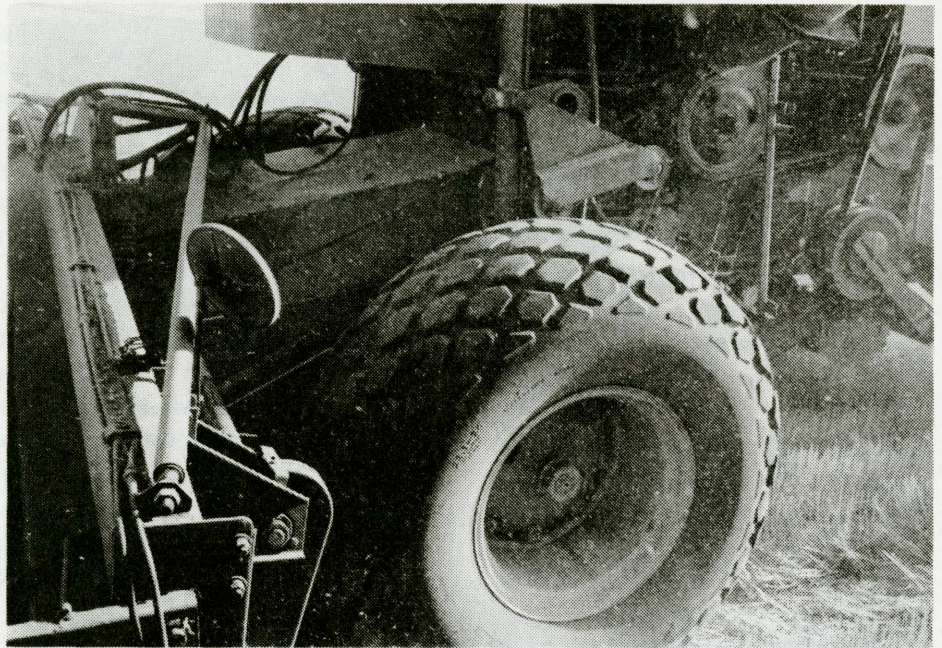

Sublett didn't just come home to the rolling hills and stark fields of the Columbia Basin country where he grew up—he became consumed by it.

Five years ago, Sublett began taking pictures on his father's land near Quincy, Wash. He didn't know anything about photography—he's a sculptor and an art teacher at EWU—but he decided to learn. "I had an idea," he says, "so I went out and taught myself."

That idea—and those pictures of the land—have become his life's work. "It will never be finished," he says. "I intend to spend the rest of my life at it. It's a major photographic work—the equivalent of a John Updike or a John Cheever novel—in the amount of time and volume of work."

Oddly enough, Sublett says he never thought much about the country where he grew up during the years he was away—attending college in California, graduate school in Michigan, teaching in Philadelphia and Richmond. And he may never have returned if Eastern hadn't offered him a teaching position in 1973. "But it was an integral part of me," he says, "even when I was denying it."

Sublett's photographs, mostly of the land, are done in a "documentary style." It is a style, he says, which captures the objective fact while presenting the aesthetic experience. Many people find his work disturbing, Sublett says, especially when he photographs people. "They're not portraits in the usual sense," he says. "They're pictures of people engaged in activities. And the anxiety is apparent. I don't know who they are. They are just people who were out there."

In five years, Sublett's work has achieved a certain degree of success—two shows in Cologne, Germany, sold out—and earned the respect of art and photography colleagues. Artist Robert Helm of Pullman, Wash., says: "What distinguishes his work is not his fidelity to the observed facts of a geographic location in Eastern Washington state, but rather his selections of facts that ultimately aim at rendering the feelings he has about this particular land."

This fall, Sept. 15 to Oct. 16, the Cheney Cowles Museum will present a show of 100 to 125 of Sublett's photographs. The show represents five year's work and encompasses Adams, Grant, Lincoln, Spokane and Whitman counties. A book containing 25 photographs and entitled "Five Counties" will also be available at the show.

Sublett intends to expand his work to include all of the counties in eastern Washington. He says it's an area that has been neglected too long. He photographs the land because it's here, he says.

"I've done it because I had to. I had to deal with this area. I could do still photography. And the other side of the mountains is prettier. But I'm trying to make a statement about this place. And only this place."

Business School develops five-year plan

Kingston Hall

As Eastern enters its second century, the School of Business approaches its fifth decade as a campus academic discipline with some 1500 students, 45 faculty members, prestigious national accreditation, influential advisors from the business community and a plan for program development that will carry the school to the end of the 1980s.

Started in 1941, when a major in economics and business was offered for the first time on the Cheney campus, Business has grown to become one of the largest schools at the university.

Today, there are nearly twice as many business majors as there were students at Eastern in the early 1940s, when the program began.

Dr. Philip Beukema, who assumed the position of dean in June 1982, is directing the school toward the future with the development of a five-year plan—the "1983-1988 Plan for Program and Resource Development."

"We put this plan together in a little more than four months," Beukema says. "That's working very fast, by academic standards—but it was possible through the efforts and support of our faculty and the Advisory Council."

The five-year plan calls for student computer literacy, an ongoing "Associates Program," stronger emphasis on communications skills, an internship office at EWU's new Spokane Higher Education Center and some reorganization of the school's programs and curriculum.

"More than a third of the recommended changes at the undergraduate level concern strengthening the school's academic programs in areas associated with computer technology," Beukema says.

The emphasis on computer literacy for students was prompted by recommendations from EWU's Business Advisory Council, a group of 25 corporate executives and owners who advise the dean and his staff on programs and policies.

Tri-Cities General Studies Program offers two degrees

"We're working with our advisory council to be aware of what the business community wants from us," Beukema says. "Our students aren't going to work just in Spokane and the immediate area. Surveys show that nearly 50 percent of our graduates are working outside Spokane—in Seattle, Los Angeles, Denver, wherever—five years after they graduate. We must prepare them to work in everything from large corporations to small businesses, from the Inland Empire to Taiwan."

Beukema and the advisory council are convinced that familiarity with computer systems and applications will be vital to tomorrow's business leaders. To accommodate that trend, the five-year plan recommends that eight to 16 credits in "management information systems" be added to the other degree concentrations the School of Business offers. The requirement that 50 percent of a student's course work be outside the school will remain, Beukema says.

In order to implement the plan, the business school will need additional faculty, new equipment and financial support. Several faculty members were added this fall. The necessary computer equipment and supplies; however, will cost an estimated $350,000 in the coming year. The total funding needed over the five-year life of the plan amounts to $1.5 million.

Beukema says the five-year plan was conceived as both a framework for the school's near-term development and a point of departure for what will be an ongoing planning process. Its success will depend heavily upon support from private sources, he says.

While state appropriations cover a major portion of the basics, they don't cover them all, Beukema says, nor do they provide dollars for program enhancement. The School of Business will embark on a major drive to secure a strong, regular base of support from the corporate community and alumni, he says.

The General Studies Program that opened in the Tri-Cities last spring will offer two degrees this fall: A General Studies degree with emphasis in human services and a General Studies degree with emphasis in administration.

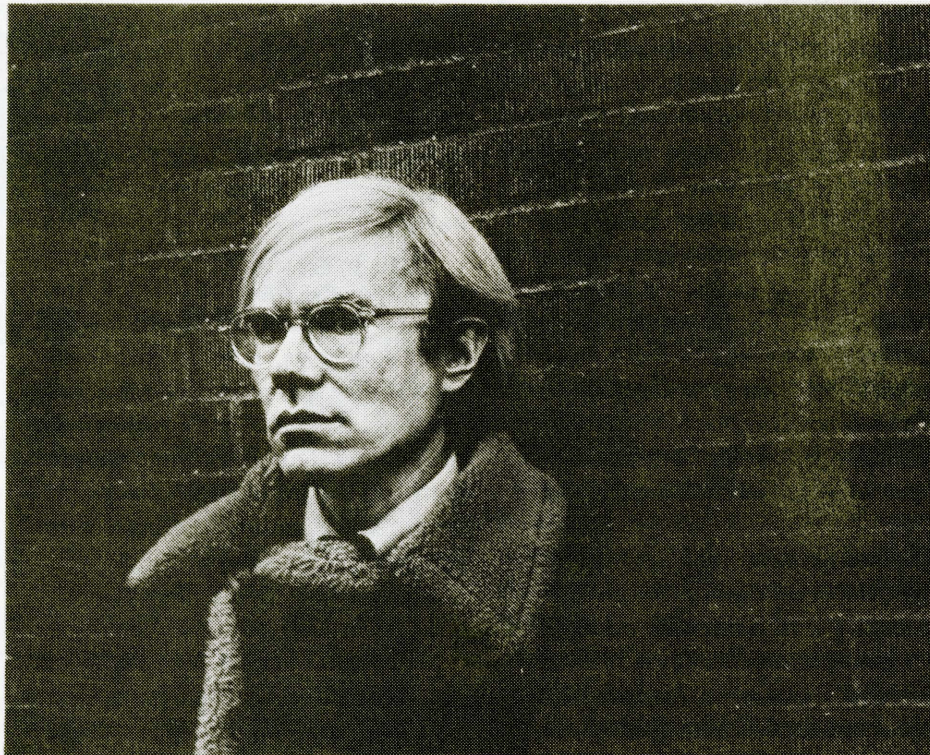

The General Studies Program, which is designed to allow adult learners to complete their undergraduate degrees, offers up to 30 university credits for life and career experience. It provides students who have completed, or are near completion of community college degree programs, with the flexibility to design course work suited to their individual needs.

Last spring, the 25 students who enrolled began the program with a portfolio evaluation course. Mitch Silver, assistant director, said most of the students enrolled are professionals involved in business, health services and government in the area. "We are expecting a greater demand and many more students to enroll this fall," he said.

Warhol exhibit here in September

Eastern's art gallery at the Higher Education Center in Spokane will open the fall season with an Andy Warhol exhibit entitled "Endangered Species." The exhibit, which is Warhol's latest suite of silk screen prints, is touring nationally with stops at the Museum of Natural History in New York, the Cleveland Museum and the San Diego Zoo. It will show here Sept. 17 through Oct. 28.

Gallery Director Richard Twedt said the Warhol exhibit is just the first of several national and international artists scheduled for the gallery this year. "This is the first time in Spokane history that major art and artists are going to be showing here," Twedt said, "and it's very exciting. Normally you would have to travel to Seattle or New York to see shows of this caliber."

Twedt said additional activities will be generated to complement each show. During the Warhol exhibit, for example, a collection of photographs taken by Peter Beard at the edge of the Nairobi game preserve of African endangered species will also be on display. KREM-FM is planning an Andy Warhol look-a-like contest. And a series of photographs will demonstrate the silk screen process. Twedt said the silk screen demonstration will show how a commercial process has been elevated to a fine art by Warhol.

Other shows in the schedule worth noting include: Robert Longo-Lithographs and Relief Sculpture, Nov. 11-Dec.30; Bronze Sculpture Figurative Exhibition: from Robert Graham to Bryan Hunt, Jan. 13-Feb. 23; and "Six Pop Artists" with works by Rosenquist, Lichtenstein, Oldenburg, Dine, Wesselman and Warhol, March 2-31. The shows are free. Gallery hours are 8 a.m.-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Saturday

Author returns to alma mata

Western author C.R. "Mick" Clumpner returned to Eastern's campus last May where he served as president of Associated Students more than 40 years ago. He spent his time here lecturing to creative writing classes and autographing books at Spokane bookstores.

A native of North Idaho, Clumpner worked at outdoor jobs in North Idaho and Northeastern Washington before graduating from Eastern in 1940. He ran a trapline along the North Fork of the Coeur d'Alene River and conducted snow measurements for the Bureau of Reclamation—which needed the data for the Grand Coulee and Bonneville Dam projects—in the 1930s. He was first published in Hunter-Trapper-Trader magazine in 1930. He now resides in Northern California.

Clumpner's novels, which are historical writings on the Western United States, include "Ketch Rope," "Six Who Died Young" and the newly-released "Nez Perce Legend." Clumpner was recently one of several alums honored for outstanding achievements by the EWU Tawankas. He was presented with a hard-bound edition of "The Centennial Album: An Illustrated History of Eastern Washington University."

New Dean of the School of Fine Arts Appointed

Dr. William Slater has been appointed dean of the School of Fine Arts and professor of radio-television at Eastern Washington University. The appointment was confirmed at a June meeting of the Board of Trustees. Slater will assume the position Sept. 15.

A distinguished scholar, educator and journalist, Slater has served as head of the Division of Broadcasting at the University of Cincinnati, assistant director of the School of Journalism at the University of Southern California and as assistant professor in the School of Communication at the University of Washington. Prior to the EWU appointment, he was head of the Department of Radio-Television at the University of Arizona. He holds a doctorate in communications from Stanford.

At age 41, Slater has a broad background in broadcast news. He was a news anchorman at WBZ Television in Boston, Washington bureau correspondent for Westinghouse Broadcasting and news director at WABQ-AM in Cleveland. He is listed in Who's Who Among Black Americans and has worked as a general assignment reporter for the Newark News and as editor of the Afro-American Newspaper of Newark.

Slater's award-winning reporting includes more than 150 major radio and television public affairs and documentary productions. His "Black Faces in White Halls," a one-hour program dealing with the problems of black performers who seek success in the classical arts, won a regional Emmy from the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

Slater replaces Dr. George Lotzenhiser who announced his retirement last winter after 22 years as dean of the School of Fine Arts.

Ethel Gould receives president's award for volunteer work

Ethel Bieber Gould of Carnation, Wash., has received the President's Volunteer Action Award for her work with senior citizens and Southeast Asian refugees. Since her retirement nine years ago, Gould has contributed 8,474 hours of service. She was one of 60 people cited out of 2,000 nominations nationwide.

Gould, who is 72, moved to Carnation shortly after graduating from Eastern Washington University in 1931. She taught elementary school for 22 years before retiring in 1974. Her volunteer work began when she started a hobby club where she taught needlepoint, hooked rugs and Christmas goodies. The club became so popular that teachers had to be imported. It is now the Sno-Valley Senior Center.

For the last several years, Gould has worked with Hmong refugees in the Snoqualmie Valley. She formed the Lower Snoqualmie Valley chapter of the American Association of University Women, which teaches English as a second language to the refugees. Although she has slowed down some, Gould still donates two or three hours a day to helping the Hmong.

EWU seeks names of alums killed in action

Eastern Washington University plans to honor students and graduates who were killed in action during World War I, World War II, the Korean Conflict and Vietnam. Four brass plaques (one for each war) will be engraved with the names of those killed and put on display in Showalter Hall.

The Military Science Department is conducting a search for names and requests that anyone knowing of an alum killed during any of the wars contact their office. Several names have been located. They are as follows:

Speaker's series successful

The Academy, Business, Community Program of Eastern Washington University brought three distinguished guest speakers to Spokane in 1983. Helmut Schmidt, former chancellor of West Germany, S. Kenneth Howard, executive director for the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations and Chuck Knox, head coach of the Seattle Seahawks, appeared before dinner and breakfast guests in the fourth annual speaker's series.

Schmidt, for eight years chancellor of West Germany, opened the series the evening of March 23. Speaking to a group of 200 dinner guests, Schmidt warned the audience of parallels between the Great Depression and today's world economic situation. He stressed, as he did during his chancellorship, the importance of a political partnership between Europe and the United States.

President H. George Frederickson presented the Benjamin P. Cheney medal to Schmidt, noting the prior recipients. Schmidt quipped that he was in excellent company in receiving the award since former president Gerald R. Ford and Kurt Waldheim, former Secretary-General of the United States, are fellow recipients.

Howard, executive director of the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, a consulting arm of the U.S. Congress, presented a breakfast address April 6. His address concerned the challenging topic "The Thinning of America's Capacity to Govern."

S. Kenneth Howard, Executive Director of the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations was interviewed by KREM Television's Sheila Detrick following his A-B-C appearance in Spokane last April. Detrick, who co-anchors the weekend news for channel 2 in Spokane, is completing her Master's degree in Public Administration at Eastern. KREM Chief cameraman Gary Brown, on the left, is a 1978 EWU graduate.

Coach Knox concluded the series at a breakfast in the Ridpath Hotel May 27. His subject, "The Winning Edge," is what Knox plans to have in his new position. Named head coach of the Seahawks in late January, Knox is one of the most successful active field generals in the game.

Information on speakers scheduled for the 1984 series will be published in a future issue of Perspective. Reservations for upcoming speakers can be made by calling (509) 359-2351 or 458-6237 toll-free from Spokane.

Tawankas honor alums for outstanding achievements

The Tawanka alumni organization has presented the hard-bound edition of "The Centennial Album: An Illustrated History of Eastern Washington University" to several alums in honor of their outstanding achievements. President Dorothy Terrell said the album was awarded to the following:

Ethel Bieber Gould '31, of Carnation, Wash., for receiving the Volunteer Action Award from President Reagan for 8,474 hours of volunteer work.

C.R. "Mick" Clumpner '40, Sabastapool, Calif., for his historical writings on the Western United States.

Mabel Stone, Elsie (Stone) Hartley and Ruth (Stone) Torgerson, of Spokane, Wash., in recognition of their father Wesley C. Stone, who was vice principal of Cheney Normal from 1892 to 1897.

Alma Helflin McCormack '33, of Apple Valley, Calif., for writing "Mary Makes a Choice," a book about a girl choosing Cheney Normal as her school. She was also the first woman to test planes for skydiving and is recognized in many states for her literary works.

Henry L. Reimers, '39, of Spokane, Wash., for his books and articles on Spokane Indians and territory.

Claude '33 and Catherine '33 Simpson, of Nordman, Idaho, for their literary works: "Africa Without Elephants," "North of the Narrows" and educational articles such as "Career Curriculum" at Washington State University.

A thank you from Tawanka

The Tawankas would like to thank everyone who contributed to the Tawanka Endowment fund through their pledge for the Centennial Album. Your support was appreciated by all of us and will be gratefully accepted by many students in the years to come.

Tawankas
Dorothy Terrell, president

USA Pageant opened new doors for Miss Washington

Reprinted by permission of Cheney Free Press
by Rod Everhart

Kathi Tucker's life won't be the same now that she has competed in the Miss U.S.A. beauty pageant, held May 12 in Knoxville, Tenn.

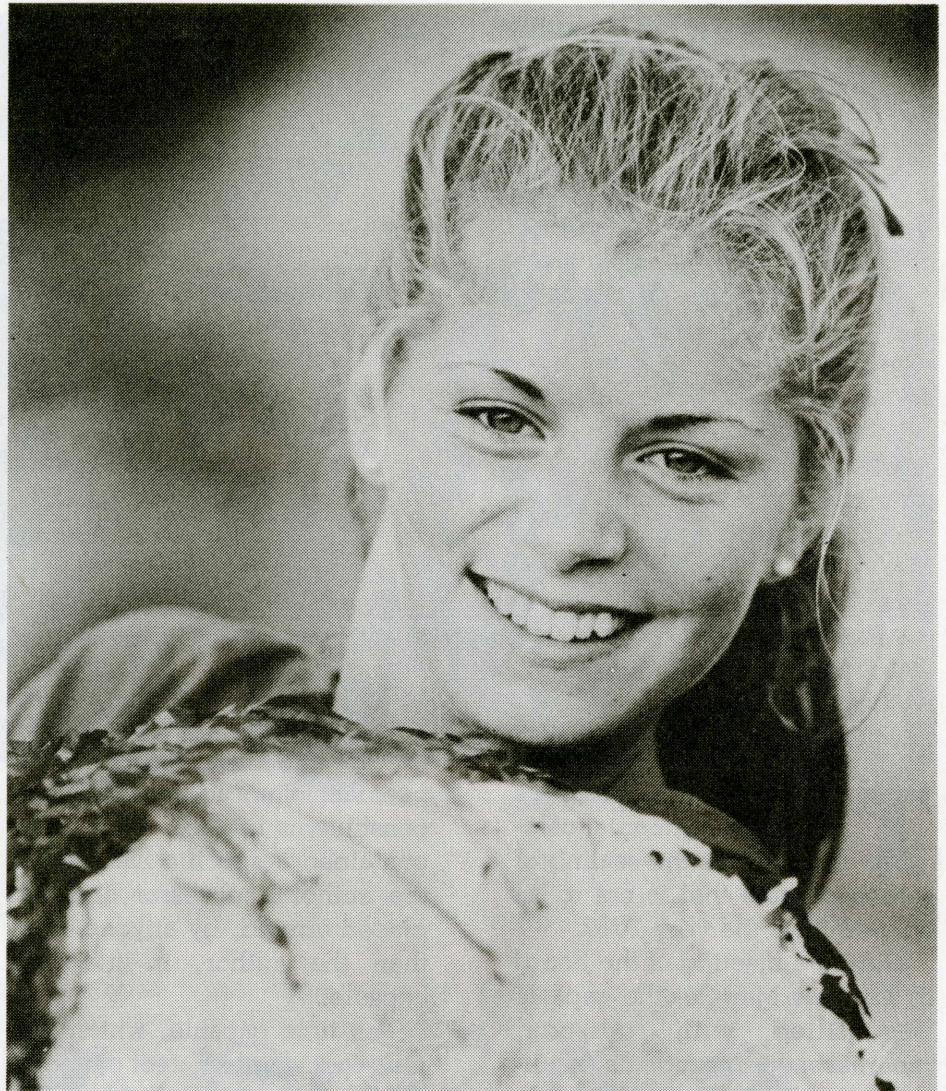

That appearance on international television, which earned her a spot as one of the top 12 finalists, opened doors to job opportunities and experiences that some young women never receive. The reigning Miss Washington and former Eastern Washington University business student already has received an offer to be a New York model and to represent Hawaiian Tropics, the suntan lotion company, in its public relations campaign.

Tucker may reject the modeling job because she thinks the New York pace is "too fast," saying she prefers to stay close to her Northwest home in Renton. The Hawaiian Tropics assignment, however, offers more appeal, she said, perhaps because she won second place in the pageant's swimsuit competition.

If none of those offers work out, however, Tucker still will remain a Sea Gal for the Seattle Seahawks, and she can continue modeling in Seattle and continue working for Bumstead-Woolford, a construction company.

Tucker, credits her good fortune, of course, to being selected Miss Washington and to competing in the Miss U.S.A. pageant, an experience she recommends to any young girl.

"They're (beauty pageants) a good growing experience for women today," Tucker told the Free Press in a recent telephone interview.

"It gives you a chance to grow. It's a good education process for women because it builds their confidence and makes them become ladies," she claimed. And, it opens many doors.

Looking ahead, Tucker said she will not return to EWU because of her Sea Gal commitments and new job. But college is still in her plans; Tucker wants to finish a degree in business communications.

For now, Miss Washington will take her life one step at a time.

"I'm stopping and smelling the roses, taking things day by day and enjoying life," Tucker says.

Time capsule rests in Governor's Grove

Associated Students President Gina Hames, President H. George Frederickson and Board of Trustees Chairwoman Eleanor Chase place their contributions in the time capsule.

The last event in Eastern's year-long centennial celebration was the sealing of a time capsule that is not to be opened until the year 2082.

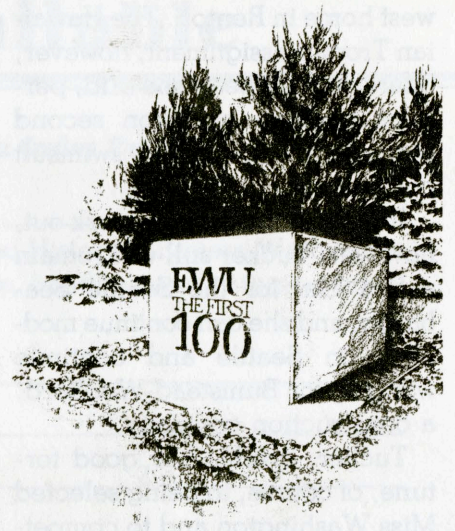

During a meeting of the Board of Trustees May 26, the capsule was filled with personal reminiscences of students, faculty and administrators, photographs and memorabilia. Publications and information cataloguing the university's first 100 years were also included.

President H. George Frederickson, Board of Trustees Chairwoman Eleanor Chase, Associated Students President Gina Hames, Faculty Organization President Lula Schroder, Employees Union President Gene Spooner and Alumni Association President Ray Liberg contributed personal letters addressed to their constituents in 2082. Each letter contained a specific message to the author's successor and was placed unread, by anyone other than the author, in the time capsule.

The time capsule, which is a nine-foot stainless steel cylinder, now rests in a specially-designed concrete monolith in the Governor's Grove near the Central Mall.

The monolith was designed by Kenneth Severud, a senior from Kennewick, Wash. It is five feet square, contains seven yards of concrete and is emblazoned with Eastern's centennial logo. Severud's design was selected from 23 blueprints submitted last spring. Construction of the monolith was completed by physical plant workers at Eastern.

The concrete monolith designed by Kennewick senior Kenneth Severud to house the Centennial Time Capsule was fabricated by Physical Plant workers. Five feet square, the block features bair relief renderings of Eastern's Centennial logo.

EWU President to Head Washington's United Nations Day Observation

Dr. H. George Frederickson Calls for Communities to Participate

Eastern Washington University President Dr. H. George Frederickson has been appointed Washington State Chairman for the 1983 observance of United Nations Day by Governor John Spellman.

UN Day, set for October 24, will commemorate the 38th anniversary of the United Nations.

In announcing UN Day plans for Washington State, Frederickson stressed the importance of the United Nations as the best possible means available for the resolution of global problems.

In the United States, more than 1,000 communities are expected to participate in the nationwide observance. Frederickson said he is requesting that mayors throughout Washington appoint local UN Day chairpersons to work with the statewide committee on the celebration.

Frederickson noted that the 1983 UN Day observation will focus on current United Nations issues with important domestic implications: World Communications year, racism and racial discrimination and United States participation in the UN.

Eastern, which has had long-standing student involvement in the Model United Nations program, hosted former UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim as its Centennial Commencement speaker in the spring of 1982.

Continuing Education in International Studies

International Study Tour for Nurses with Dr. Betty Ohrt and Professor Dorothy Kellmer — a 15 day European study tour for nurses — $1,946.50 — October 11-25 1983.

This unusual European tour may be taken for University credit or WSNA C.E. contact hours.

The tour departs Seattle for London, October 11. It includes a five-day luxury cruise on the Rhine/Moselle Rivers and visits to Belgium, Holland and Germany. Joint seminars with nurses and visits to health care agencies in host countries contribute to historical and current perspectives in nursing decision making. Special interest visits to health care sites will be arranged.

Dr. Ohrt, Associate Dean of Health Sciences at EWU, has worked with a variety of cultural groups: as nurse governess in Australia, a missionary nurse in India and a nurse educator with the World Health Organization.

Professor Kellmer, Associate Professor and Clinical Coordinator at the Intercollegiate Center for Nursing Education, Spokane, Washington, is a graduate of Deaconess Hospital School of Nursing in Spokane. She holds a Master of Science degree in nursing from the University of Maryland. She has an active interest in the decision making process of nurses.

This uncommon experience is co-sponsored by the Intercollegiate Center for Nursing Education and Eastern Washington University. This class is listed as Nursing 499 — International Study for two credits at $75 tuition or 35 WSNA C.E. Contact Hours for tuition of $45.

For more information concerning Health Science Study programs contact Dr. Betty Ohrt, Eastern Washington University, Division of Health Sciences, Cheney, Washington 99004, or call 509-458-6210. For more information concerning itinerary for the tour/cruise and a free brochure, contact All About Travel/Ship Shape Cruises, 100 South Ninth Street, Tacoma, Washington 98402 or call (toll-free) 1-800-652-3447 Washington, 1-800-426-6008 USA.

EWU Alumni Hawaii Package

Join EWU Alumni and friends for fun in the sun. Spend January 2-9, 1984 enjoying Waikiki golden sands and tropical moons. Imagine the sound of the surf as you're sitting beneath the palm trees.

Your Alumni Association offers you the following one week Hawaii dream package for $589 per person:

- Round trip air fare from Seattle
- 7 nights lodging at the Beachfront Sheraton Moana Hotel
- Lei greeting upon arrival in Honolulu
- Round trip hotel transportation
- Baggage handling
- Transfers and taxes

- Complimentary tickets to the Hawaii Women's basketball tournament (The EWU Women's Basketball Team will compete in this tournament January 5, 6, and 7th and welcome their Alumni boosters)

Since the Sheraton Moana Hotel was the first hotel on the beach, it is the prime location for your 'home base' while in Waikiki. The International Market Place and King's Alley Shopping Mall are right across the street. Within a block and a half are thirteen international restaurants, nine intimate lounges and lots of great entertainment. Every evening the famed Banyan Court explodes with the excitement of the Moana

Hotel Polynesian Revue, the best show in Waikiki.

Your deposit of $50 per person is due October 1, 1983. Payment in full should be made by November 16, 1983.

Early Birds will lock in air fares. Traditionally as the temperature drops, air fare to Hawaii goes up. Make your trip payment early to lock in this low, low price. package prices are subject to change due to air fare fluctuation.

For more information, call the EWU Alumni office at 509-458-6237 (from Spokane) or 359-2351.

Library has "Quickfacts" service

The University Library now has access to an on-line service called "Quickfacts" from the Washington Library Network. The service, revised twice a week, provides a status report on most bills before the Washington Legislature. House and Senate bills are described by a short phrase or title, as well as the appropriate bill number, and recent action is indicated. The latest reports are posted across from the reference desk on the main floor. Copies of the bill are also on file.

Postal presort program saves money

The campus post office instituted the mail presort program in November, 1981, to save the university money. The presort program affects the entire campus but applies only to letters addressed to destinations within Washington.

Presort means just what the name implies. All mail addressed to designations within Washington is presorted by zip code before going to the Cheney Post Office. In order to qualify for the presort rate, we must have a certain volume (500 pieces minimum) and a certain number of pieces for different zip code breakdowns. This means that letters addressed within the state may be held one day, at times, to accumulate the necessary volume.

The presort rate costs three cents less per letter. From November, 1981, to November, 1982, this program saved the university $12,074.08.

Homecoming 1983

October 15, 1983 the Eastern Eagles will meet Montana Tech for the Annual Homecoming game. A full day's activities are planned for Homecoming and we invite all EWU Alumni to return to campus to share in the festivities.

The day will begin with the Second Annual Homecoming Fun Run. Immediately following the run will be the traditional Homecoming Parade.

A 12 o'clock Champagne Brunch is planned for all Alumni and friends. A 1:30 kick-off is scheduled with Montana Tech at Woodward Field.

The traditional Homecoming Ball will begin at 9:00 p.m. in the Isabella Room at the Davenport Hotel in Spokane. An Alumni Hospitality room will be available at the Hotel.

Numerous reunions are in the planning stages. A silver anniversary reunion for the Class of 1958 is planned. In addition the Fort Lewis Alumni group will once again gather at the Davenport. Reunions are also planned for former members of the sororities and fraternities on campus and there will be a gala reunion of the 1958 Football Team.

If anyone would like to help plan or host a reunion, please contact the Alumni office.

We Need Your Help

Homecoming 1983 will be held October 15 on the Cheney campus. Honor class for the Homecoming reunion is the Silver Anniversary Class of 1958. In an effort to locate as many members of the class of '58 as possible we are publishing a list of 1958 graduates taken from the Registrar's records. Many of the graduates have other years of graduation listed as well, when they received other degrees or certificates.

The graduates are listed in three categories: 1) good addresses on file, 2) deceased and 3) lost addresses. Please help us to upgrade our records by checking the list and notifying the Alumni office of any current information you may have about these graduates.

We apologize in advance for any errors in the list and thank you for taking the time to help us to correct them.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Alumni Scholarships Awarded

The Eastern Washington University Alumni Association annually awards eight $300 scholarships to entering and/or continuing students. Scholarship recipients are selected on the basis of academic excellence, career and educational goals, activities and demonstrated leadership.

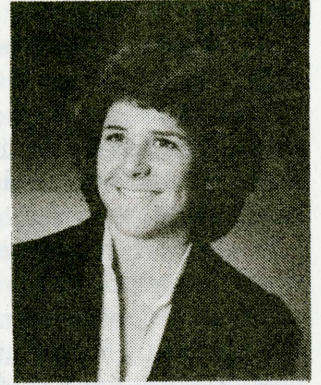

This year's recipients are Jana Clark of Wilbur, Wash., a primary education major with special emphasis in reading skills; Richard Dalke of Spokane, who is working toward a master of science degree in counseling; Suzanne Gillingham of Renton, Wash. a nursing major; Kimlien Thi Hoang of Seattle, who is studying dental hygiene; James R. Hosking of Republic, Wash., a business administration major with plans to go on to law school; Patti Jones of East Wenatchee, who plans to enter the field of medicine, preferably sports medicine; Kimberly Smith of Spokane, an education major; and Kathy Yedica of Spokane, who is majoring in business.

The Alumni Association looks forward to welcoming these outstanding students to Eastern.

First Rippeteau scholarships awarded

Susan B. Lundquist of Spokane has been selected as the first recipient of the James J. Rippeteau Memorial Scholarship. Lundquist is a second-year graduate student in Applied Psychology and is working toward a master of science degree in developmental psychology. She will receive an award of $500.

Rippeteau came to Cheney in 1897. He was the third principal of the Cheney Normal School and served at a time when the legislature was threatening to abolish the school. Funding for the school was not assured until 1899—after Rippeteau had resigned to attend graduate school at Stanford University.

The $10,000 memorial scholarship was recently established by Rippeteau's daughter, Corrine Howard of St. John, Wash. It will be awarded annually.

The President's Scholars Program selects twenty

The President's Scholars Program has been developed in an effort to expand EWU's ongoing and longstanding commitment to academic excellence, by identifying and awarding the scholastically meritorious.

In the past, most financial aid available to students has been based almost solely on economic circumstances. Recognizing the need to assist those students who exhibit outstanding academic performance regardless of financial need, the program will award full tuition and fees to 20 deserving students each year.

Glenn Fehler, director of admissions, has announced that 17 incoming freshmen and five transfer students have been selected as President's Scholars for the 1983-84 year. The freshman recipients are: David J. Osborn, North Central High School; Tracey Barbier, Fort Vancouver High School; Patricia Bor-de-ville, Columbia River High School, Vancouver, Wash.; Lisa Brooks, Leavenworth High School; Shawn Collins, Mead High School; Carolyn Ferguson, Cheney High School; Julie Gibbs, Evergreen High School; Jinger Higgenbotham, Lake Roosevelt High School; Joyce McLachlan, Ferris High School; Denise Slomian, Redmond High School; Ingrid Dearnore, Cascade High School; Melanie Rae Bruggink, East Valley High School, Yakima, Wash.; Tammy Johnsen, West Valley High School; Kelly Jo Dixon, Oroville High School; Shelli K. Ohler, Central Valley High School; Greg Kimpson, West Valley High School; and Jeff Enzler, Moses Lake High School.

The transfer students are: Robin C. Anyan, Spokane Community College; E. Ann Gonzalez, Wenatchee Valley Community College; Linda Goodman, Spokane Falls Community College; Gina L. MacDonald, Walla Walla Community College; and Ann M. Robertson, Fort Steilacoom Community College.

Business students receive scholarships

LeeAnn Starovasnick of Bellevue, Wash., and Dawn Kuder of Spokane will receive full tuition for the 1983-84 year through a gift to the School of Business from Seattle businessman and Eastern alum James E. Garland.

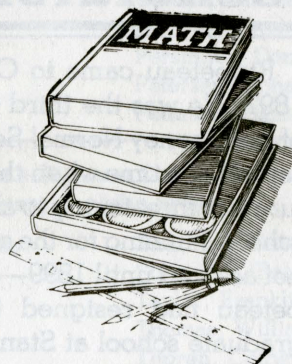

Garland, formerly of Concrete, Wash., is an investment broker in the Seattle area and a 1972 graduate. He has donated scholarships to business students for the last three years, giving full tuition to three students in both 1981 and 1982.

General university scholarships established

EWU has established a General University Scholarship to honor junior and senior students who demonstrate outstanding scholastic ability and participate in a variety of activities. Rodney Fazzari, a mathematics/computer science major from Walla Walla, Wash., has been named as the first recipient of the award. He will receive $500.

The General University Scholarship will be given annually. Applications should be made during Spring Quarter. For more information, contact the Student Services office.

Seafirst Foundation gives minority scholarship

Anita Louise Vigil of Harrah, Wash., has been selected to receive a Seafirst Foundation Minority Scholarship in the amount of $1,500. Vigil attended White Swan High School where she excelled in sports and achieved numerous academic honors. She is a member of the National Honor Society, served as 1982 Homecoming Queen and was named Top Female Athlete. Her awards include the United States Achievement Academy and the Yakima Indian Nation Incentive Award. She will begin her studies at EWU this fall.

The Seafirst Foundation gives the minority scholarship on an annual basis to recipients who demonstrate financial need and academic potential. The scholarship may be renewed three times providing renewal criteria is met. The student must maintain a minimum grade point average, have full-time student status in a Washington state college or university and make satisfactory progress toward a college degree. A one-year leave of absence is allowed.

Tawanka presents first awards for Permanent Endowment Fund

Seniors Jill Nessly and Pam Shaffer will be the first Eastern students to receive scholarships from the Tawanka Permanent Endowment Fund, president Dorothy Terrel said. They will receive full tuition for one quarter.

Nessly, a University High School graduate, is majoring in speech communications and works at the Willow Springs restaurant while attending school. She is a member of Campus and Young Adult Ministries and student assistant to the campus pastor of the Emmanuel Lutheran Church in Cheney.

Shaffer attended Spokane Falls Community College before coming to EWU. She is majoring in journalism and works as a reporter for KPBX, the public radio station in Spokane.

Tawanka was organized in 1926 and has given scholarships since 1932, with the exception of two years during the war. The scholarships have ranged from $25 to $538. The Permanent Endowment Fund was recently established through proceeds from the sale of the Centennial Album.

During the early years of the college, Tawanka, which was the women's service organization, worked with the men's Tomahawk organization to greet visitors, host events and promote interest in all activities. The Spokane alumni, organized in 1935, now has 309 active members from 21 states, 83 of which are in the Spokane area group.

Four receive Killin scholarships

The Killin Scholarship Committee has selected four students to receive Killin scholarships, chairman Grant Smith said. The Killin Scholars for 1983-84 are Debbie Gower, Riverside High School; Colleen Rowley, Shadle Park High; Mark McGee, Marysville-Philchuck High School; and Pamela Ziobro, Kamiakin High School. They will receive full tuition plus $50 per quarter.

The Killin scholarships were established in honor of Professor Orland Killin, who died Aug. 29, 1981. Killin attended Cheney Normal School and Eastern Washington College of Education, where he distinguished himself as a football player in 1941. He began his teaching career at Eastern in 1953, becoming chairman of the Industrial Education and Technology Department. Several scholarships will be given in his name each year.

Pence scholar selected

The Alumni Scholarship Committee has selected Lisa Brooks, a graduate of Leavenworth High School, to receive a $200 Pence scholarship. Brooks is working toward a degree in psychology and plans to take pre-law courses as well.

Lisa Brooks

Omer Pence was director of extension and placement at Eastern until his retirement in 1955. The memorial scholarship was established in his name by his son, Clarence O. Pence, in 1963. The scholarship is awarded annually.

Dale Wilson's gift

For most of his life, Dale Wilson lived quietly and simply on a farm in Davenport, Wash. People who knew him say he was a small, rather unimportant-looking man, and eccentric. But over the years he invested his money—in farming, stocks and a ranch. And by the time he moved to Spokane in 1963, he was a millionaire.

Wilson lived on the top floors of the Davenport Hotel. And he visited the campus of Eastern Washington University, looking, he said, for someone to discuss money matters with. Al Odgon, financial aid director at the time, said Wilson began his generosity to the college by hiring students as companions and chauffeurs. He went from hiring students to giving them scholarships.

When Wilson died in his early ninties, he didn't forget Eastern Washington University. Ten percent of the interest from all his assets was given directly to Eastern through a trust fund. In 1982 and 1983 along, more than $50,000, which included 38 full-tuition scholarships, was received from the Wilson estate.

And Wilson didn't confine his generosity to Eastern. Many other educational institutions in the area have benefited from his contributions. Many students have been given opportunities they wouldn't have otherwise received. Dale Wilson should be remembered for the gift he gave so many—the gift of education.

New nursing scholarship offered

The Vercheres LaRocque Nursing Scholarship was established by LaRocque's family in honor of her one hundred years of life. It will be awarded to an EWU nursing student who is of junior, senior or graduate standing with a GPA of 3.0 or better.

Vercheres LaRocque

As a young woman, LaRocque came from Joliette, Quebec, to Rathdrum, Idaho, where she met and married her lumberjack husband. She cooked in Idaho logging camps for many years before moving to Spokane where she ran a boarding house. Her last years were spent in a nursing home. The scholarship has been designated for nursing students because of the excellent care she received there.

Only the interest will be awarded for this scholarship. If you would like to contribute to the scholarship you may do so by addressing it to the EWU Foundation and specifying that it is for the Vercheres LaRocque Scholarship.

First Interstate Bank awards scholarship

Craig Alan Walter, a graduate of North Central High School, will receive a $1,500 scholarship from the First Interstate Bank of Washington Foundation. He will begin his studies at Eastern this fall and plans to major in business/computer science.

The foundation give four awards annually to students who demonstrate academic achievement in business, finance or economics. The recipient must be an incoming freshman in need of financial assistance. Washington State University, Whitworth College and Gonzaga University will also select a student to receive the award.

The Red Reese Endowed Scholarship

William Bryan (Red) Reese has been the giant of the first century of athletic history at Eastern Washington University.

A native of Missouri who graduated from Washington State University, Reese served Eastern for 31 years between 1930 and 1964. He compiled an extraordinary coaching record in three sports and performed double duty as athletic director for more than two decades.

The performing arena in the Special Events Pavilion and an adjoining conference room were dedicated as Reese Court and the Reese Room in his honor September 27, 1980. Shortly afterward, many of his former athletes and other alumni banded together to form the Reese Memorial Endowed Scholarship.

Led by co-directors Kathleen Kennedy and Richard Maurstad, the fund committee is building an endowment from gifts of cash, appreciated securities, or property to provide financial assistance for athletes in football, basketball and track and field, the sports in which

Reese made his mark.

Recipients of the scholarship for the 1982-83 academic year were Mark Cordes of Spokane, Eric Kick of Everett and Greg Vandenberg of Stevenson.

Recipients of the scholarship for 1983-84 academic year are Tim Floyd of Othello, Ken Riesen of Kettle Falls, and Steve Jackson of Vancouver.

Killin Spring Football Scrimmage huge success

The second annual Killin Spring Football Scrimmage May 14 was a huge success. The 2 p.m. intersquad scrimmage in Woodward Stadium drew 1500 people and 375 tickets were sold for the lobster dinner and dance which followed at 4 p.m. in Albers Court.

Athletic director Ron J. Raver called the event "fantastically successful" and said the athletic department was already looking forward to next spring, when they intend to use the event as the conclusion to the spring fund drive for the Eastern Eagles Athletic Association.

The Killin Spring Football Scrimmage, Lobster Dinner and Dance was established to honor Orland Killin, an EWU football letterman, professor, faculty representative and faculty president. A portion of the proceeds go toward the faculty academic scholarship which professor Killin established and now bears his name. This year's scrimmage contributed $2,000 to the scholarship program.

The athletic department would like to thank everyone who attended and supported this event. Special thanks go to that Chef Ordinaire, Tony Carpine, for cooking the live Maine lobster.

A belated thanks and recognition is also in order for those who attended and supported the first annual Killin scrimmage in 1982. Our apologies for omitting their names in the list of donors in the fall issue of Perspective. The names of the donors to both the 1982 and 1983 scrimmage are listed below.

Football Outlook

Not only will the Eastern Washington University football team carry an eight-game winning streak into its 1983 schedule, easily the most difficult in the university's 101-year history, but the Eagles will welcome the most talented group of incoming freshman players ever seen on the Cheney campus.

Coach Dick Zornes heads into his fifth season confident that Eastern is well on the way toward developing its own talent for the future.

As schedules have increased in difficulty, Zornes and his staff have had to lean heavily on transfers to shore up potential deficiencies. However, a stream of winning records and success against quality opponents have begun to pay off in recruiting accomplishments.

The first large crop of scholarship freshmen came to Eastern last fall. Many of them will see their first varsity action during the 1983 schedule which opens with a Sept. 10 date in Idaho against Boise State, the 1981 Division I-AA national champion.

The second large group includes several players who will be expected to step right into prominence.

Among players signed by Eastern last spring are all-state defensive backs Garrick Redden (Kernewick) and Jim Castleberry (Richland), all-state running back Chris Isaacson (Oak Harbor) and small school all-stater Mike Zuber, a defensive lineman from North Mason.

Redden is one of the finest recruiting catches in Eastern history.

A free safety, the 5-11, 175-pound star became a High School All-American after intercepting 13 passes last fall. He also starred at quarterback and was Big Nine Conference Defensive Player of the Year for Kamiakin High School.

Castleberry starred for Hanford High School. Isaacson was the top runner in the state last fall, gaining 1,533 yards. Another recruit, running back-linebacker Tim Floyd of Othello, was one of Isaacson's top challengers. Floyd gained 1,380 yards and he is a two-time state wrestling champion, too.

The group of transfers enrolled for spring quarter is headed by defensive end Frank Sheldon, a powerful three-time former letterman at University of Utah.

Other key newcomers are defensive tackle Leroy Walters, offensive guard Mark Walton, center Terry O'Leary, quarterback Steve White and offensive tackle Ed Kuharski.

Walters, originally recruited by EWU, has been a star for Pacific Lutheran. Walton was a 1982 Junior College All-American for Walla Walla Community College's state championship team. O'Leary also starred at Walla Walla. White played at Walla Walla and Nevada-Las Vegas after a fine career at Kamiakin High School. Kuharski was an all-conference player for Spokane CC last fall.

Returning standouts include defensive tackle Chet Bridger, offensive tackle Jeff Kupp, cornerback Jerry Kaiser, strong safety Mark Puyear, outside linebacker Jeff Metter, tailbacks Craig (Goose) Givens and Jeff Haack and full-back Joe Kniffen.

Bridger is a three-year starter from Sunnyside where he and Kupp were highschool teammates. Puyear, who missed spring practice with a broken leg, is a three-year starter, too.

As spring practice drew to a close, Zornes indicated that the Eagles again will have a strong running attack in 1983.

"We'll have an outstanding offensive line and we have a lot of good, young backs," Zornes said. "Our quarterbacks are throwing well, but we'll need better work at wide receiver to be the kind of passing threat we'd like to be."

The former Eastern star also expects good work from his starting defensive line and the starting secondary. However, additional help will be sought for the defensive backfield, wide receiver and middle linebacker.

"There's no question in my mind that Eastern has never had a better collection of athletes on its football team," Zornes said. "At the same time, we've never faced a tougher schedule. We'll have a good football team, but the quality of our depth will determine how successful we'll be."

Women Sign Four

Women's basketball coach Bill Smithpeters has signed four high school seniors to letters of intent for the 1984 season. The quartet of prospective freshmen is led by Arlington High School star Brenda Souther, the 1982 Class AA state tournament player of the year. Souther, a 6-2 post player, averaged 23.2 points and 17.7 rebounds last winter. The other recruits are Jackee (GeeGee) Goble of Monitor, Chris Cerna of Connell and Kris Karnes of Bonners Ferry, ID. Goble starred for Cashmere High School. Cerna was most valuable player on the Connell team which finished second in the State A Tournament with a 25-1 record.

Attention Portland Alumni The Eagles are coming to Town

November 19th the EWU Eagles play Portland State at 7 p.m. in Civic Stadium. We've arranged a pre-game get-together for EWU Alumni and friends with the Portland State Viking Athletic Association. You're invited to join us at Portland State University Nordicland, in Smith Memorial Center at 1825 S.W. Broadway in Portland for pre-game rivalry and fun. There will be a 5-6:30 p.m. buffet and program. Join the EWU Cheerleaders, Athletic Association and others to let the Vikings know we're there! Park at Portland State and take the free round-trip buses to the game. Door prizes, pre-game boasts, renewed friendships make this a must for your fall calendar.

We do need a count for the buffet, so please let the Alumni office know you're coming. Price will be approximately $6 for adults and $3 for children. Call your friends and get a group together and write us or call the office at 509-359-2351 to get in on the fun. Game time — 7 p.m. EWU Reserved Seating Area.

EWU Eagles Attack Idaho Vandals — Be There

EWU Alumni in the Moscow area are invited to join the Eagle Athletic Association for pre-game fun at Cavanaugh's in Moscow, October 1 from 5 to 6:30 p.m. Let's let the Vandals know we're in town. Call your friends and come to Cavanaugh's, Lewis Room. Door prizes, hors d'oeuvres, cheerleaders and old friends will make this a great beginning for the Eagle-Vandal game. Game time — 7:30 p.m.

Coach Honored

Jack Cleghorn, a 1969 EWU graduate, was honored recently as Class AA boys basketball coach of the year in Oregon. Coaches in all sports were acclaimed at the Oregon High School Athletic Association banquet. Cleghorn led LaSalle High School of Milwaukie to the state championship for the second time in three years. David Thompson, a 6-9 center who is an EWU basketball recruit, starred for LaSalle.

Gavin Moves

Former football star Greg Gavin, who enjoyed a pair of successful five-year tenures as football coach at West Valley and Central Valley High Schools in the Spokane area, will direct the gridiron fortunes of Davis High School in Yakima this fall. A center, Gavin was an NAIA All-American at Eastern. He led West Valley to a state Class AA championship and was voted Coach of the Year in the Greater Spokane League last season.

Hot Bats

Senior outfielder Alex Podruzny (Wanham, Alta.) and sophomore designated hitter-catcher Bill Karwacki (Moses lake) were the leaders in the race for the Pac-10 Conference batting championship as the 1983 baseball season came to a close. The two sluggers shared the EWU lead in home runs and were joining one-season leaders in several offensive categories while running ahead of batters in both the Northern Division and the Southern Division of the Pac-10.

Five Recruits

Two high school seniors and a trio of outstanding junior college players have signed letters of intent to join the EWU men's basketball team for its first season of Division I competition. Coach Jerry Krause has announced the signing of David Thompson, a 6-9 center from Milwaukie, OR, and Michael Parker, a 6-1 guard from Chicago, along with transfers John Randa, Scott McKie and Jerry Taylor.

Thompson averaged 20.1 points and 11.6 rebounds as Oregon's Class AA player of the year, sparking LaSalle High School to the state championship. Parker was a Class A all-starter in Illinois, averaging 12.5 points, 6.9 rebounds, eight steals and 4.5 assists.

Randa, from Surrey, B.C., starred as a power forward for two seasons at North Idaho College. He averaged 16 points and 13 rebounds last winter. McKie was a 14-point scorer for Mount Hood CC. the son of EWU grad and former basketball coach Ernie McKie, he makes his home in West Linn, OR. Taylor comes from Scottsdale CC in the Phoenix area where he averaged 13.9 points and 7.8 rebounds on a team which posted a 28-4 record.

"These are the kind of players who will help us do well against tougher competition," Krause said. "The three transfers will help us compete right away. Thompson and Parker represent outstanding investments in our future."

Sure Shots

EWU earned its second appearance in the NCAA Rifle Championships this spring and the Eagle turned in a strong showing led by sophomore Launi Meili of Cheney. Eastern finished seventh of eight teams in air rifle competition and eighth in small bore at Xavier University March 18-19 in Cincinnati. EWU had the only nonscholarship team among the final eight in each category. There were 93 schools competing in the NCAA this year. Meili finished sixth nationally in small bore, scoring 1,158 from 1,200 shots.

Scholar-Athletes

Four-year basketball letter-winner Sue Karstetter (Spokane) tennis standout Michele Ratigan (Ephrata) and all-around track performer Marie Cronrath (Odessa) of EWU have received scholar-athlete awards from the Mountain West Athletic Conference. The award requires a cumulative grade point average of 3.30.

Eagle Basketball records set

Junior forward Matt Piper not only became the most successful reserve player in the history of Eastern Washington University men's basketball, but he also ended up setting records and reigning as the leading scorer for the 1983 season which ended, just short of a playoff berth.

Piper appeared in all but one game and started only once. Nonetheless the energetic 6-5 blond from tiny Roy, Washington, scored 373 points and averaged 13.8 points per game to outfinish teammate John Bell in both categories.

Piper poured in 17 of 21 free throws Dec. 28 in the opening round of the Chico Invitational Tournament despite a 66-64 overtime loss to Humboldt State to set one record. He sank a record 145 free throws from 180 attempts during the season, hitting 80.6 percent of his charity shots. He also averaged 4.5 rebounds.

Bell, a senior from Portland, averaged 13.3 points per game and led the Eagles with 231 rebounds for an average of 8.9 per game.

EWU concluded its season with a 17-11 record. The Eagles were 6-4 in the standings of the unofficial Great Northwest Conference, a scheduling alliance among Division II schools. Puget Sound won the title with an 8-2 record after the Loggers handed Eastern its only Reese Court defeat of the winter, 57-56, Feb. 12.

Piper joined Robin Marshall of Seattle Pacific and Doug Harris of Central Washington on the Division II All-District 8 second team. He also finished second to Marshall in balloting for most valuable player while earning a spot on the All-Great Northwest Conference quintet.

Fay Zwarych, junior forward from Vernon, B.C., and sophomore guard Lisa Comstock established one-season records for the women's basketball team last winter.

Zwarych became the most productive one-season shooter in EWU history, putting in 509 points for an 18.9 average. Both were records. Comstock handed out a record 159 assists. The former West Valley High School star from Spokane also scored 334 points.

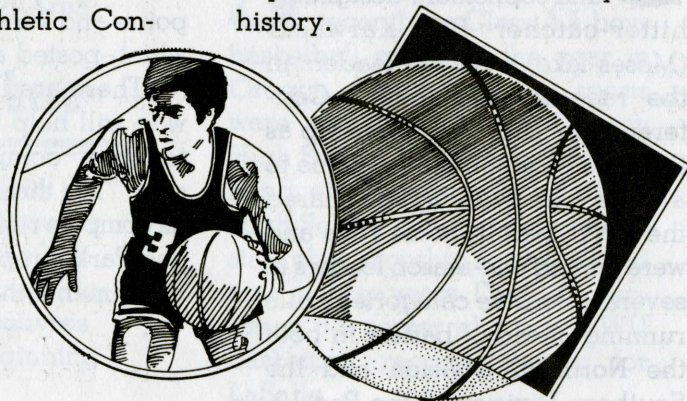

Eastern, starting three sophomores, one junior and a freshman, finished with an 11-16 record. The Eagles were 5-9 in Mountain West Athletic Conference competition.

Puskarich joins athletic staff

Tom Puskarich of Fresno, Calif., has joined Eastern's athletic staff as assistant athletic director of promotions. A graduate of Fresno State with a master's degree from Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, Puskarich is an experienced coach, fund-raiser and administrator. Prior to coming to Eastern he spent seven years at Firebaugh High School near Fresno where he served as assistant principal, athletic director and baseball coach.

Puskarich's appointment completed a restructuring of Eastern's athletic department. Part of that restructuring included bringing Sports Information Director Jim Price, formerly associated with EWU News Services in Showalter Hall, into offices within the athletic complex. Puskarich, Price, athletic business manager Kerry Moxey, the athletic directors and coaches, are now all headquartered in the athletic complex.

Athletic directors Ron Raver and Mary Rubright, who announced Puskarich's appointment, said the changes and the additional staffing have created the first full-service athletic department in Eastern's 101-year history.

Sports writer Van Sickel remembered

After a career dating back to 1956, Charlie Van Sickel was probably the best known sports writer in the Northwest. He died May 9 while driving a tractor-trailer rig on Interstate 80 just north of Sacramento, Calif. He had a history of heart problems and an autopsy showed he suffered a heart attack before crashing into a bridge abutment. He was 48 years old.

Van Sickel was born in Wyoming and raised in Pasco, Wash. He attended Eastern Washington University where he graduated in 1956 with a bachelor's degree in English and education. He was sophomore and junior class president and grandmaster of the Scarlet Arrows.

As sports editor at the Columbia Basin News and the Tri-City Herald for 11 years, Van Sickel covered athletics at Columbia Basin College. Dr. Dale Gier, head of extended programs at CBC, was a football coach at the time—and Van Sickel's friend and neighbor. "Charlie was supportive of our athletic programs," Gier said, "but he was quite objective and could be very critical if he saw something he didn't like. He was an intense person; nobody could get the work out like he could. And he was brilliant when it came to remembering sports information. As a sports writer, he was the best I've ever seen."

Van Sickel joined the Spokane Chronicle in 1977. After the sports staff of the Chronicle and the Spokesman Review merged in December of 1981, his column, The Dutch Rub, appeared in both papers. He left the Spokane papers in July of 1982. At the time of his death, he was driving long-haul trucks and writing his column for several Northwest papers.

EWU football coach Larry Hattermer, who had also known Van Sickel since his days at the Herald, wrote a eulogy in his honor. In the eulogy he tells of a conversation several years ago between Van Sickel and CBC wrestling coach John Howard: Howard asked Van Sickel what it took to get on the front page of the sports section. "That's easy," Charlie said. "Consistency. You have to be consistent. One year and a flash in the pan doesn't make a champion. Champs are consistent."

Hattermer closed the eulogy by saying that Charlie Van Sickel was consistent. "He was a winner — all of his life."

EWU's "sleeper" team takes Bloomsday trophy

Early last spring, a group of faculty and administrators were discussing possible stories for a future issue of Perspective. Frank Ammann, the University Examiner, remembers the meeting well. "I told them to put down that Eastern won the Bloomsday Corporate Trophy," he says, "and they all laughed at me. They don't laugh anymore."

And well they shouldn't. On its first time out, the EWU team beat defending champions Washington Water Power by almost double. Ammann couldn't be more pleased. In fact, he is still chuckling. "Yes," he says, "we won it handily. We embarrassed the competition severely."

Scores for the Corporate Trophy are calculated by adding the finish positions of the top three runners of each team. Eastern's first three runners finished 167th, 227th and 262nd for a score of 656. Second-place Washington Water Power came in with a score of 1197.

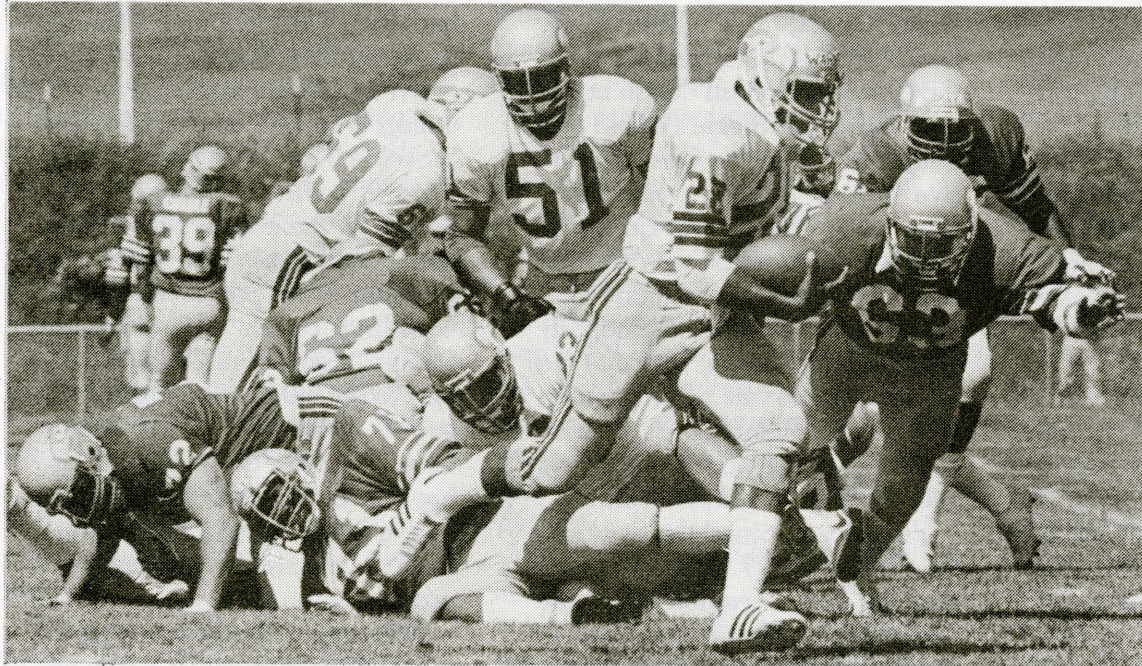

"I was accused of salting the team," Ammann says, "but none of us are athletic instructors or P.E. majors. We're all academicians."

It was Jim Hanegan, chairman of the biology department, who approached him with the idea of an Eastern team, Ammann says. Hanegan is now captain of the group. The other members are Jeff Korkill, a chemistry professor; Scott Mabee, applied psychology; Grant Smith, chairman of the English department; and Bill Horner, a professor in social work. All five profs ran the course in under 46 minutes. Ammann served as unofficial coach and owner.

"We'll win again next year," he predicts. "And contrary to what everyone says—winning is everything."

Seahawks train under new coach

Running Back Curt Warner

Head Coach Chuck Knox

The Seattle Seahawks arrived on Eastern's campus July 14 to begin preparations for their eighth season. They came in waves, 128 of them. The rookies and free agents first, the veterans later. This year, however, some veterans came early—to get acquainted, to see and be seen by Chuck Knox, the new coach.

Knox, who took over as head coach in January, has a career record of 91-51-1, one of the best in the NFL. He brought a coaching staff of ten, only two of which—Joe Vitt and Rusty Tillman—are holdovers from ex-coach Jack Patera's regime. And there have been some changes: Water and water breaks are now allowed on the playing field. And while the players work just as hard as in previous years, they get more time off.

Rich Dadich, '64, has enjoyed a successful blending of the careers of professional psychologist and tennis professional and is currently manager and pro at the Municipal Tennis Center at Lubbock, Texas. Dadich is 46 years old and a Chicago native. He received his master's degree in psychology from EWU and subsequently worked as a professional psychologist in various clinics and in a Pennsylvania state hospital. In 1972 Rich decided on a new course in life as a tennis professional. After serving his apprenticeship in Ojai, California, he and his family moved to Tucson where he taught tennis for 8 years at the Tucson National Golf Club. When a decline in tennis popularity caused the club to phase out its tennis program, Dadich and his family moved to Dubuque, Iowa, where Rich worked at the Dubuque Racquet Club. In September of 1982, Dadich attended the USPTA national convention and championships in Chicago where he took second place in the men's 45-and-over doubles competition. At the Municipal Tennis Center at Lubbock, Dadich is responsible for the entire tennis program on a 12-court lighted facility, as well as managing the pro shop. His college training in psychology doubling with his status as a registered tennis professional, Dadich has thought a great deal about the benefits to be derived from sports. He feels that, "One way to enjoy life is by participating and if tennis answers a deeply seated drive to achieve, then that's great. . . and if it doesn't then some other sports activity might." Psychoanalysis on the tennis court might seem pretty far-fetched but at Lubbock's Tennis Center, it could happen.
