EWU Percussion Program

The percussion program at Eastern Washington University offers comprehensive instruction in classical/western percussion instruments and literature for keyboard percussion instruments (marimba, vibraphone, etc.), snare drum, timpani, and auxiliary percussion. The classical focus is on ensemble performance, solo literature, and orchestral excerpts.

The percussion program also offers comprehensive coverage in jazz, ethnic, and contemporary popular music applications for percussion study. This area includes drumset instruction, hand drumming, jazz vibraphone, and marimba playing. Jazz percussionists at EWU are also exposed to aspects of electronic percussion programming and performance. Performance opportunities abound for the percussionist.

Dr. Michael Waldrop directs the program. EWU offers bachelors and master's degrees in both performance and education and is an accredited member of the National Association of Schools of Music.
