Eligibility As A.S. Exec, Student Status Questioned

Unbeknownst to the student body, his fellow executive officers and the administration, Associated Student President Clint Hill has withdrawn from all of his classes, possibly voiding his eligibility to hold the office of president.

Working in secrecy, Hill has made arrangements with the instructors of each of his classes to receive withdrawals for grades, the standard procedure now for withdrawing from a class.

No one knew of Hill’s withdrawal until The Easterner received copies of memos signed by each of the instructors indicating that Hill had made the arrangements.

Administration files reveal only that Hill had registered for 17 credit hours this quarter, but since no contact is necessary with the registrar or deans to withdraw, their files do not show such procedures until grades are sent out.

Dean of Students Daryl Hagie said he did not know what Hill’s withdrawals would mean as far as the Associated Students are concerned. Constitution and by-law requirements for student officers state they must be at least special students to run for or hold office. A special student is defined by the College bulletin as anyone enrolled for “not more than six credit hours.”

Dr. Hagie said the college may now have to determine when a student ceases to be a student—when he announces intentions to withdraw or after the quarter ends. Dr. Hagie said as far as college records show, Hill has registered as a full-time student, paid his fees and remains a student.

...But the signed memos from each of the instructors indicates Hill is no longer a student, since he attends no classes and will receive no credit. Whether or not he will have to relinquish his office will have to be determined on the basis of the college’s attitude toward Hill’s status.

If Hill is ineligible to hold office, he would have been ineligible since the date of his final withdrawal. If that date could be determined, any actions taken by the Associated Students under his authority could possibly be ruled invalid.

Why Hill dropped all of his classes is unknown. Final confirmation of his withdrawals was not available to The Easterner until yesterday morning.

With a Tuesday printing day in Davenport, Washington, The Easterner staff attempted to reach Hill yesterday morning without success. Neither in the study body offices nor at home. Hill could not be reached for comment.

One possible explanation could be a devotion to the duties of student body president and too much of a conflict with class time. But Hill does not spend a great deal of time in the student offices, according to fellow officers, nor has student government been involved in any massive amount of organized work.

Until Hill can respond, then, his reasons must be left to conjecture. The question will be brought up at the A.S. Council meeting Thursday, at which time it is expected Hill will reply.

A MEMO FROM EACH INSTRUCTOR OF Hill’s classes attest to Hill’s withdrawal. A check with the registrar shows Hill registered for 17 credit hours and, after drop-add last October, was only registered in the above classes (also 17 hours). In each class, Hill withdrew, with the exception of a one-hour physical education class in which he arranged to receive an incomplete, which also carries no credit.

The reliance on the part of A.S. President Clint Hill and his two backup execs Mark Lobdell and Sue Morgan to recommend the passage of the Outdoor Program appropriation is yet another example of the Hill administration's stand still approach to student government.

With half the present elected term already gone the student body finds itself very little to show for its considerable expenditure in the executive area.

There is every reason to see why the students should pay a chief executive (who operates in exile) who cannot or will not institute any substantive programs for the students. A check of the legislation, what there is of it, for this year shows that almost all was originated outside the presidents office.

Further, Hill has opposed many worthwhile measures including the Student Rights and Responsibilities Bill which is probably the most beneficial legislation for students to come along in some time.

There has been the promised leadership been for the programs such as the day care center, the outdoor program, the beer petition, or even the Constitution referendum. All of which is but the expenditure without Hill's assistance, only to be taken up when he saw he couldn't fight it? Why has the present administration failed to follow through on already initiated programs?

Thus far we have not seen any action on the course criticism proposal, or the A.S. involvement in environmental action, or on several other items. There are many several committees including the Student Personnel Council, Undergraduate Council, and Human Rights Commission that the president has failed to fill so far this year.

This lack of leadership has hurt the Associated Students by reducing their prestige and power. The President's inaction in filling the Human Rights Commission has created the embarrassing situation of that privilege being taken away from his office. This is not what the students here deserve for their money and it is doubtful they will tolerate it much longer.

The sick person who plants a bomb or telephones in a threat doesn't care as his chances of getting caught are minimal, anyway. Students and faculty who abuse the rights others won't mind signing another card during registration. Additional threats can mean nothing when the present consequences are so inconsequential.

More rules and regulations could potentially trap the innocent. Whatever this bill can prevent is a small minority on campus endorses violence. I cannot see how this bill can prevent.

Present laws applicable to violence, misconduct, and vandalism are rigid enough if enforced. A student accused of breaking any of the rules and regulations mentioned in this new proposal is subject to arrest and or expulsion. Nevertheless anyone by the present breaking rules knows this can happen under existing laws.

More Phones
Editor

How about some more student phones on campus? If a student wants to make a phone call on campus, he can walk over to the SUB, or the library. Popular places yes, but the campus is presently bare.

There are four pay phones and one free phone available for off campus calls in a small building located by the married-students housing area. The other is in Showalter. Almost all the phones are in the SUB, side by side. ammunition.

More phones please, even if they are pay phones. Phones can save so much extra walking and time.

Letters to the Editor

DIRECTOR FIT?

The Missionaries send a message to those members of EWSC who of our black students thinks about black studies, chosen, of those who operate and staff hospitals seems to me somewhat lacking in logic and in proper consideration of the rights of the institutions concerned.

You lay great stress on the fact that a majority of the voters have accepted a liberalized abortion policy, and conclude from that fact that the administrators of the hospital are wrong. Your question are frustrating the majority will by refusing to allow abortions to be performed once the premises of their control.

Yet you overlook the fact that the same referendum which set forth new abortion policy specifically allowed certain types of hospitals to make the choice as to whether or not to perform abortions.

Since the abortion referendum was voted on as a package, one must presume that those votes who approved liberalization of the law also approved the stated exemption. Thus the hospitals in question are doing no more than is required by the statute, and by those who supported it.

Perhaps the editorial seems to overlook the constitutional rights of those who operate and staff these hospitals.

Inevitably these groups or individuals would if they permitted the performance of abortion on their premises - be in some degree involved in practices offensive to their religious beliefs.

The Supreme Court has held in a number of cases that the compelling of such action, i.e. that of performing a religious belief, can be justified only on the showing of a compelling state interest. (See Sherbert v. Verner, 1963)

Whatever the favorable vote on this issue may have been meant to those who supported it, I would submit that it cannot be fairly interpreted as saying that the state of Washington has a "compelling interest" in fostering, as distinguished from permitting, abortions.

Indeed, allegations of a similar character were specifically and repeatedly denied by the proponents of Referendum 20 in the campaign preceding the election.

Guessed Rejected

The new bill proposed by Senator Sam Guess deeply concerns me. He wishes to limit abortion to women of a small minority on campus endorses violence. I cannot see how this bill can prevent what we expect.

Present laws applicable to violence, misconduct, and vandalism are rigid enough if enforced. A student accused of breaking any of the rules and regulations mentioned in this new proposal is subject to arrest and or expulsion. Nevertheless anyone by the present breaking rules knows this can happen under existing laws.

Exam Schedule

Fall quarter comes to a call at the end of December 5 followed by finals week from December 7 through the 12.

Final Exam schedule is as follows:

Winter Quarter begins January 5 and those going through fieldhouse registration should be prepared the day prior to that.

Pre-registration for winter quarter ended November 20 with a total enrollment of 4,960 registered students, said Delbert L. Liljegren, assistant registrar.

When comparing the number with those who pre-registered for fall quarter, Liljegren said that it is definitely higher for winter. "We don't know the exact figures for fall quarter because most of the students didn't pay their fees at the time of registration as they did this time."
Action Soon On PE Requirements

Action is expected tomorrow on a change in general college requirements when the Undergraduate Affairs' Council (UAC) meets. Final approval of the proposal lies in the hands of the Academic Senate which will not receive the UAC suggestions in January, said Dr. Henry-York Steiner, dean of undergraduate affairs.

Under the proposed change in general requirements the UAC is considering, among other things, a change that would affect the physical education requirements.

In a proposal made by the P.E. department, HPE 115 would be eliminated as a requirement, but be restructured and included as an elective course in the general college science requirements.

Also in the P.E. proposal is the recommendation that physical education courses will be offered for academic credit and be included in requirements for graduation.

There had been some discussion by the UAC that all credit be eliminated from the activity classes and students would only have to show proficiency in certain areas of P.E.

Dr. Jack Leighton, chairman of the department of health, physical education and recreation, said, "We definitely want credit for activity classes."

"The Council was invited to make their objections to the P.E. proposal known to that department. I expect there will be a vote on the whole proposal this week," said Dr. Steiner.

Beer Movement Slow

A petition to have a beer tavern on campus is not expected to go before the Board of Trustees until January. This was the opinion of Associated Students President Clint Hill and Doug Stewart, petition coordinator.

Hill said he has been making his own inquiries into the legality of having such a facility on state land. Other information on who will run the tavern, hours of operation and other unspecified information will also be needed, said Hill.

Stewart said he is meeting with the Student Union Board of Control this week to discuss future plans on the petition. "I don't feel we have enough information to go to the board in December," said Stewart.

Hill and Stewart said they had not been in direct contact recently about the matter. Both expressed the hope they could confer soon so they are not duplicating efforts in seeking the required information.

Several of the Board of Trustees members expressed that the students bringing the petition to the board will have to have the whole operation ready for business on paper before the board will consider the proposal.

Graduation Set

Fall commencement 1970 will be held at Memorial Field House at 3 p.m. on Friday, December 11, said Dr. M. Patrick Whitehill, Assistant Marshal.

Opera Medley Opens Here

Three members of the department of music will be presented in a program of scenes from operas tomorrow evening at 8:15 p.m., in the recital hall of the new music building.

The program will consist of Quartet in A major, K. 464, by Mozart; Schubert's Quartet in E major, Opus 41, and Quartet No. 2, Opus 95, by Prokofiev.

Members of the Philadelphia String Quartet are Veda Reynolds and Irwin Eizenberg, violins; Alan Eglinton, viola, and Charles Breneman, cello.

Faculty Cut-Back Not Necessary

Although the college is currently in a financial squeeze along with most other state colleges, "we don't anticipate financial cuts sufficiently large to necessitate a faculty cutback," Dr. Jack Leighton, chairman of the Academic Affairs' Council, said.

Present faculty members may not be replaced when their appointment is terminated, however. Such decisions will not be decided until after the state legislature meets, he said.

Job security for faculty members comes in the form of tenure, not granted until after four years of teaching at Eastern.

Tenture is available only to those faculty members who serve at least half-time as teacher or librarian.

After a staff member receives tenure his appointment may be terminated only on the grounds of incompetence, neglect of duty, incapacity, dishonesty or immorality, conviction of felony, gross misdemeanor or a crime of moral turpitude, breach of fiduciary exigency, bona fide dis continuance of a program or department or instruction, or a violation of the college's published rules and regulations which results in substantial disorder or interference with the functioning of the college.

All faculty members undergo evaluation each year, by the Faculty Personnel Committee.

Consideration is given to recommendations by department chairmen and departmental personnel committees, and this year will include student evaluations.

First-year staff members must be notified by March 1 if their contracts are not to be renewed the following year. Second year faculty must be notified by December 1.

Cheerleader Stays

Cheerleader Cynthia Crudup will not be removed from the cheerleading squad despite the effort of her fellow cheerleaders, though an investigation of the dispute will be continued by the State Board against discrimination.

A special investigation committee reported to the Associated Student Council last week that there was "insufficient data to determine responsibility."

Cheerleader Cynthia Crudup because of her "lack of enthusiasm" and conduct which "reduces the morale of the group."

The letters cited alleged instances of Miss Crudup's failure to assist the cheerleaders in extra-curricular duties, several absences during practice sessions and a lack of "a total commitment to both the squad and to Eastern." Beer Movement Slow

Dr. To Speak

Dr. Elwyn Hesse, a Cheney physician, will be the featured speaker at the Thursday, December 3 dinner meeting of the Eastern chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, International Fraternity for men in education.

A former resident and a recent visitor to Mexico, Dr. Hesse will speak on "Mexico the Tourist Doesn't See."

The 5:45 dinner meeting will be in the Terrace Room of the Student Union building.

Indian Author Speaks

N. Scott Momaday, winner of the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction in 1969, will speak on "The Morality of Indian Hazing" as the first winter quarter lecture series program. The excursion convocation will be held in Shwaltzer, January 12 at 11:40 a.m. and admission will be free.

Professor of English and comparative literature at the University of California at Berkeley, Dr. Momaday has established himself as a writer in all fields. His first full work of fiction, "House Made of Dawn," won him the Pulitzer Prize. He also authored "The Way to Rainy Mountain," a collection of Kiowa Indian legends, illustrated by his father, a well-known artist of Indian themes.

Dr. Momaday is a Kiowa Indian who was born in 1934 and brought up on Indian reservations in the Southwest. He attended reservation schools and holds an A.B. from the University of New Mexico and an A.M. and Ph.D. from Stanford University. He has been on the faculty of UC at Santa Barbara since 1963 and now also holds the professorship at Berkeley.

His talk is a discussion of the moral aspects of white-Indian relations and the excess mail left in the boxes have been removed to all organizations that have them or want them, at the beginning of winter quarter, at the 3:30 p.m. ruling on the motion.

Mail To Move

All campus organizations will be required to empty their mailboxes in the SUB before noon Thursday, January 15. The excess mail left in the boxes will be discarded as the move of the Post Office to the new Pence Union Building.

Post Office boxes will be reissued to all organizations and all persons who now have them or want them, at the beginning of winter quarter, at a time to be announced by the charge for the quarter.

Stephen Steiner Plans Revamping Of Undergrad Education

Dr. Henry-York Steiner, dean of undergraduate education, has drawn up plans for a complete revamping of undergraduate education that will get away from course work and into more discipline.

Dr. Steiner sent copies of his proposal to the members of the Undergraduate Affairs Council this week for their information and discussion. He hopes the new concept might be used on a trial basis next year.

Under his new idea, Dr. Steiner said there will be four types of faculty members. Scholars are faculty who advance knowledge through creative thought and research. Practitioners are actively engaged in the application of a field of study or knowledge.

Lecturers give students instruction in elementary concepts and definitions, and basic skills. Tutors work with students to establish and achieve the goals of the student's education.

Dr. Steiner said that scholars will be involved in original research in their particular areas of interest. Students will be able to consult these scholars and receive credit for becoming involved in the research being done.

Practitioners will put into action the work that has been researched by the scholars. Students may consult these people and become involved in their areas of interest, said Dr. Steiner.

Practitioners will be researching the area of study in which they are interested. Others will be a sort of critics, said Dr. Steiner.

Lecturers will instruct in the classroom as faculty do now. The difference is that they will be teaching what are called "mini-courses." What the courses will do is give the student the basic information on a particular subject area in two or three weeks instead of an entire quarter as is done now.

This will allow students to decide whether or not they are interested in that area of study for a possible major, said Dr. Steiner.

Under the proposal there will be five areas of study which most areas of education can be broken down into, said Dr. Steiner. There are areas of science and social science and three disciplines: critical discipline, creative discipline and professional discipline.

The object of the five areas is to break down the traditional lines of departments as they exist now, said Dr. Steiner. "Faculty would probably stay within the departments, but for convenience but would not be limited to one area of study if they are interested in other areas."

In defining the five areas Dr. Steiner said that the organized knowledge of the natural and physical world pursued primarily for its own sake. A social science is the organized knowledge of man as a social being pursued for its own sake and to provide a basis for the improvement of the social order.

Dr. Steiner said the critical discipline is an area of study in which the critical faculties of reason and imagination are brought to bear to explain, defend, examine, and prove or disprove the principles, theories, ideas and creations of others.

Creative discipline is an area of study or knowledge, usually syncretistic, in which the primary goal is the acquisition of technical skill or vocational achievement, with its primary focus on the student's professional future.

A series of consequences of adopting such a revolutionary idea were given by Dr. Steiner. "Many ideas and patterns of action now active in the minds and lives of most faculty and students would no longer work," he said.

Tutors would need to be broadly knowledgeable about the current activity of the faculty as a whole. The quality of education achieved by students would have a direct relationship to the quality of mind actively demonstrated by their professional work.

From all his ideas about education Dr. Steiner said he made three assumptions about his work.

Also, he said, "Many, if not most, (and perhaps all) faculty members would need to develop for the purpose of understanding the discussions in trying to think of alternatives to the present system.

Seattles 8 Trail Opens

Seattle's 8 Trail is one that will be required to empty their mailboxes in the SUB before noon Thursday, January 15. The excess mail left in the boxes have been removed to all organizations that have them or want them, at the beginning of winter quarter, at a time to be announced by the charge for the quarter.

Judge George Boldt threw out two spectators from the bar row for "laughing." The ejection was made over a breach of court's punishment for dancing during a song at the 3:30 p.m. ruling on the motion.

The trial of the Seattle 8 was delayed by a judge who had been asked by the defense attorneys to take the case. The judge deferred a ruling on the motion.

Journalism Dept. May Move

A proposal to move Eastern's journalism department to a Spokane center by next fall is expected to be considered by the Undergraduate Affairs Council at its first meeting in January.

Dr. Henry York Steiner, dean of undergraduate affairs, said the proposed move of the journalism department has been given to each of the division and academic deans for their consideration.

Richard Hoover, director of the department of journalism, said, "We believe that a student majoring in journalism at Eastern could receive the best education if it were possible for him to gather, write, edit, photograph and present the news while using the City of Spokane as his laboratory. This is not possible to any extent at our present on-campus location."

Hoover said there is the possibility that the center could be in a government building across the street from the city library and less than a block away from Spokane's two daily newspapers.

Students are presently developing their professional skills in a make-believe world, said Hoover. Anyone entering the journalism major would spend their first two years of college on the campus taking general requirements and possibly working on the student newspaper and yearbook.

The entire junior year, under the proposal, would be spent in Spokane center working entirely in the field of journalism.

Since the student majoring in journalism is required to have another major as well the senior year could be used for completing requirements not finished during the freshman and sophomore years.

Hoover said the whole idea of the move to Spokane is so that students can be closer to the actual news happenings of the day. They would be interviewing government officials and sitting in on governmental meeting on a regular basis, he said.

'Judgment' Completes Run

Tomorrow night, Eastern's Drama Department will again present "City In Judgment" for three consecutive nights beginning at 8:15 p.m. in the Science Auditorium.

Edwin S. Parker's original account of the trial following the 1916 Everett Massacre was well-received during its "world premiere" week two weeks ago, highlighted by Mr. Parker's presence during the performances.

All seats are reserved. Reservations may be made by phoning 309-2459 from Cheney or by calling 835-5271, extension 2459, toll-free from Spokane.

Initiative Seeks Treaty With NLF

BERKELEY, Calif.—The mecca of student radicalism is apparently going back to working within the system.

But the aims are no less radical. Using the method of initiative, a group in Berkeley is planning to circulate petitions to place on the next April's city ballot a proposal for a peace treaty between the people of Berkeley and the National Liberation Front of Vietnam.

If the proposal were to pass, Berkeley would have to secede from the Union. The U.S. Constitution explicitly prohibits the signing of treaties by any local government.
As The Easterner goes to press for the final time of 1970, we look ahead to winter quarter and a new addition to The Easterner staff.

With the first issue of the new Year January 13 Jeff Jordan will assume the responsibilities of The Easterner sports editor. As for me, I am delighted that Jeff will be handling these pages in the future and feel assured that he will present a comprehensive coverage of Eastern athletic and physical education programs.

Jordan, my successor as sports editor, was also my successor as assistant in the Public Information office. His job with the latter requires that he travel with the athletic teams and become thoroughly involved with the total program of athletics. He will find, as I did, that this was a great benefit in writing these pages.

The two positions complement each other nicely.

Jordan, a sophmore, was sports editor of his high school paper at East Valley in Spokane. He was also an outstanding wrestler at East Valley and last year at Graves Harbor. A foot injury from an auto accident has hampered his wrestling ambitions for this year.

I wish Jeff luck in the coming issues. He will find he has total cooperation from the athletic department at Eastern. He will have good fortune to write about exciting highlights of the season and will also be required to write about disappointments that are a part of the win-or-lose aspects of sports.

What this school needs is a little more spirit. Eastern's cheerleaders are organizing a new school tradition to try to improve school spirit at sports events. All Eastern fans are requested to wear something... anything... red to basketball games this year. Identically with the school colors (red and white) will help the cheerleaders establish enthusiasm and school spirit.

THINK RED!

Polio Victim Provides Inspiration for Matmen

In his second season wrestling for Eastern John Reese has developed into an inspiration not only to his teammates but to his coach as well.

Reese a sophomore from Central Valley High School in Spokane, has been handicapped with polio in both legs since he was 3½ years old. Numerous operations and treatments have strengthened his right leg, but his left leg is still very weak.

As a sophomore in high school he asked the coach if he could turn out for the squad. Even though he cannot stand up during a match he proceeded to make the varsity team and by his senior year had won four matches and lost eight.

“I’ve always liked sports, and wrestling was the only one I had a chance in,” Reese said.

Savage coach Curt Byrnes said “Reese demonstrates a great deal of courage and is an inspiration to everyone that handicaps can be overcome.

A very humble person, John expresses admiration for the guys he wrestles because they “don’t hesitate to go after me.”

Talking with John makes one a believer that success is all in the mind.

Savages Travel This Week

Eastern Savages, who opened the season with Lewis-Clark last night (the score was not available at press time), travel to Olympia and Portland this weekend for two games on the road.

The Savages will meet St. Martins in Olympia Friday renewing a rivalry that dates back two years ago when Eastern won a pair from St. Martins.

Saturday the Savages meet an outstanding basketball team in Portland State. Portland State is led by the Stoudrnore Brothers who are exceptional players, according to Dr. Jerry Krause, Eastern coach.

“Willy Stoudmire hit 20 of 15 from the field in a scrimmage game. He is one of the best guards in the northwest,” Dr. Krause said.

“There will be alot of scoring in both games this weekend, and how we fare will depend on whether our fast break is ready to go,” he said.

Eastern has health problems at the center spot. Dave Hayden is suffering from an infected kidney. Gary Soot has a chest cold and Jim Cowan has missed several practices with the flu.

“Otherwise,” Dr. Krause said, “We’re all healthy and ready to go.”

The Savage varsity lost to the Alumni last Saturday in an exhibition game. 82-80.

“We played a poor first half and had ten good minutes of basketball in the second half but just couldn’t overcome the deficit,” Dr. Krause said.

“Randy Buss had a good game but no one else was outstanding.”

Eastern’s junior varsity will host Gonzaga Fresh Friday at the Fieldhouse. Gonzaga Coach Hank Anderson says his fresh team is one of the best ever and says they are on the par with the Washington State fresh.

Eastern varsity will be at home against Portland State December 11 and Pacific Lutheran University on December 12. Both games will begin at 8:00 with the junior varsity hosting Fairchild Air Force Base in the preliminary games both nights at 5:45.

Efforts are already being made to offer two inter-disciplinary courses at Eastern.

"Dr. Patrick Whitehill," director of the P.W. program at campus school, is working with members of the geography department on a class for next summer which will possibly include a two-week back packing trip, to Glacier, and Edith Buciek, dance instructor, and John Henry, art instructor, are discussing the possibility of offering a course in movement for an inter-disciplinary workshop, also starting in summer.

This combination of many disciplines in a workshop situation was requested by members of the art department and Dr. Gazette last summer and met with considerable success.

"Students were very enthusiastic about the course I’ve found that they are similarly responsive to the yoga class," she said. "The class is already full and many students have come to request special permission to be admitted to it."

Dr. Gazette is hopeful that this kind of acceptance represents a trend at Eastern away from the emphasis on athletics which is "more in the public eye" to intercollegiate and instructional P.E. programs which benefit the majority of students.

"Our department has done much to earn this acceptance," she said. "We’re trying new programs, we’re bringing experts to campus, we’re discussing with new concepts in physical education and we’re rapidly expanding our camp counseling program through our recreation department." Dr. Gazette.

"Admittedly the emphasis has been out of balance on intercollegiate sports here in the past," she said. "But this is also primarily to the commuter nature of our student body."

"We’ve got so much to offer all students, we just hope they’re willing to accept the opportunity and to develop their individual potential to its greatest measure."

"From a lady who works constantly at achieving her own personal goals, concerns students and faculty by her nearest example, that’s a challenge which deserves to be met."

Tootsies Win

The women’s intramural volleyball team came to a close last week with the Tallisman Tootsies defeating the Sundowners in a close game.

The men’s volleyball league winds up this week with the finals being played tonight.

Women’s basketball entries for next quarter are due by January 13. Women’s basketball should begin to get their teams together. Further information on women’s basketball can be obtained by contacting Miss Magdaful at Fieldhouse 31 or 335-2483.

The Lems, a faculty team, won the men’s volleyball title Monday.

The Lems defeated the Canucks in the season finale. The two other teams that made the semi-finals were the Chugars and the Jackals.

Coach Picked

The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics first district has selected Tom Parry of Central Washington State as the outstanding "football coach of the year."

Eastern gymnasts and a new head coach are looking ahead to the season opener five weeks away with optimism for an outstanding season. Several returning Eastern athletes have already performed well enough to earn this acceptance," she said. "We’re trying new programs, we’re bringing experts to campus, we’re discussing with new concepts in physical education and we’re rapidly expanding our camp counseling program through our recreation department."

"Admittedly the emphasis has been out of balance on intercollegiate sports here in the past," she said. "But this is also primarily to the commuter nature of our student body."

"We’ve got so much to offer all students, we just hope they’re willing to accept the opportunity and to develop their individual potential to its greatest measure."

"From a lady who works constantly at achieving her own personal goals, concerns students and faculty by her nearest example, that’s a challenge which deserves to be met."

Tootsies Win

The women’s intramural volleyball team came to a close last week with the Tallisman Tootsies defeating the Sundowners in a close game.

The men’s volleyball league winds up this week with the finals being played tonight.

Women’s basketball entries for next quarter are due by January 13. Women’s basketball should begin to get their teams together. Further information on women’s basketball can be obtained by contacting Miss Magdaful at Fieldhouse 31 or 335-2483.

The Lems, a faculty team, won the men’s volleyball title Monday.

The Lems defeated the Canucks in the season finale. The two other teams that made the semi-finals were the Chugars and the Jackals.

Ed Dept Alters Program

Student teachers from Eastern are participating in an experimental program at two Spokane elementary schools, requiring two quarters of student teaching instead of the usual one quarter.

The program, which involves 18 student teachers at Pratt and Sheridan Elementary Schools in Spokane School District 81, centers around "making education relevant," said Dr. Arnold Stueckle, supervisor of student teachers in the pilot project.

The program has been "very successful," said Dr. Stueckle. "It allows each student teacher to proceed at his own pace and give him the experiences on teaching on his own.

The student teachers begin by observing various functions of the school and familiarize themselves with the children who do the teaching generally and also in specific areas. They assist the classroom teacher and work with the children, one-to-one, small group, large group, and eventually entire class situations.

Throughout the entire process, student teachers engage in simulated sequences, micro-teaching, seminars, case studies, mini-courses, and other techniques and strategies of teaching, said Dr. Stueckle.

"The master teachers benefit as well as the students under this program because they are not pressured and hurried and have more time to share ideas on new and different things," he said.

For the two quarters of student teaching, students earn between 34 and 42 credits in a variety of education courses.

The second quarter, students will be involved in team teaching and cooperative teaching. The student teacher and cooperating teacher will be done then, also, said Dr. Stueckle.

Christmas Discussed Internationally

Christmas in the United States is one holiday of celebration to no other day in the year. It is characterized by stairwayed Santa Claus in every store, decorations and blazing lights on every corner and on every house, carolers singing off key as they pad through the snow, Christmas trees in living rooms and stockpiles which get larger every year at fireplaces. This is how Christmas is celebrated in the United States.

What we don't know is how the season known as the 'Christmas season' is spent in other countries of the world.

In Taiwan, they celebrate Christmas. There is no date set for festivity, but the season is still a happy one with Chinese New Year not far behind ours in February. Janny Chung, Taiwan native now attending M.I.T., says "in Taiwan there is no church-going in this season. Whether you have been in this country for a long time or only a short while, you can think of this twice a year: once on the Christmas Eve and the other on New Year's."

In Japan, Christmas for the Japanese is a family occasion. "It seems like only an opportunity for businesses to take advantage of the buyer. Here the people don't remember what it's for. To them it's not a Holy Day."

Betrewekery Holiday, asking how the different countries celebrate Christmas. Among them is a Chinese student, Miss Nomee, who describes her home. She says: "In the country people are so used to the smallness of the United States as compared to Ethiopia. It seems like only an opportunity for businesses to take advantage of the buyer. Here the people don't remember what it's for. To them it's not a Holy Day."

Miss Nomee, a member of the Cooor d' Alene tribe is attending college on a full tribal scholarship. She lives at the Cooor d' Alene Tribe's Reservation in Cheney to help her family earn a living. "The money doesn't come to me, I think ever I would have the opportunity to attend college."

High school education was my only tool until I was given the scholarship," said Miss Nomee.

Klummen and her mother often display their beadwork at clubs and schools in the area. "Sometimes my Dad and brothers come to help us," Klummen says, "we work together as a family, I think more than most," said Miss Nomee.

Miss Nomee, a posed 19 year old, is also an accomplished Indian beadwork artist and makes all of her own clothes. She is one of the women's division at the Cooor d' Alene Tribe's Reservation.

"I can't really remember learning to dance because our parents never taught us about the dance when we began walking," said Miss Nomee. She besides war dances, the most common type, Miss Nomee also hoop dances, a dance not usually attempted by girls.

Right now she is dancing with three hoops 5 inches in diameter, but by next summer she hopes to having six.

"In the country people are friendly and easier to know. I can do most anything I like, in the city I feel too restricted," said Miss Nomee.

Miss Nomee admitted that she has experienced some racial prejudice. "Everything was fine at Lewis and Clark High School until the kids found out I was Indian. Then their attitudes changed abruptly. For this reason I was hesitant coming to Eastern but they haven't been any problems of this kind here," said Miss Nomee.
