No tuition increase next year

By Linda Kinler

In a letter dated March 16 to all state senators and representatives, Weigelt listed reasons for stopping the increase, including that "economic barriers to higher education and professional education tend to maintain a class society."

"Higher education is the most valuable thing a community can receive from its tax dollars," Weigelt added. "Public education in terms of its value, is necessary for the upgrading of society."

Most replies were favorable and commented the mature way the fight was handled by statewide students and organizations.

A March 22 letter from Sen. Del Bausch from the 22nd district read in part: "I have no doubts that your efforts on behalf of the students at Eastern Washington University are to be commended."

"I wish to assure you that I will keep your views in mind when the proposal is brought before the senate for final consideration."

"Those who worked long and hard on the tuition fight will likely not be at Eastern in the 1980 academic year when the question once again arises in the senate."

Mangan said he has no fears about ASEWU successors carrying on the cause.

"We have a complete file on tuition fights from 1972-1973 to the present day," he said. "I have an idea who will be here next year. They are responsible persons."

Hands off

By Nancy Greer

One hundred hours. That's 6,000 minutes. Or 360,000 seconds.

No matter how you count it, last week's Hands-On Car Marathon was a long, grueling haul for Linda Holmes but the EWU junior managed to outlast 11 other contestants and drive away in the grand prize.

Holmes and runner-up David White of Airway Heights both hung on to the 1979 Subaru Brat, valued at $7,000, for nearly five days. At the 100-hour mark, names were drawn to determine the winner of the fourth annual marathon held at the Spokane Auto Show.

"We contacted state high schools and colleges to join in and fight," Mangan added. "We got parents to call in on the legislative hotline to protest."

Mangan said that anti-increase attitudes will increase over the next year. As prices rise in other areas, people will feel the pinch of increasing education costs.

Is it a plane? . . .

EWU track team member Vic White completes a jump during competition last Saturday at Woodward Field. White later placed first with a 6 foot 8 inch leap in the high jump. EWU took seven firsts and five seconds in the meet. See story, page 10.

It took a long, long time but the Brat was worth it

By Linda Holmes, 23, an EWU junior, tries out her new Subaru Brat. She won it in the KHQ Hands-On Marathon last weekend at the Spokane County Fairgrounds after a grueling 100-hour competition.

Dorm incident spawns board

Responding to an incident last week that nearly resulted in the dismissal of a Dressler Hall resident advisor, the A.S. legislature approved the formation of a student employee review board.

A.S. Attorney General Ed Woodell told the legislature that such a committee could be formed to handle grievances of student employees.

A.S. President Ron Weigelt suggested the proposed group be named an executive committee and recommended four people to the legislature as members. However, his request failed.

"Executive committees have no weight or pull whatsoever," said newly elected legislative speaker Melody Lewis.

Lewis said the committee positions are open to any student. The group will be under the control of the legislature.

In other business, Steve Kruger, chairman of the Student Union Board of Control, told the legislature that Tawanka Commons will be contracting the food services in the PUB.

"Nothing is written in stone," he said. "But Tawanka may take control of the area as soon as summer quarter.

Kruger also said plans are being made for an addition to the PUB which will extend out toward the dental hygiene building.

"What exactly will be contained in the new addition is yet to be decided," he said. "But possible suggestions include a movie theatre, or a bowling alley."

The legislature also voted to allot the Native American Student Union a supplemental budget request of $1,000.

In a special Dressler dorm council meeting March 28, a motion was approved to recommend to the Associated Students legislature that a committee be formed to investigate the lack of job security for student employees.

Gutierrez said he returned to the dorms after vacation to find that he no longer had a job.

"The reason given me was that I failed to complete administrative tasks, such as doing the checkout policy completely," Gutierrez said. "I had no rights of appeal."

After his father contacted university officials, Gutierrez's job appeal was returned to him, according to A.S. President Ron Weigelt.

Gutierrez was returned to his job, according to A.S. President Ron Weigelt. However, Weigelt said his name was added to a Dressler resident advisor committee, which is alledged to add more information to the current policies.

"But by the time the petition was submitted, the job had been returned to the resident advisor," Viren said.

A.S. President Ron Weigelt, who also attended the meeting, said the current policies should be reviewed.

"If there are none that give students rights of job security, that should be changed," he said.

Marianne Hall, FWU director of housing, said she and others in the housing office will meet with Eastern's dorm directors to discuss the issues.

"We hope to agree on a policy giving the R.A.'s a clear path to follow when they are accused of not doing their job adequately," she said.

Student rights questioned

Budgets due

The budgeting deadline for all A.S. recognized clubs and organizations has been extended through tomorrow, according to Denver Parmenter, chairman of the financial affairs committee.

Budget hearings have been set for April 17 and 19 and April 24 and 26 in room 121 of the PUB. Those clubs and organizations submitting budgeting requests should have at least 30 copies available for committee members, Parmenter said.

Any club or organization wishing to be recognized by the A.S. must fill out a recognition form which can be obtained in the A.S. office.

Members must state their club or organization officers, constitution and meeting dates on the form. Those officially recognized by A.S. are eligible for budgeting through S & A fees.

Elbridge Cleaver, once an avowed Marxist-Leninist and supporter of a revolution in the U.S., has become a Panther Party leader, told EWU students last week. "I was a born-again" Christian helped him return to his homeland in America.

Cleaver's speaking tour on bail is charged with three counts of assault with intent to kill and three counts of assault with a deadly weapon.

The charges stem from a Black Panther-police shootout in Oak­land, Calif. He is not charged with shooting any criminals, but only for being responsible for their occurrence.

While contemplating suicide, he said he glanced at the moon and saw a profile of himself.

In his latest book, "Soul on Fire," he said, "As I stared at this image it changed, and I saw my former heroes parade before my eyes. There were Pablo Picasso, Mao Tse-tung, Karl Marx, Friedrich Engels, passing in review..." However, Cleaver was not appearing for a moment in time and then dropping out of sight, like fallen leaves.

"Finally, at the end of the procession, in that shimmering light, the image of Jesus Christ appeared..."

The next morning, Cleaver said, he woke and felt he could return to the U.S. without fear of imprisonment.

"With a prayer on my heart," he went on, "I became an atheist," he said. "But that was a facade that I would present to other people. Inwardly, however, in my heart, there was doubt as I didn't feel comfortable with those philosophies.

It was at this time that he became concerned with the black people's condition in society. In this context, Cleaver encountered the Communist Manifesto.

"I believed the Manifesto was a blueprint for a program to unite and organize people to "move uppercase" the government and change the so­cial and political and economic way."

"I remember saying many times that if there was a God, a Jesus, and He came back down here on this earth, that I would want to be his disciple and that I would lay hands on Him.

"I would be willing to work with all white men," Cleaver continued, "and I was happy to participate in any kind of action to inflict pain."

"Choice given"

Following a abstention between members of the Black Panther Party and the Oakland Police Department, Cleaver was given the choice of serving time in prison or leaving the country. He chose the latter.

He made arrangements to go to Cuba, where he was promised a facility to train people in polit­ical, economic and military skills and philosophies.

"We believed we could come back to America and participate in the revolution that we anticipated," Cleaver explained.

"So I became an atheist," he said. "In other business, the board awarded a remodeling contract for the Sutton (Red) Barn to Goseel Construction."

The building which may be ready by fall will house campus safety, Eastern's photo­graph and fire prevention operations which are now on the first floor of Monroe Hall," said Phil Briggs, EWU news services director.

Briggs also said the visitor center will eventually be located in the remodeled barn.

In further business, the board approved a name change for the department of drama to the department of theatre.

In a memo, Katherine Sherman, provost for academic af­fairs, said the title, department of theatre, is a much more com­monly used designation for de­partments involved in teaching theatre production, in both its performance and technical as­pects.

"Some people think I do it because I hope it will help me stay out of prison. Some people say I do it for the money," he added. "I really feel incapable of eliminating the possibility of conviction that I do it because I have found something that I know is valid and can change one's life and is good for everybody. I want to share it with everybody."

Cleaver's visit was sponsored by Marshall Campus Ministries, Black Education and the Black Student Union.

Any alternative?

The accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant has finally made radiation contamination a reality to countless numbers of people living near such areas. But more important, it is resulting in a sparkled renewal of the intense opposition to nuclear power of recent years.

There is a strong feeling building up against nuclear power and while many people fear and oppose the plants for just the possibility of accidents, it is unlikely that any of the existing plants will close. Much construction, however, may be delayed. Even though the future of our country does not lie in the direction of nuclear power as a source of energy, it will be making the coming years to tide the mad energy-consuming Americans over a period of scarcity.

Conventional sources of energy, such as oil and electricity, are fading. Others, such as coal, have been almost ignored, they are not compatible with the kind of life we like to live.

Without development of nuclear plants and their contribution, the citizens of the United States may see more than gas shortages in the near future.

The money being poured into the pursuit of new power and fuels will not yield a discovery in itself. Time is needed for the search and nuclear power is needed until the country can find something adequate for its needs.

Now, with continued nuclear development will come new and various safety restrictions that can hinder progress. Such regulations are necessary, necessary and actually may lower the chances of an accident occurring.

Obviously, the American people have a choice to make. To continue living at our current standard and make total use of nuclear possibilities, or hinder development for safety's sake and slow down the progress for energy replacement.

April Fool's funny?

I would like to express my thoughts pleasantly, but after having read last week's April Fool's issue of The Easterner, I have seen such special issues attempted by several other newspapers, but nowhere has it turned out so clever and professional.

I am sure you would be proud.

A university or college?

On several accounts, we have been made to feel content by the fact that our institution is not a college any more, but a university. Even a doubting Thomas will believe the status change after seeing Governor Roy endorse it, as page 22 of the "EWU SPECIAL EDITION, 1978" newspaper depicts. It is all a great achievement, and we should be grateful.

Yet, it beggars the imagination of a great many of us Eastern students that after one year after our "college" became "university," the name "Eastern Washington State College" still appears in our grade report.

The question is: why can't it be Eastern Washington University? Popular opinion is sticking to the bulletin, on posters—everywhere else?

The question of what really is a college is regarded as a university in America will not render the answer. For in this was so, why the change to "university" at all? Again, it is not enough to say that this matter is not so significant to cause a concern. The truth is that in many countries other than the U.S., a college is a college, and a university, a university. Their different statuses cannot be compromised. The high school from which I graduated in Nigeria is known as Saint Patrick's College. In this light, every Nigerian knows a college as a high school, or, at best, a "western" school back home. A marked distinction exists between it and a university.

What makes a university is neither old buildings nor large number of students. I believe that we have qualified and experienced professors, capable of imparting the same knowledge to us students, as that in the University of Washington. Being government employees, these professors could still be transplanted to teach at the University of Washington, or any other state university; they would not teach a different thing there from what they teach us here. The books we read are brought from the open market, and they are no different than those read in other universities. We students have been subjected to more intense and rigorous studies for the fact that our institution is no more a college but a university. Our grades report that such intensive studies go with the name "university." I am loath to being so vocal.

It's just that this matter has almost been taken for granted. A year and half since this UNIVERSITY came to be is no joke anymore! Ron Weigelt and co., please act out like you do.

DOMO ONYENDORO

Go on home

Yes, I have been a foreigner in three different countries for a total of 10 years—Japan, Germany and Greece. I've heard the "Yankeee Go Home" and seen a number of anti-American demonstrations. Now that I have fulfilled your wish, please let me anti you on a little secret.

The U.S. has been involved with Iran since WWII, sending food and money in the beginning, Iran had oil and the U.S. had what Iran's leader wanted—"it's called trade (Economics 200)." Some people see it simply as a means to survive, even Khomeini. Along with this trade came U.S. technology. This also included domestic growth for Iran, maybe faster than what you wanted. Part of the growth was the University of Tehran, built during the Shah's reign. I understand it is an excellent school. Also, western ideas were introduced. Women didn't have to wear the long black dresses with veils. They were able to wear clothes which enhanced their natural beauty, not detracted from it. Cars entered Iran from the west and if it is like Greece, a large portion of the families own one.

The people of Iran enjoyed their freedom and it was a good place to live. I'm glad you are happy and can hear people singing "... this is no longer anybody's, it's ours." But don't sing it in the U.S. because we enjoy what we have and we know that it isn't perfect. GO BACK TO IRAN. Yes, even use a little bit of U.S. technology, the airplane to get there. Go back and force people to live a life like the one that they want to live. If you have any trouble, please let the Immigration Office know immediately. I'm sure they will help you out.

Education
By Carol Wetzel
Public school teachers, history shows, have not been given the dignity and respect they've deserved, said William Shreeve, chairman of the education department.

"If you look at teachers in other societies, they are ranked near the top and paid well," Shreeve said. "This hasn't been true in this country.

"In the constitution they talk about education being important, but if you look at teachers of the early period, they moved from household to household every month," he said. "A few people would get together and take up a collection to pay the salaries."

"Teachers strikes and other issues involving employees in the public sector often appear in newspapers today," Shreeve said, and this could be a bad reflection on those teachers.

"But they have not had the right to bargain collectively until very recently. In the private sector, employees have had the right for many years," he said.

Still, about 36 percent of the students at Eastern go into the field of education, Shreeve said. During the 1977-78 placement year, 394 out of a total of 1,192 graduates earned bachelor of education degrees. Of the masters, 65 out of 216 total were in education.

In the 1978 Placement Data report, it says the demand was greater than the supply for teachers of all levels in music, special education, and library, and at the secondary level in industrial arts, business education, distributive education, mathematics, English, vocational home economics and school psychology.

A surplus of teachers was reported in the areas of art, physical education, social studies, psychology and primary grades.

"Most of our people can be placed if they are willing to go where the jobs are," Shreeve said. "In years of high demand, we have placed 70 percent of our students. We have the best placement record in the state."

Education students can earn a reading major (elementary level), multi-ethnic major, multi-ethnic studies major (secondary level), and traffic safety major (secondary), plus various minors from the department. Or they can choose a major area of study from another department.

Graduates must be certified to be teachers, Shreeve said.

"We have a list of competencies they must perfect. They are required to teach full-time for a minimum of two weeks. And they must have experience working in the campus school," he said.

Education students who want to teach are given professional admissions tests in mathematics, speech, reading, language arts and other basic skills, Shreeve said. Also, their GPAs must be kept above a certain level or else remedial work is assigned.

Future teachers are tested on the basic education laws of the state, as well, he said.

And, prospective teachers are given a 30-minute interview with a professor from their major, a professor from the education department and a teacher "in the field."

"It's a subjective judgement," Shreeve said. Students can be questioned on everything from how they would handle a particular discipline problem to the grammar used on their letter of admission. Shreeve pointed out that about 80 percent of the students who go into education do something else besides teach.

"Preparation in teacher education is preparation in a number of things," the chairman said.

"Insurance agencies, especially, want to hire education students because they're highly competitive," he said.

Businesses and industries are hiring people in education for a multitude of educational programs.

In addition students can become principals, assistant principals or guidance counselors in schools. Shreeve said, although that could require work at the master's level.

However, he added, such jobs sometimes be secured with a bachelor's degree plus some teaching.

The education department has teaching centers in Spokane, the Tri-Cities, Walla Walla, Calvile and as far away as the coast, Shreeve said.

These centers are used by in-service people who want to improve and update their skills or who are working on their full time or masters.

And, Shreeve said, the department has quite a good masters program.

"Those for the people who want to teach, he said, "they certainly should like and want to work with young people. Teaching is a life-long learning process, one in which you upgrade in your area as society changes. You never know everything on any subject."

Your turn

Since last week's nuclear accident at the Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania, there has been increasing speculation that a similar accident may take place at other plants in the nation. Do you think a nuclear spillage could occur at Hanford?

Steve Kruger, English, junior, Spokane--"I believe the fear will lead to a slowdown in construction or closure of existing plants."

Marvin Williams, 27, business administration, grad student, Spokane--"I imagine a spillage could occur at any of the plants. Murphy's Law. I'm sure a slowdown of construction or a new plant will happen because so many people were scared by this.

The slowdown will probably be as long as the fear exists. Because of the need for nuclear power, construction will resume later, probably after elections are over."

Prof. William Kidd, history--"I should hope a nuclear spillage won't occur at Hanford. Right now serious doubts should be raised about whether officials in the east are fully disclosing the effects of the accident or if they really know what's going on."

Once that initial obstacle is overcome, the remainder of a speech is apt to flow smoothly and with few hitches, says EWU forensics team member Jack Smith.

Smith, 21, an English education major from Kennewick, is one of five students who will be representing Eastern next week at the Phi Kappa Delta national debating finals at St. Louis, Missouri. Club advisor Larry Kraft, an Eastern communications professor, said the other competitors include EWU Phi Kappa Delta president Kathy Forney, Sandy Erickson, Kathy Moore and Gary Nichols. More than 1,000 students from 125 schools throughout the nation will attend the week-long meet, which features debating contests and various individual speaking events. The EWU team has brought home trophies in four of five meets this year.

Smith, one of the newest members, said he dabbled in public speaking during high school but it wasn't until this year that he became interested in it once again.

"I was taking a speech class winter quarter and Prof. Kraft asked me to prepare for a tournament the next week," he explained. "I did, and it turns out that I won."

Overcoming stage fright

A speaker's biggest fear is that he will stand in front of an audience and have nothing to say, Smith believes.

"I've never had my mind go blank on me or forgotten my speech but I've seen it happen and it's humiliating," he said. "And you can never tell when it may happen."

Although he considers himself a little bit of an introvert, Smith says he adopts another personality when speaking.

"I'm almost like changing identities. There's a real difference between me as Joe Student and what I am as a public speaker," he said. "You can become another person. It's a facade but it seems to work."

At St. Louis, all five Eastern students will take part in two individual speaking events, which include oratory, expository, competitive discussion, extemporaneous and oral interpretive reading.

Smith will be competing in the latter two categories. In extemporaneous, a speaker is given a topic and has only 30 minutes to develop it. For oral interpretation, portions of two literary works are presented.

"In oral interp, you want to tie the readings together with a central theme," Smith explained. "For example, one of my pieces is the thoughts of a Jew after being liberated from Buchenwald. The other is about a Jewish survivor who lost all his family."

Line by line perfection

Preparation and research time varies from speech to speech. Smith estimates he put in about 20 hours on this particular rendition.

"Whether it's Mother Goose or War and Peace, you have to rehearse it over and over, line by line, to get the inflection right," he said. "There are a thousand different ways to say it, depending on the mood and attitude you wish to convey."

A presentation is judged not only on a speaker's performance but on aesthetic interpretation as well. Another factor the judges consider is intensity.

"You try to heighten emotion by building the intensity of your voice. You can also use facial expression but little other physical movement," he said. The judges are looking for quality work, not cheap material that embarrasses or has shock value.

Competition in the St. Louis meet will be tough, Smith admits. About 10 percent of the contestants in each category will be awarded gold medals.

"It's a very competitive game all the time. Some people will try to psych you out," he said, grinning. "Once when I was seen as a rival right in front of me and kept filing her nails, trying to distract me. Others will do obvious things, like yawning."

Smith said contestants have a problem other than stage fright to deal with.

"In this game, it is totally you. There is nothing or no one else to blame or give credit to," he said. "That's why it's so challenging. But you can also cause image problems.

"You want to displac your ego. Win or lose, I try not to be affected because of the outcome of a meet," he added. "There's always going to be highs and lows in whatever you're doing. You just can't let it affect your whole life."

Weaving workshop set

By Linda Rubin

The rhythmic magic of spinning has enthralled for centuries and today, men as well as women and children are becoming spinning enthusiasts. Combined with the delight of spinning with the joys of working with natural dyes and people might enjoy bringing their own spinning wheels or drop spindles if they wish to but she will have some available.

In the second part of the session, Elliot will demonstrate natural dyeing. Again, workshop members can bring their own yarn but Elliot said she will have some on hand.

"We will be working with three different natural dyes. One will be from brown onions and some people might enjoy bringing their own onion skins," she said. "This will be a good opportunity to learn dyeing techniques which can safely be used at home."

Women and advertising

The presentation on women and advertising has been slow to reflect the widening of career opportunities and lifestyles which U.S. women experience today.

In his Tuesday noon presentation on women and advertising, Hulpke will show a series of slides to illustrate the media's interpretation of today's women. "According to the majority of ads, today's woman is either a housewife, sex symbol or engaged in a safe occupation, such as a teacher, nurse, or any paid occupation which is basically an extension of the mother-housewife role," he said.

Native Americans

Pageantry proves pride

By Carol Wetzel

Native Americans at Eastern are proud of their heritage, and they are showing it two ways this month.

This is Indian Awareness Week, an annual event that began when the Indian Education Program was introduced here in 1979, said Shannon LaBatte, student counselor for the program.

And later this month, Colleen Friedlander, 19-year-old sophomore majoring in dental hygiene, will travel to Phoenix, Ariz., to compete in the First Indian U.S.A. Pageant. The contest coincides with the first All-Indian World’s Fair, also in Phoenix.

Awareness week begins

Indian Awareness Week kicked off Tuesday with a mini powwow in the PUB, LaBatte said. Films, lectures, and panel discussions, arts and crafts sale and an all-Indian basketball tournament are among the week’s activities.

Inter-tribal social dances and competition will be Friday, Saturday and Sunday, LaBatte said. Representatives from tribes throughout the Northwest will be dancing.

Friedlander, who was chosen by members of the EWU Native American Student Association (Awareness Week sponsor) and staff at the Indian Education Center, has been helping coordinate the week’s activities.

In addition, she has been traveling throughout the Northwest as Eastern’s representative to tribal affairs and other events.

The competition, which will compete with girls from South and North America and Hawaii, is open to all EWU women. The Sponsor Corps drill team marched to eighth place in their category.

“About 90 percent of the riders rated the buses as good or excellent,” Jantz said.

There are still three openings on the commuter bus committee. Anyone interested may contact Jantz at the A.S. office, third floor PUB.

Drill team marches in California contest

The 13 members of the EWU Sponsor Corps drill team marched to eighth place in their category in national competition last month at Anaheim, Calif.

Eastern’s squad, all women, participated in the event with other schools, including Texas A & M, Brigham Young University, the U.S. Air Force Academy and the University of Southern California.

“The girls practiced very hard and the competition was stiff,” said Capt. James L. Spring, ROTC advisor for the group.

Spring said the girls had to make it next year to another invitational drill meet, which would be anywhere from Tulane University in New Orleans to the University of Arizona in Tempe.

The Sponsor Corps, Spring said, was formed in 1953 and is open to all EWU women. The corps is not affiliated with the ROTC program;” he said. It’s main functions are to build important traits such as poise, management ability, self-confidence, and the ability to perform under pressure, all of which are important in the job market as well as home.

The group represents Eastern in area parades, provides hostesses for the annual president’s reception, and works during the fall and spring blood drives on campus.

Anyone interested in joining, Spring said, should contact him or Kathy Simmons at 9-2366 in Cadet Hall.

Friedlander will represent Eastern later this month at the first Miss Indian U.S.A. contest in Phoenix, Arizona.

Bus riders satisfied

Overall results of a commuter bus survey conducted last quarter indicate that 90 percent of the 500 riders surveyed are satisfied with the service, according to Curt Jantz, bus committee chairman.

“About 90 percent of the riders rated the buses as good or excellent,” Jantz said.

Jantz said that if more funding is obtained for next year, more frequent runs may be possible, especially in the afternoon, evening and weekends. Currently, the bus service is funded by subsidies from the City of Cheney and Associated Students, in addition to bus fares and passes.

“These ideas that we received will all go towards improving next year’s service,” Jantz said.

“I don’t know if they can be realized but we can continue to work towards them,” Jantz said.

There are still three openings on the commuter bus committee. Anyone interested may contact Jantz at the A.S. office, third floor PUB.

Concert features whale of a tribute

Saying the whales is not specifically what the Eastern Washington University Symphony Orchestra is rehearsing to do, but orchestra members are making an unusual tribute to the mammoth beings.

Their performance will be at 8 p.m. Monday April 9, in Shoveller Auditorium. The group is directed by Carolann Haley, a graduate student majoring in instrumental conducting.

The program features a composition entitled "And God Created Great Whales" by Alan Hovhaness, a contemporary composer living in Washington. This unique piece combines descriptive orchestration with recorded songs of hump-back whales to produce a color and startling effect, says Haley.

Also featured on the program will be Mendelssohn's "Piano Concerto No. 2 in D Minor." Solos for the performance will be Bret Blankenship, a junior majoring in piano performance.

Other selections include Beethoven's "Coriolan Overture" and the "Hofherr Suite for String Orchestra" by Edvard Grieg.

Supertramp here again

The hard-hitting rock group, Supertramp, will make a return performance to Spokane on Sunday, April 15.

The concert is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Spokane Coliseum. Tickets for reserved seating are now on sale at all M & M outlets for $7 and $7.50.

Dance opens tonight

University Dance Theatre's ACT II (The Dance) will open tonight at the Eastern Washington University Theatre in Cheney. Curtain will be at 8 p.m.

The spring dance concert, different from Eastern's fall dance concert, "ACT I," consists of a modern suite, "Undersea," and "ome Like it Hot, Blue, or Fielding and choreographed by Leonard J. Fowler, artist-in-residence at Eastern.

Also among the works will be a modern piece, "Icarus," choreographed by graduate choreographer Linda Lincoln. "Icarus" is a dance of mythological origin in which the character portrayed seeks his life's freedom through movement. Special lighting effects for ACT II: (The Dance) are by Norman C. Boulanger, chairman of the department of drama at EWU.

ACT II (The Dance) will run April 6, 7, 12, 13, 14, and 19 and 20 in the University Theatre. Admission is $3, EWU students free.

A few years ago, if you were hungry and in downtown Spokane, you were more or less stranded. For many local gourmets, this problem was resolved when the Riverside McDonald's opened. But if you are willing to spend a little extra cash, there are a few alternatives.

One such alternative is the "Sandwich Gardens," a pleasant, though somewhat bland, sandwich shop located in the Riverside Square next to Nordstrom's. The menu features basic sandwich makings, (turkey, roast beef, etc.) with the usual accompaniments (mustard, mayonnaise, etc.) on French, rye or wheat bread. A few salads, soups, desserts and beverages finish off the menu. Since tables trail through the Square, passing shoppers comprise the "Gar­ dens" atmosphere.

But for a few cents more, you can enjoy the charm of one of Spokane's true delicatessens, "Kowalski's," settled in a window-lined corner of the Sherwood Mall. Done in soft blues and comfortable Studio Chairs, "Kowalski's" seems to make an inexpensive lunch much slower and more enjoyable.

Along with the standards, "Kowalski's" also offers several delightful departures. "Marilyn's sandwich," lavished with tomato, bacon, avocado and creamed cheese on French, and the "Crab Sandwich" with crabmeat and cheddar cheese atop avocado and French bread are only a couple of the variations.

Soups (clam chowder every Friday), chili plates with Polish sausage, salads, desserts, a special children's menu and a small list of imported wines are all the make the selection at "Kowalski's" much more complete.

Since "Kowalski's" opened only last summer, it has not had the opportunity to establish itself like the "Sandwich Gardens." But once more people discover the charm of this fairly new delicatessen, "Sandwich Gardens" will have more than enough competition.

Martians invade JFK today

At 1 o'clock this afternoon in Kennedy Library Auditorium, the Washington State University Brown Bag Reader's Theatre will re-create the famous War of the Worlds radio broadcast of 1938. The cast, students from the WSU speech department, will present the drama very much as it was originally performed by Orson Welles and his Mercury Theatre players, using the original script and sound effects, according to director Jan Miller.

The play is adapted from a story by H.G. Wells, first published in 1898. Wells capitalized on sensational late 19th century scientific discoveries of what were believed to be canals on Mars, suggesting speculation that the red planet harbored advanced life forms. He also sought to have his readers, the proud masters and colonizers of the British Empire, what it would be like to be taken over by conquerors from beyond the horizon. His story quickly became a science fiction classic, and its power and realism were easily adapted 30 years later for the Mercury Theatre by an unknown young playwright named Howard Koch.

Intended by producer Orson Welles as a Halloween joke, the War of the Worlds was first broadcast at 8 p.m. Oct. 30, 1938. Few listeners were skeptical or sophisticated enough to realize that the program was fictional; the story, presented in a news-release format, progresses quickly from an account of explosions on sensational late 19th century scientific discoveries of what were believed to be canals on Mars, suggesting speculation that the red planet harbored advanced life forms. He also sought to have his readers, the proud masters and colonizers of the British Empire, what it would be like to be taken over by conquerors from beyond the horizon. His story quickly became a science fiction classic, and its power and realism were easily adapted 30 years later for the Mercury Theatre by an unknown young playwright named Howard Koch.

Today's performance of the War of the Worlds is sponsored by the EWU Artistic and Lecture Committee. There is no admission charge, but seating is limited.

Talent winner returns
Sing with feeling

By Betty Burkle
The final lines of “Feelin’” gently rolled out over the rapt, silent audience. For a few moments there was no sound at all. The lights came on, and spectators were on their feet, whistling, applauding, not believing what they had just heard. Don Gamundoy had poured so much feeling into his performance that he touched everyone in the crowded room.

“I was really shocked. People started to stand up. I didn’t know if I should sit there or walk off the stage. I thought, ‘I’m not the program. Everyone else deserves a standing ovation, too.’”

Gamundoy started out in his hometown of Honolulu, Hawaii. “I used to play benefits, weddings,” he explained. “I was really shocked. People felt I was mad, upset; I felt everything.”

Gamundoy said, “I chose the Streeter Hall Talent Show last month was accepted with his usual amount of humor. He told the audience “This is the first time I’ve won the Miss America Beauty Pageant. I’d like to welcome you to the Gong Show.”

Don Gamundoy will follow

Thinking then that his evenings performance was over, Gamundoy walked off stage only to be called back by the audience.

“Your song flowed,” admitted Gamundoy, “I was really relaxed. I wanted to do it for the audience.”

He chose the song “You,” a slow moving song with such thank-you lines as “You are the ones that make me happy when everything else is gray.”

Later Gamundoy said, “I chose the song because it was saying what I felt. I wanted to say, ‘Hey, thanks a lot for listening to me.’”

Gamundoy’s singing career started out in his home town of Honolulu, Hawaii. “I used to play benefits, weddings. The kind of music I grew up with is different from what most people are used to, so I didn’t know if the audience at the talent show would accept my songs. But they felt, as I did, the song,” he said. “I couldn’t see the audience, but I could sense them. I felt the audience move with me, and I was really in the song. I was mad, upset; I felt everything.”

Gamundoy explained, “If I can create a caring in them, then I’ve really accomplished something. In the future, I plan on going into medical social work.”

This empathy comes through not only in his work, but also in his singing. Those who missed his performance at the Streeter Hall Talent Show still have a chance to hear him at a noon show in the PUB on Thursday, April 12. Everyone is welcome and admission is free, as are all PUB sponsored nooners. See for yourself if Gamundoy’s success is due only to his charismatic voice, or if to, as he jokes, “My lucky socks. The ones I never wash.”

Who knows? Cheney may have discovered another Donny Osmond.

Netters swamped

The men’s tennis team was swamped by arch-rival Pacific Lutheran University 8-1 last Saturday, with the only Eagle win coming from Ron Mortensen, who defeated his opponent 6-4, 6-2 in straight sets.

PLU’s Lates, the defending Northwest Conference champions, won five out of six singles matches and swept the three doubles matches to drop the Eagles with losses to 2-6.

On Friday, the Eagles defeated Seattle University at Seattle by 6-3 with returnees Bill Brooks and Todd Erickson leading the pack of winners, which also included Mortensen and Jeff Petersen.

In the doubles competition, the teams of Barry DePauw/Ron Mortensen and Tom Erickson/Tom Thompson were also winners.

Coach Ron Raver said he is anticipating another excellent season with four veterans, Brooks, DePauw, Erickson and Dick Roth returning from last year.

Raver said he expects help from Mortensen, a transfer student from Bellevue Community College; Tom Thompson, a transfer from Spokane Falls Community College; Jeff Peterson, a transfer from Columbia Basin College; and Mike Drake, a freshman who won the Alaska State Junior Singles Championship last year.

Paul Scott, a sophomore at Eastern, was notified Wednesday that he has been named to the All-American rifle team for 1979. Scott and three other rifle team members will represent EWU in a national collegiate competition at Annapolis, Maryland, this weekend. The shooting skills of Scott and his teammates put the Eagles among the top 10 squads in the nation.

Softball season opens

The women’s softball season at EWU opens Saturday with a doubleheader against the Whitworth Pirates at Moon Field in Cheney, said softball club spokesperson Dee Haun.

“We will be picking up games with some intramural, Spokane city league and Cheney city league teams as the season goes on,” she said.

“This team has come a long way in two years,” Hau added.

Eagles dominate meet

The Eagle track team came away with seven firsts, five seconds, four thirds and four fourth-place finishes last Saturday at Woodward Field in a meet that was marred by gusting winds and cold temperatures.

“We did a fine job in the field events and came away with three first place finishes in the triple jump, high jump and the javelin,” said Jerry Martin, EWU track coach. “It’s pretty hard to evaluate the other events because of the weather, but I know the guys are in good shape.”

The Eagles swept first and second places in the triple jump as Jeff Frederick and Ron Thomas covered the distance in 48 feet 7 inches and 47 feet 4 inches, respectively.

The EWU squad also took the top three places in the thousand meter run with John Elsip leading the pack, followed by John Blasslock and Jim Forgath.

Other Eagle first-place finishers included Vic White in the high jump, who won with a 6-foot 8-inch leap, and Mike Malech who won the javelin competition with a 183-foot 5-inch throw. Mike Baiderson topped the 200-meter dash in 21.9 seconds, and Steve Kiesel took the 400 in 56 seconds flat.

Second place finishers included Steve Quigley in the shot put, Rick Gehrs in the 400-meter dash, Dave Sullivan in the 200-meter dash.

Third place finishers included the 400 relay team, Jay Terry in the steplechase, and Tom Thomas in the long jump.

Fourth place finishers included Quigley in the discus, Malech in the shot put, Brian McKinzie in the triple jump and Jay Manning in the 800-meter dash.

The track meet featured teams from Washington State University, Spokane Community College, Whitman College, Whitworth College, and Idaho College.

Martin said the team travels to Ellensburg this Saturday to compete against Central Washington and the University of Idaho.

This Sunday and Monday will be the Invitational Decathlon, with five events scheduled for each day. Participants for the Eagles will be Steve Erickson, Mark Pierce, and Brad Dully.

Snow slows golfers

Blame the weatherman for the EWU golf team’s slow start this season.

“The weather hasn’t given us much of a chance to get out and practice,” said Coach Don Kallem, last year’s District I Coach of the Year. “It’s a little tough to play in the snow. Our golfers have only been able to get in a few rounds before our first two tournaments. I’m still confident that this will be a good year for us.”

Kallem has good reason to be optimistic, as he has four golfers with varsity experience returning. Last year’s team won the district title and went on to place 12th in NAIA national competition.

The Eagles opened their season with a weak performance at the Seattle University Invitational, but came back with an improved effort good enough for a third place finish in the Tri-Cities Invitational last weekend. Leading scorers for Eastern in that tournament were George Menegus, Gene Kahn, Steve Micheielsen and Steve Nielke, all of whom were one stroke apart.

Women work hard

With Jerry King

EAGLE SCREAMS: Don't think star player has a future playing basketball at EWU! You'd better believe it. Both Vic and Coach Jerry Krause are anxious for the return of the '64 lever.

The new season will open against Whitworth, a team that has been good on defense. The Eagles could get a chance to avenge an earlier loss to Gonzaga today at 2 p.m. in Spokane.

The NCAA approved a resolution that sets a minimum of 12 hours a week for a four-year scholarship school to make the top 10.

Women's track team

硬 work, not ability, will be the key to success for Eastern's women's track team, said Coach Sheila Wilkins.

"We are a small group, but we are a very talented group because we are not afraid to work hard," she said.

Returning for EWU is senior Lisa Sorrell, two-time defending national champion and Wilkins expects to place for Eastern at the AIAW national meet in May at Michigan State University.

In the 3,000 meter, Eastern took first, clocking a 9:44, Wilkins noted that four freshmen and a sophomore, Shane VanDemark placed third in the 1,500 meter run with a time of 4:39.5.

In the 800 meter, Eastern took first, clocking a 1:58, and in the 1,600 relay, EWU's team took first with a 3:47.0.

In other events, Laura Pigkin captured third place in 100 high hurdles with a time of 17.7. In field events, Tammy Grubb placed second in discus with a throw of 139'. Paula better took third, throwing 117'.

In the shot, Deid Lyn Harris took first, putting 42'4". Grubb placed third at 38'6", and Better grabbed fifth at 32'3".

Two fall to EWU

EWU's women's tennis team won two dual matches last week against Spokane Community College and College of Idaho. College said Coach Sunny Herold.

Eastern was victorious over SCC on March 28 on the indoor court, 9-0. The Eagles beat CBC 4-0 inside the field house two days later.

"In the single matches we played very well," Herold said.

"Both our two new players played well.

"Our number one player this spring is Trudy Motok, a junior transfer from the University of Hawaii, Hilo."

The other returning players to the EWU squad are Rosemary Chubb-Stuart, junior, and Vicki Hunt, senior.

Cougss take doubleheader

By Jerry King

"It seemed like we fielded two different teams out there," baseball coach Ed Chissus said Saturday afternoon after his Eastern Washington State Cougars dropped a double-header at Pullman.

The Eagles went down at the hands of the powerful Washington State Cougars, with scores of 14-1 and 3-2.

"We never really got started in the first game," said Chissus. "There were a lot of mistakes, too. We didn't get much defensive help against the plate.

The Eagles hitting and fielding was about as cold as the weather Saturday, with no individual standout.

"One big hit or sparkling defensive play would have all we needed in the second game," noted Chissus. "But we just couldn't get untracked.

After going 1-1 in both of their 36-game schedule, the record now stands at 7-5. Eastern played Whitworth Wednesday (results too late for press time) and gets a chance to avenge an earlier loss to Gonzaga today at 2 p.m. in Spokane.

This weekend finds the Eagles at home with an important three-game series against a very talented team.

Eastern's Chuck McGuire, a hard thrower from Renton, and Ken Wilcox, a senior from Trail, B.C., teamed up for sterling pitching performances, silencing the big Cougar bats. But they didn't get much defensive help defensively or at the plate.
