The Vice President of Business and Management, Fred Johns, told the AS Legislative Monday, upon review of enrollment projections, there now exists just a "$4,000 problem." Johns explained the $4,000 shortage was "very small in relation to the total budget," and perhaps might be taken care of if Winter and Spring Quarter projections are more than calculated.

Johns indicated if cuts were to come about, they would be from any excess money in the Magic Bus subsidy.

PUB Manager, Curt Huff told The Easterner he was in agreement with this as long as no money is cut that would affect the service of the bus.

How Come Not Sooner?
When Speaker Gary Nisker asked why the figures are not measured until the tenth day of the quarter and at that time "there are a lot of other fish to fry,"

When legislator David Dreidenbach pressed the issue, Johns replied there was no intention to "keep anyone in the dark." He said recommendation from the Legislative Review Committee would be made to see that any violations take place near the end of the quarter, said Ogden.

According to Ogden, the college disciplinary officer has not existed since 1971, the plaintiff must make his charge either to the Superior Court, or to Ogden, college disciplinary officer.

In nearly 400 cases since 1971, the charge has been taken to Ogden, bypassing the Superior Court, and depriving the student of being tried by his peers.

According to Ogden, the court has been bypassed because it is inefficient. "Every time there has been a student court functioning, it has died from amortization," he said.

The largest single share of violations takes place near the end of the quarter, said Ogden. Those in the court are unwilling to devote the time necessary to hear cases and sort through evidence during those critical weeks before finals, so the overload has been sent to Ogden.

Another effect of "amortization" is reluctance of students to sit in judgment of other students due to peer pressure, and verbal abuse, which is produced by the setting. Ogden feels students get false impressions of the court system from watching television and find themselves uncomfortable in the

The Associated Students Superior Court, consists of six justices who find they have very little to do as a result of being bypassed by a clause in the Judicial Act which allows the person making the charge to choose where it will be heard.

When a violation of the Student Code of Conduct occurs, it is supposed to be handled by the Resident Hall Court, consisting of one member from each hall, and one member at large.

The Hall Court
Since the Resident Hall Court has not existed since 1971, the plaintiff must make his charge either to the Superior Court, or to Ogden, college disciplinary officer.

In nearly 400 cases since 1971, the charge has been taken to Ogden, bypassing the Superior Court, and depriving the student of being tried by his peers.

According to Ogden, the college disciplinary officer has not existed since 1971, the plaintiff must make his charge either to the Superior Court, or to Ogden, college disciplinary officer. Ogden feels interferes with the actual position of judge.

Reasonable Doubt Unnecessary
A further misconception garnered from too much television, which Ogden feels interferes with the court's effectiveness, is the idea of guilt beyond a shadow of reasonable doubt.

The judicial code, revised in 1971 by a committee of which Ogden was a member, is based on, "a preponderance of evidence." This means, "is there more of a chance that it happened than that it didn't!," Ogden said.

The court. Ogden feels, gets suspended in the red tape of providing conclusive evidence of guilt which is not necessary since it is a judicial system and not a court of law.

"There's always a 'yes but,'" Ogden said. The cases are dismissed and no convictions are made, so people get discouraged with the court's effectiveness and bypass it altogether.

According to Ogden, the college provides a "haven for students—they do get special treatment." For this reason, the sanctions imposed by the college must be "fair and reasonable," or civil control will take over.

The Superior Court, and the disciplinary officer can impose minor disciplinary sanctions, such as an oral admonition, an oral or written warning, a written censure, or recommend a fine or probation.

These sanctions can be appealed to the college disciplinary committee. All hearings before the committee, judgment on cases included, are recommended. President Emerson Shuck, who is the only person who can give a suspension.

Because charges may be filed of-campus as well as on, students are subject to a one-sided double jeopardy. While the civil authorities do not interfere once a student has been disciplined by the college, a student who has been through the civil courts must go before Ogden. He or she may receive further disciplinary action, and if these charges have been filed on campus as well.

A further reason that students avoid the Superior Court, Ogden said, is because forty to 50 onlookers and several students trying to play judge demeane those with non-aggressive personalities.

Revising the System
Lyle Grambo, attorney general for Associated Students, and Pat O'Donnell, chief justice of the A. S. Superior Court, are presently attempting to re-establish the Resident Hall Court.

About this attempt at revision, Johns said, "He (O'Donnell) said, 'There is no more committed nor resourceful person than myself. Quite possibly we may see a change.'"

According to O'Donnell, they believe to set up the lower court in order to document its inefficiency and to remove it from the Judicial Act.

Further, he wishes to alter the present structure, and is charged to choose where he wishes the case to be heard. This, O'Donnell said, may come back to the Superior Court, and allow students to judge students again.

Double Jeopardy
While most violations involving minor offenses are not charged, civil charges can be filed with civil authorities, as in the recent case of a student caught shoplifting an album from the Bookstore. He was sentenced to 15 days in jail.

Dr. Thereson C. Shuck, president of Eastern Washington State College, was elected president-elect of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities Nov. 15 at its convention in Bal Harbour, Fla.

He will serve in this capacity until November, 1975 when he will assume the AASCU presidency.

The AASCU, which represents 314 state colleges and universities throughout the country which enroll approximately one-quarter of the nation's college students, has the largest membership of any public four-year higher education association in the nation.

Shuck was elected by the more than 200 colleges and university presidents attending the convention.

President of EWSI since the spring of 1967, he has been a member of the Board of Directors of AASCU for four years, and serves as board liaison with the Committee on Academic Freedom, Responsibility and Tenure, and the Committee of Federal Regulations. He was also a member of the AASCU Standing Committee on Graduate Studies.

Watch Nostalgia Theater

By Carl Wirsching

There is a television program aired on KREM Sundays at 11:15 p.m. which should be required viewing for anyone who has an interest in quality movies made in the earlier days of Hollywood.

The program, "Nostalgia Theater," is the brainchild of the weatherman at the station, Dave Soper. He has put together a viewing package that makes you look forward to the coming of the weekend. The weatherman has gathered a fine selection of old-time classics.

A serial, "The Black Widow," begins the program. The " Widow" is a late 40's production with US against THEM. THEM seems to be a composite of many commercial s. This makes the viewing more pleasant but it might also cause the program to fold from lack of financial support.

So, turn on, tune in, and drop Dave a line telling him what you think of the show and make a request if you have one.

IN MY OPINION

What do you think of the performance of the Easterner so far this year?

Gary Nisker
Junior, Recreation
You have excellent sports coverage. Being the speaker of the legislature I have an in, and reading The Easterner I'll see little discrepancies. I don't like how people read the editorials and make judgements based just on them without knowing the whole story behind them.

Kerry Smith
Transfer Student, Sociology
I like the way the opinions are voiced, especially the Professors' Prerogative, letters to the editor and the editorials. They sound real, like they came from real people.

Michelle Moore
Sophomore, Undeclared
I think this year's paper is a lot better than last year's. Last year it bored me to death; this year I'm interested. I read everything, just about.

Kevin Nollette
Freshman, Undeclared
Basically it is well written and seems factual. The layout is very good and appealing to the eye. But, sometimes, there is an overuse of photographs.

The Professors' Prerogative is being used by some profs in very strange ways. Perhaps you should use it only when there is something excellent.

Editorials are very good. I especially like Paul's Parables because it uses satire. You might use lampooning more.

Mike Anderson, president of the Vets Coop, said he really couldn't find the right words to express how he felt about Kingsley. He said that Kingsley was unselfish and very concerned for his fellow man. Anderson also said, "If I could pattern my life after anyone, it would be him."

Kingsley's wife, Katherine, received a book composed of letters from the veterans which expressed their appreciation and admiration for Mr. Kingsley. Mrs. Kingsley is the Supervisor of Students Teachers in the Education Department.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR BERNARD KINGSLEY, of the Education Department, lost a two month fight with cancer at three a.m. Nov. 14.

Many people were saddened at the loss. Doctor William Shreeve, chairman of Kingsley's department said, "Bernie was an asset to the college and to the department. He had a good sense of humor and his students responded to him positively. He was a good family man and he valued the time he could spend with his family. Bernie was the kind of guy who would help anyone who asked. I lost a really good friend."

Larry Williams, Veterans Cooperator said, "He helped veterans get jobs. If he found out that a vet wasn't getting enough to eat he made sure someone knew about it. He often took the vet home with him."

Patti Case, director of Vets Upward Bound said he always had time for students. She also said he made the vets think about where they were now and where they were going.

Professor Kingsley Dies

Kingsley came to Eastern in 1955 and was appointed to the teaching program in the Education Department. He received his Bachelors of Science Degree at Teachers College and his Masters from Columbia University. He also attended the University of California, Stanford University and Washington State University.

He taught one year of private school and five years of public school before beginning his 16 year career at Eastern.

Kingsley wrote a book entitled "Reading Skills" and is listed in "Who's Who" in the West.

The recipient of Eastern's "Teacher of the Year Award" in 1970, Kingsley served on numerous community and school committees.

He was chairman of the swimming section of the Junior Olympics for the A.A.C. Inland Empire Region 12 from 1965 to the present. He was also an official of the swimming events in the National Junior Olympics.

He served as a member of Spokane's Human Relations Council and as President-elect of the Spokane International Reading Association.

He was also a Democratic precinct chairman and chairman of the Heart Drive in precinct three in 1972.

Kingsley was the member of many Education Department committees including the Public Relations Committee and the Early Childhood Education Committee.

A major contributor to the Veterans programs on campus, Kingsley served on the Board of Directors of the Veterans Coop and taught "Veterns Upward Bound." According to Mike Anderson, Kingsley did much more than just teach the veterans in the classroom. Faced with a lack of materials in the remedial reading program, Kingsley used his own time to go out and find the needed books.

Kingsley is survived by his wife, Katherine, a son, Bernie, and two daughters, Debbie and Celeste.
Faculty Lobbies for Pay Raises

In a memo from Dr. Philip Marshall, vice president of Academic Affairs, to EWSR Presi dent Shuck, Nov. 1, stated, "College teachers nationally have barely kept up with inflation while the seven-state (Western states used for a scale) faculties have not. Per capita income in Washington is running well ahead of inflation and the same is true of the hourly wage earner in the state. However, Eastern faculty members would need an immediate 10 per cent increase to catch up with inflation according to the consumer price index."

In a letter to the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Marshall compared the economic status of doctors, dentists, lawyers and professors, all requiring seven to 10 years education and training beyond high school.

He gave figures showing the highest median income of doctors compared to the other professions. Compared to doctors who have maintained a 100 per cent median income since 1949, dentists earned a 76 per cent median income in 1949 and increased to 81 per cent in 1974. Lawyers for that same time period fell six per cent below and professors lost 18 per cent.

Legislative Committee

Irland Killen, Professor, Insti tutional Education and Technology, chairman of the Legislative Committee, said an increase built into at Western, Central and Eastern, and number two priorities, said an increment built into at Western, Central and Eastern.

American Federation of Teachers

Approximately 100 faculty members of EWSR have joined a statewide union, the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) concluded at the AFT convention.

Allen Neils, Economics Department and president of Eastern's AFT, said any union presently functioning does not concern itself with just salaries. He cited the place justice as the most important. "Does somebody else tell me what I should do, or do I have some say?" he asked.

"I am forced to pay a premium for being in the union," Neils said. "I should be paid what I am worth, and I am not doing that. Presidents and professors should not be made to subsidize the tax payer.

He called the supply and demand of professors and legislators "tremendous leverage" in determining faculty salaries.

AFT Strong State Wide

The AFT is effectively organized at Eastern, said Neils. "We are in the process right now of formulating our plan of action for the year centering on the legislative through the United Labor Board of the AFL-CIO; collective bargaining elections and a court case if we are not recognized."

Neils is working for preferance for a collective bargaining over collective bargaining.

Striking the Only Answer?

In answering whether he approved of a strike, Neils said, "It is necessary to be organized before you strike, or it is meaningless. Today there are too many people uncommitted to that type of action, and they must be made aware of all that is involved."

He said the average professor makes approximately the same as the Magic Bus drivers.

"That is a symptom of what is happening, the plight of the faculty is not too bad. I feel we are being abused by both the administration and the legislature.""Commitment to Students

Neils feels there is great commitment on the part of professors to their students. "That is the only thing that keeps them going. It is that commitment wasn't there, you couldn't come on a Monday morning and find the place empty."

Concern for Students

Neils and West Stone, Math Dept. and AFT member, stressed salaries are not their only concern. "We believe student fees in the state colleges ought to be close to nothing," Stone said.

Neils stated the AFT is about to introduce the idea of lowering student fees in state colleges in Washington to the Spokane Labor Council.

"We are pricing students out," he said. "We are nicking and diming them to death."

Neils feels the state must commit resources to higher education.

"Either you pay the money to do a decent job, or close the damn thing down," he said. "We are turning qualified people away from college because they can't afford it."

Inflation, Lack of Raises, and how it has Affected One Professor

"I came here in 1969," Dr. Robert Herold, Economics Dept. said. "I left a job with the federal government to start teaching, and took a pay cut of $5,000.

Had he stayed with the government he estimates the difference in his salary would now amount to $14,000.

Herold said he and his wife had budgeted the amount he would earn at Eastern and managed until 1972. "In 1970 and 71, they began taking retirement out and we received no pay raise," he stated.

"What was tolerable in 1969 became intolerable. My wife worked part-time until 1973 for extra income. Now she is still working part-time, but the money has to go for necessities."

Shared Government Labor-management relations are in an advisory position, he said. "There are different interests to protect different interests. Different problems to constituencies. College faculties are slow to recognize they are in the same positions."

He likened the problem to a feudal system where the legislators bestowed a few crumbs to the peasants to make them feel they are in the government. "Fact of the matter is, though, that the peasants have no real voice in determining the quantity of crumbs, or whether there would be crumbs at all," he said. "I don't think what we have here is in the best interest of the student."

He said too much time is necessarily spent trying to figure where enough money is coming in from to pay the milkman, taking away time normally spent furthering his academic career.

"I have written a paper for presentation at an academic conference or school published something every year since I have been here," he said. "I think that's very important, and it's brought right into the classroom." This year he is working where in the world will I go to have the time to work on a paper.

"All those things have a negative affect on the academic system, he said. Time normally spent doing research or reviewing is now being spent trying to find extra sources of income. "It can't but hurt the academic," he said.
Campus Safety investigated a reported pot party in North Dryden Hall Nov. 13. The occupant of the room gave Sgt. Larry Montague, Campus Safety, permission to enter the room and investigate the complaint. After hearing her rights she said she would answer questions but did not wish to make a written statement, according to the report. Montague said he found smoking marijuana in the room. The occupant told Montague she and a friend had been smoking marijuana earlier in the day, according to the report. The people were turned over to Al Ogdon, deal of Student Services. Both girls were fined $50. The occupant had $30 suspended.

Gary Minkler had a Winchester shotgun stolen from his car parked in Lot No. 9 Nov. 14.

Fourth floor RA, Suresh Tulsidas, reported smoke coming from the ventilators on several floors in Pearce Hall Nov. 12. Officer Don Popejoy, Campus Safety, found the source of the smoke in the power room. Don Retig, foreman of utility services at the physical plant, discovered a transformer had been suffered a power surge and burned out. There was no danger of fire, Popejoy said. A brown and cream coloured Craig Cassette tape recorder valued at $30 was stolen from The Easterner office Nov. 14. There is a reward being offered for the return of the recorder to The Easterner office, room 119 in the PUB. The refrigerator from the kitchen of the third floor of North Dryden Hall was stolen Nov. 13. This refrigerator was property of Dryden Hall since it was purchased with dorm funds.

Professor's Prerogative Major Trend Of Concern

This column is an open forum for all EWSC professors. The opinions expressed are those of the writer and not necessarily those of The Easterner.

Sterling Gerber
Associate Professor
Applied Psychology

As I muse over the educational experience of students at EWSC and perhaps elsewhere, I find much to be pleased about, much room for improvement. Some evidences "earned" by skillfully playing an academic game, perception defines as maximum evidence with minimum investment. Not only cheat those who are taken in by the seeming authenticity of evidence but likewise cheat the bearer.

False Economy

Two recent incident typify the third type, false economy. Both stem from a somewhat immature philosophy suggesting that professors and students are adversaries and that all that really matters is the final score. One incident had to do with plagiarism. Probably most teachers who employ written samples of student work as a vehicle to promote learning have had the experience of reading not only clever rewrites of material from previous terms, but even verbatim copies; thermo-fax reproductions even show up- usually with the comment, "I wanted to keep the original for my files." One result of such practices is a reduc tion in the use of term papers and other written samples, thereby not only cheating the plagiarizer but subsequently, other students who may have benefited by the experience. Someday we may outgrow the plagiarism mentality.

Another even more pervasive problem consists of avoiding, or slighting assignments and experiences on the grounds that it is "not relevant to my future goals." To pre-judge any experience as irrelevant is to so determine it. Obviously what is not learned cannot be used. So to say it will not be useful because it will not be useful," is a partly weak cop-out. The demand that professors, even with their training and experience, cannot presume, however, that someone without training and experience is in a better posture for prophecy seems at least equally questionable. Both plagiarism and the self-destructive gross false economy resulting from an adversary approach to education.

Central Advising Problems Examined

By Colleen McFarland
Staff Writer

The November meeting of the Student Needs Task Force Committee (SNTF) featured a two-hour "brainstorming session focusing primarily on problems in Central Advising. Game rules were simple and unrestrictive.

In the Year 1979

A top fashion magic carpet, members of the committee looked down upon EWSC in the year 1979 and described what they would like to see accomplished.

A three step problem-solving procedure was established as a guide towards constructive and orderly though. The first step was to identify desirable academic advising situations. Obstacles that would possibly hinder these situations were discussed. A clear means of reaching projected goals may later be outlined.

Centralization Possible Goal

Suggestions on centralization of counseling and registration procedures stirred the most debate because of the problems involved in such a move.

At present, re-locating the necessary departments was equated with moving a graveyard. However, it was argued that centralization could increase efficiency, however, that someone without training and experience in such a move.

Computer Aids

It was also suggested that computer terminals containing academic and personal information from each student's high school and any other education might prove useful counseling tools. Computer terminals were discussed in the hopes of simplifying paper work and giving counselors more time to devote personal attention to each student.

Wanted: Time and Talent

It was assumed that effective counseling needs thorough informed advisors. SNTF envisioned specialists by academic area paid only to advise.

Advisors must be capable of handling special problems such as special limitation students or newly transferring students into practical academic channels for individual investigation.

Stop: Road Blocked

Hindrances cited in achieving these goals were increased costs and complicated procedures.
Germaine Talks While She Walks

During the Monday luncheon for Germaine Greer, Associate Editor Jeff Loreto was scheduled for an interview. When the luncheon was over it was learned Greer was "tired of talking," and did not want to see any more people.

Are you satisfied with the rate of gains made since the women's movement started four or five years ago? Take for instance the Equal Rights Amendment.

G: It didn't die out! Their objective was limited—getting the vote. Which they got. But the much larger struggle was the struggle to politicize the women of the working class in particular, and to understand how to use political power. Indeed, how to get political power, and that's what they didn't follow through on. The reason is partly because the suffragettes had no revolutionary ideology. They thought the vote would somehow magically dictate policy. There isn't much point in having the vote if the policies of the people you could elect don't reflect women's wishes, needs or capacities at all.

Do you think the objectives of the movement are outlined enough, or will satisfaction of a few goals tend to dry it up?

G: The scope of the movement grows all the time and is challenging the entire political structure in the U.S. The global view of women's liberation is very different from the one in the U.S.

The women's liberation movement started four or five years ago? Take for instance the Equal Rights Amendment?

G: You're not reading it from the right angle. Women have to capitulate to the role of a sex object because it's the only way they can ever get any success. Do you condone this?

G: No, I don't condone it at all. I hate the whole situation in which a woman has to exploit her body in order to have any meaning in the community at all.

People make more of the fact that I don't look like Whistler's Mother than they do of the fact that I can think better than most of them. That's really dumb. It's like making Gloria Steinem into a bewitching beauty and going on and on about her presumed love affairs and all the people who are crazy about her. It's so ridiculous. I tell me off the top of my head, what is a truly liberated woman.

G: She doesn't exist.

What should she be?

G: She'll be what she shall be, she won't be what I tell her to be. Do you have any idea what she will be?

G: It's better to do it and I would be dreary to get into them. I doubt she'll be an American. Euro-American.

G: I think she might be an Indian.

What kind, American?

G: An American Indian. I think she is probably gonna come from somewhere or other. Thank you very much.

G: Bye.

Greer Packs Showalter Auditorium

By Carl Wirsching

Author Germaine Greer exhibited a packed Showalter Auditorium audience for almost two hours Monday morning to inform itself about human dignity.

Greer, who termed herself an anti-fascist, refused to offer a panacea for the world's problems of population and "fertility control."

Women are now being elected to state and national offices in this country. Does this mean something?

G: There are women coming on because educational procedures have changed sufficiently for there to be more women qualified to take these posts.

The women's suffrage movement in the early part of this century gained momentum then died out. Do you...

G. It didn't die out! Their objective was limited—getting the vote. Which they got. But the much larger struggle was the struggle to politicize the women of the working class in particular, and to understand how to use political power. Indeed, how to get political power, and that's what they didn't follow through on. The reason is partly because the suffragettes had no revolutionary ideology. G: The scope of the movement grows all the time and is challenging the entire political structure in the U.S. The global view of women's liberation is very different from the one in the U.S.

How so?

G: Because so many women in other countries, like the Moslem countries, are speechless, silent, and utterly without political power. We don't even know what to say on their behalf because their cultures are so alien to us.

There has been much discussion from you and others about women being the object of men's pleasures. You did state that in your book, correct?

G: No. I don't think so.

Well, something to that affect?

G: Maybe.

Is this encouraged by the clothing woman wear, such as string bathing suits and halter tops?

G: Ha ha. How funny you are. If you're asking me if women capitulate to their role as sex objects, they obviously do.

What I'm saying is women get upset at being described as sex objects, now does not the wearing of certain kinds of clothing encourage this behavior?

G: You're not seeing it from the right angle. Women have to capitulate to the role of a sex object because it's the only way they can ever get any success. Do you condone this?

Emotions peaked and debate grew bitter at Patterson Hall Auditorium Nov. 13.

The Occasion: a United Farm Workers-Teamsters open forum, sponsored by the Political Action Committee.

The issues: Who will represent farm workers in negotiations with grape and lettuce producers? Should consumers support a UFW boycott on grapes and lettuce?

"If UFW President Cesar Chavez is ripping off the farm workers like they say he is," UFW's Jesus Lemos said, "then why is he working for $5 a week room and board?"

Lemos said Teamsters president Frank Fitzsimmons, "is provided with a jet, provided with a $250,000 home, provided with a wardrobe for his wife."

Sweetheart Contract
Lemos said Teamsters, "never worked with us," in negotiating 'sweetheart agreements' with grape growers in 1970. Teamsters, he said, "just came along and said, 'We can give you a better deal.'"

Teamsters signed petitions were passed supporting the agreements. UFW's Roberto Trevino countered the charge, saying the petitions were "never seen or confirmed."

Lemos accused the Teamsters of collusion with grape growers. He also claimed Teamsters prevented a secret ballot election to determine who will represent farm workers.

Who Has the Support?
Teamsters representative Micaela Tedd reacted indignantly. Chavez, she said, "simply does not have the support of the farm workers. If he did, he could call a strike and bring the growers to their knees in three days."

JESUS LEMOS, UNITED FARM WORKERS, stresses a point during the "open forum" between representatives of the UFW and the Teamsters Union. Charges of corruption and backdoor contracts flew between the two unions (PHOTO: Rich Roddy)

UFW-Teamsters Debate Held Here

Suppose Chavez had the support? He would not have to go all over the world advocating a boycott, Tedd contended.

Teamsters, she said, supported a secret ballot election long before Chavez "came on the scene." The union became interested in agriculture in 1930's.

Union Dues
Tedd said Chavez forces his workers to pay full union dues when not working. She also said Chavez levied $800,000 in fines one year. The offenses: arriving late at meetings, failure to do picket duty, etc.

The people, she said, were "sick of it." Corruption charges flew back and forth. Lemos accused the Teamsters of hiring "goons and Hell's Angels" to break up a UFW strike against Gallo Wine. Tedd admitted her union hired "security men" - but said UFW started the violence outside Salinas, California.

Tedd accused Chavez of hiring "security men" but said UFW supporters filed out of the room. "Si, Chavez," they cried. "Si, Chavez."

Explores the Volcanoes of Hawaii

Leave the frigid Northwest for Hawaii Christmas day, return Jan. 2, 1975 and pick up three credit hours in the process.

One of two Geology of Hawaii courses remain open to Eastern students. The only prerequisite is interest.

The courses cost $295, according to William L. Wilkerson, Geology, and Felix E. Mutscher, Geology, the instructors for the course.

The $295 covers airfare from Seattle to the island state, car rental for classwork, four nights in a hotel and return airfare, according to Wilkerson. Students must provide their own expenses for food, side trips and camping gear, Mutscher explained.

The classes will focus study on volcanic processes and their evolution. In addition, a tropical botanist from Hawaii will be part of the faculty.

Faculty for the course also includes teachers from Western Washington State College, the University of Washington, Seattle Area Community Colleges and Portland State University.

Those interested can register at normal registration time for Winter quarter, Wilkerson said.

For more information contact Wilkerson in Rm. 212 or Mutscher in Rm. 229 of the Science Building; or call them at Ext. 2432 or 2332.
Career Education Conference Held

By Carol Richey
News Editor

The concepts of Career Education and the development of strategies to infuse the concepts into classroom teaching were the topics of a two-day workshop held on EWSC campus recently.

The Nov. 14-15 Faculty Workshop on Career Education was led by Dr. James Dunn, Director, of Developmental Systems Programs for the American Institute for Research in Palo Alto, California. In his keynote address to the faculty representatives from various college departments of EWSC campus recently.

"There is no longer a shortage of teachers in the U.S. In 1974, there were a quarter of a million surplus teachers. One out of every 4 trained chemists will be employed. One out of every five college graduates will be working in an area that requires their degree," Dunn said.

Dr. Dunn said a college graduate can expect 5 major job changes in his lifetime, "If we don't value people over their degrees and credentials, our system will be unhappy in their jobs."

According to Dunn, educational institutions can aid their students in "riding the wave of economic shifts" in our society, by using Career Education as their guidepost.

The featured speaker, Dr. James Dunn, impresses on the delegates to the Career Education Workshop the necessity of formulating a plan for converting their decisions into reality, which should then result in self-satisfaction and positive benefits to our society.

In explaining the problems with educational orientation, Dr. Dale Donegan, Geography, said, "You end up with M.B.A. or engineers who are not alert to the social needs of society or are not humanistic in their outlook."

"Just for job orientation," but added, "A concept that includes educating the whole individual, is a nice piece of abstraction."

Dr. Dunn expressed concern over the lack of definition so as not to confuse it with the development of vocational education, Dr. Dale Donegan, Foreign Languages Dept., said in evaluating the workshop, "I brought to focus something the professor has known all the time: The necessity of broadening the student's horizons, train him for his real job first, secondly, make this person far more flexible through supportive background, and aid the student in making a sound judgment as to what his particular campus has to offer."

The Academic Senate met Monday to consider the endorsement of a collective bargaining bill.

The collective bargaining bill, drafted by the Council of Faculty Representatives (CFR) would provide for bargaining rights for all academic employees of the state colleges and universities.

The legislation would also define the scope of such things as salaries, insurance and retirement related fringe benefits.

In addition, the collective bargaining act allows, "Student representatives to participate in bargaining sessions, but without authority to condition approval of any bargaining agreements."

The task force was formed in an attempt to affirm directions for Eastern's academic endeavors that could be suited by operating units in their planning and setting objectives.

The task force report also pointed out that students will be encouraged to participate fully in their own self-governance, and student judgments will be sought and heeded wherever their knowledge and experience can make a contribution to institutional decisions.

There were no students taking part in the Career Education Workshop.
This is the second of two articles explaining the breakdown of the AS Budget. The figures reported are those from the approved budget and do not reflect any possible changes due to a decline in enrollment.

Track-Cross Country

The Track and Cross Country teams are also remaining enthusiastic in spite of the fact their allotted $8,500 is $10,000 less than requested. Dr. Robert Anderson said of the pending trip to Salina, Kansas, "After their victory Saturday, ‘Whether AS funds or not, we’ll go. The governor and I will leave for Kansas Nov. 15 and return the following day.

Anderson considers the chance to enter national competition the biggest recruiting device for Track and Cross Country for potential students. “If you qualify, we will get you to the best level of condition available. National competition is a good inducement to get athletes to come to Eastern, but the way things are now, we’re going to be in trouble, but if we do well. We don’t have money for national travel.”

The Track and Cross Country Teams also receive money from gate receipts and Booster Club activities. The teams are cutting down on what they can, eating 2 instead of 3 meals a day while traveling, and frequenting smorgasbord-type restaurants. Anderson said. He also pointed out no one receives a scholarship just because he is an athlete. The three athletes who do receive financial help, do so because they are qualified. "No one is getting a free ride,” he stated.

Black Education Program

The Black Education Program asked for a $6,648 increase over the $1,000 they received last year, and in this case, received all but $500.

According to Edward Poole, director of the program, this money will be used to fly a troop of actors called “Voices, Incorporated,” from New York to perform at EWSC during Black Week, sometime in spring quarter. As yet, facilities have not been found to house the performance. Campus Theatre and Showalter Auditorium have scheduled events.

Outdoor Program

The Outdoor Program, headed by Dennis Dole, was one of the few programs receiving more money than requested. Although only $5,931 was requested, $7,231 was approved. This, explained Dole, included his salary of $750 for the year.

The Outdoor Program is located near the AS Office, third floor Penlese Union Building and is open 24 hours a day. It rents camping and hiking equipment to students at a fee. Dole claims is the lowest in the state. Approximately 45 students have utilized the services of the Outdoor Program this quarter, bringing in $118. The funds are used to order new things, such as first-aid kits, and to repair and replace old equipment. Dole feels if there were more equipment, in order to serve more students, the program could become self-supporting.

Budget Priorities

About the priorities considered when drawing up the budget, Curt Huff, PUB business manager, who was in charge of preparing the budget request for the PUB had this to say: “This year we put an emphasis on the PUB program budget for activities in the PUB to supplement the Social Activities Reindeer Board. It was only $2,000, but that’s just a start.” “I also advise the budget is the AS is preparing.

Fred Johns, business manager for the college, expounded more fully: “The main factor in drawing up the new budget is what was done on last year’s budget. Some new programs, such as the Instructional Media Center (IMC), were added and some other areas were given a high priority to emphasize development.”

Each department had a hearing for its budget and such things as the number of students participating in each, the number of persons benefiting or serving each, were taken into account. In general, the budgets stayed the same, with some small increases to counteract inflation.

Profiles on Two Cheney City Councilmen

By Rick Schultz

Cheney city councilman Al Ogden thinks problems between the college and city are, “90 per cent myth.”

Ogden, Eastern’s dean of student services, is one of four college-affiliated men on the council.

“If you expect a conflict to be there,” Ogden said at his Showalter office, “Your behavior will cause it.”

This is the 10 per cent which aren’t myths. He cited a survey in which 90 per cent of Cheney’s officials indicated there is a town-gown agreement. “His (your) behavior will cause the problems between the college and city government in Cheney,“ Ogden said.

Ogden, an EWSC graduate, joined the college staff in 1961.

Another question: How can Cheney attract non-polluting industries? Ogden thinks the community is not unique in Washington State.

Another question: How can Cheney attract non-polluting industries? Ogden thinks the community is not unique in Washington State.

Ogden has no trouble performing his “married” community roles.

“If I’m the council,” he said, “I’m Al Ogden of 216 West Fifth. I wear that hat.”

On the job he, “changes gears,”

Ogden was one of three men appointed to Council positions at orientation last year. He was re-elected to another term beginning Jan. 1.

Ogden, an EWSC graduate, joined the college staff in 1961.

Ogden said the college has “beautiful cooperative marriages” with Cheney police, fire, and water officials. He said the college operates its own water well, with “tax base.”

Wynd was brief and to the point on the question: “Where do you cut?”

Wynd, a Kingston Hall office.

Wynd said the town is definitely a business. “We’re broke.”

Inflation is eating into the budget and revenues are low, Wynd said in his Kingston Hall office.

Wage expansion, he said, is another problem.

Wynd posed a familiar budget question: “Where do you cut?”

Wynd, a fourth-year councilman and marketing professor, said in a run-in with a realtor began his involvement with city government in 1970.

He said he voiced his opinion at a city council meeting and was dissatisfied with the response. So he decided to run for council.

What’s his assessment of college-city relations?

“I think we have a model here,” Wynd said. “The college and city work more closely than any college town I’ve seen.”

Wynd said the town is definitely education-oriented. “I cited several interlocal agreements between the AS and the PUB, fire protection, swimming pool, police protection, etc.”

Wynd, a Michigan Tech graduate, remembers a town-gown rivalry between college and town people at that time.

“People of the town were always squaring off against people at the college,” he said.

Wynd joined the EWSC staff in 1970.
Fletcher heads Reading Major

Eastern Washington State College's reading major is unique in the Northwest and probably the United States, according to Dr. J. Eugene Fletcher, director of Eastern's reading clinic.

Besides the many undergraduates in the reading program, there are also as many as 30 graduate students.

Fletcher utilizes the graduate students to provide manpower and brain-power in the reading clinic.

The reading clinic, which occupied Martin 204, 205 and 206.

Student Pay Increase

All student employees presently earning $2.55 an hour or less, will comply with a new Federal employment, said the raise is per hour, effective Jan.

The increase the lowest salary will be $2

Outdoor Rec. Rates

Anything from sleeping bags to snow shoes are available for students, faculty, staff and administration from the Outdoor Program, according to program manager Dennis Doyle.

Dole said the program, funded by the Associated Students since 1969, is designed to furnish good equipment for daily, camp trips.

The program has planned trips for students, and last spring 27 people toured the Grand Canyon during a ten day trip.

Dole said fall and winter are "usually slow quarters," but plans are being made for a group trip in November. Some of the popular areas for camping include sections of Northern Idaho, regions around Colville and Chewelah, and the Cascades, Dole said.

Prices for rental of the equipment vary from 10 cents, for drinking bottles to $1.25 for an 4-man tent on a day's rent. A deposit is required on all items.

Tents, snow shoes, and stoves require a $10 deposit, drinking bottles and stoves require a 50 cent deposit.

Outdoor Programs, located on the third floor of the PUB, are open Monday through Thursday from 1 to 3:30 p.m., and Fridays from noon to 2:30 p.m.

They teased the crowd with mind-blowing phrases and coined them with light Afro-funk. Their music was good and some of their house rockers were "serious" into darkness" and "Cocio Kid." Their version of "Gypsy Man" was a bit more of a victim, while amp and columns popped on and off.

Fleetwood Mac played scores of tunes from the last six albums. Included were two extended versions of two Mac classics "sweat Me a Little" and "Future Games," both exceptionally well done.

War Well Received

By Mark Carin

Whoever did the sound engineering for the Tuesday night War-Wet Willie-Fleetwood Mac concert was a winner.

The atmosphere of restless antici- pation was heightened by a more than reasonable wait. As the night progressed, the long waiting drained the crowd of its enthusiasm.

The first band, Wet Willie exploded onto the stage with new and contemporary changes. Their lead singer had an over-powering voice, and he belted the crowd with his stage presence.

The better number included "Bad Judge of Character," a fast-paced rocker and their Top Forty special "Keep on Smilin'," which really got the crowd moving.

It was clear that the road-men did not work harmoniously as the group because in setting up for the next session, there were yelling voices and flailing hands each trying to assert superiority over the other.

Their mind games caused the audience more than 40 pre-Fleetwood Mac minutes.

Fleetwood Awesome

The awesome talent of Fleetwood Mac was a bit faded but still intact. They, too, were a victim of sound troubles but undauntedly pushed ahead. They created some great tunes while amps and columns popped on and off.

Praises must go to Bob Welch, lead guitarist who seemed to taunt the crowd with his improvising skills; and the superb drummer, Mic Fleetwood. His drum solo was played through the P.A. and was shifted from speaker to speaker in a dizzying effect. It was hard to stand up and listen to it.

War Declared

Next, War came out and electrified the audience with searing vocals and a pulsating mixture of multi-rhythms. Their rapport with the crowd was a strange one. They uttered bizarre mumblings and spoke with a very soft touch. Then they came alive.

All in all the musical talent was good, but the sound system was, at best, a laugh. It was badly mixed and much too loud. The roadies did a truly bad job and this caused much criticism from the audience.

If Spokane wishes to consistently view good musical talent it would seem that a long wait between shows is inevitable. Either that or more cooperative roadies to handle this kind of talent.
Dance-Drama Presented

By Beverly Vorpahl
Managing Editor
"The Maria Callas of dance," Maria Frankel, will appear Dec. 6 at 8:15 p.m. in Showalter Hall Auditorium with a new dimension in music, ballet and drama.

Emily Frankel, whom critics have compared to Isadora Duncan and Marcel Marceau, has performed in more than 700 American cities as well as touring Europe under the sponsorship of the American National Theatre Academy with the affiliated approval of the U.S. State Dept.

This past season she has danced around the world, appearing in solo performances in Hong Kong, the Philippines, Guam, South Africa and South America, as well as being the guest soloist with the Detroit Symphony and the Philharmonic Hall in New York.

Trained in both classical ballet, techniques of modern dance, and a choreography, Miss Frankel draws from all dance forms to create a new kind of entertainment, a multi-art form which she calls "Ballet Plays."

She will present two ballet plays, each different in subject and style. "Childsplay," one of her best-known works, transports the audience to a kind of enchanted playground. Frankel develops the child growing up, coming to terms with fear and loneliness.

Her second ballet is titled, "Haunted Moments," and is danced to sound effects in an embodiment of the sounds of fear. She presents variations on the most annoying sounds of ordinary living, binding these sound experiences together by a recurring linking theme of acrobatic rolling movement, to the eerie sound of water.

In addition to her performances, Frankel will hold classes in the Dance Studio at 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 2 p.m. Dec. 5.

Frankel is appearing on campus through the Artist and Lecture Series.

Black Theatre Course

James Weldon Johnson, Lorraine Hansberry, and Langston Hughes are names of playwrights that most blacks have heard of. But Frank Fetter, Theatre Survey class, hopes to keep his students from reaching for new "potpourri" of "Three Blind Mice," and a visit to the circus.

Theatre program at his or her church, school, community center, or wherever the need arises on a material budget of zero dollars," he said.

Those Blacks interested in writing and directing more so than acting are more than welcome in the course. Outlets for these interests will be provided also.

Entertainment Announcements

Piano-Flute Duo

Two members of the EWSC music faculty, Dr. C. Webb Coffee, flutist, and Dr. James Edmonds, pianist, will present a recital in the Music Recital Hall, at 8:15 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 6.

Dr. Coffee, and his wife Gale will present the premiere of "Dao for Flutes," composed for the Coffees by Robert Muezynski.

Before coming to Cheney, Coffee served as principal flutist with the New Hampshire Festival Orchestra and the American Wind Symphony.

Dr. Edmonds has been a soloist with the Spokane Symphony and has appeared as a soloist throughout Europe.

Percussion Pops

The Percussion Ensemble, directed by Martin Zyskowski, will present a Percussion Pops Family Concert Dec. 1 at 1:15 p.m. in the Music Recital Hall.

Featured works will include "The Entertainer," "Campion Town Races," "Greensleeves," a surprise version of "Three Blind Mice," and a visit to the circus.

Last year the Ensemble won the State of Washington Percussive Arts Society Festival Competition for their category and placed third in the Western States finals at Anaheim, Calif.

Donations received from this Christmas concert will go to a special travel-scholarship fund for another potential trip to Anaheim should the group win this year's competition again.

Pac-8 power Washington State University won first and second place last Friday night in a gymnastic meet against Eastern Washington's men's varsity team at Phase II's gymnasium room.

The Cougars entered two teams in the meet with the varsity slipping past their junior varsity 127.80 to 125.95. The Eagles scored 105.10.

The results in points from their first set of the year which coach Jack Benson had called "a practice meet."

If in number three above, the two teams have not met in the year in question, then the championship is to be decided on a straight percentage. Non-conference games are to have no bearing on the awarding of the championship.

The conference is to be decided by:

1. Straight percentage
2. The same percentage is established by the number of conference games, these two teams are declared co-champions.
3. If there is a percentage tie for first place between two teams, play unevent number of games, the championship is to be decided on the number of wins of the game between these two teams, i.e., Team A had 4 wins and 1 loss with a percentage of 800 and Team B had 4 wins, 1 loss, 2 ties, percentage of .800.

The Eagles will be practicing for almost seven weeks before their next competitive meet. Coach Benson will have an Alumni-Varsity meet on Saturday, November 30 in Phase II. On January 3 and 4 the Eagles will open the season in the Washington Open at Kent, Washington.

RUS Scores Well

The 220 fans that jammed the gymnasium room for the season's first meet saw some fine individual scoring by several Eagles.

Kurt Luhrs was the high point winner for the Eagles on the side horse and was second to Coach Dave Pratt. Ken Rux and Chris Bolkan tied with 6.95 on the rings placing third to Cougars Gene Johnson - 7.80, and Andy Alexander 7.75.

Rux's 8.35 score in the long horse vault was second to WSU's Johnson who hit 8.7. Ken Rux rounded out his all-around performance with a 6.45 parallel bars and 7.30 on the horizontal (high) bar.

The Eagles missed points that freshman Kurt Nagashima could have provided. Nagashima is sidelined for a few weeks after cutting his finger last week. He is one of the team's all-around performers.

Opening Nerves

The meet was full of opening nervousness as both schools had gymnasts making their first meet. Sometimes there was a laugh and applause from the appreciative crowd.

WSU's Alexander was in the middle of his parallel bars routine when he swung into 4.5 or 5. He jammed his hands and wound, and waited, and then looked to his teamates on the side, and dismounted with a smile as both schools' gymnasts broke out laughing realizing he had forgotten where he was in his routine.

Three-on-three basketball began last week with 45 teams entered in two leagues. A National and American league with a Good, Bad and Ugly division in each league has been set up to accommodate all of the teams. The American league plays its games in Phase II while the Nationals play in the field house.

Each division in the American league has eight teams while the National league is made up of 8 teams. Each team will play a round robin with their division, hence playing everyone once.

A 16-team double elimination playoff tournament will begin after Thanksgiving with two top teams in each division in the American league vying for the league championship. In the National league, three top teams in each division will play off for the league championship. A championship game between the two leagues will be held on the final weekend.

In the American league last week, City 5 jumped out to a 20-0 first place standing in the Good division by blasting Hamtrak and NAIC No. 14-8-2. The Eagles had 28 points while NAIC 1A No. 14-8-2 had 27 points, 1 point the difference.

Screamin’ Eagles Open Season

By Jim Elliott
Sports Editor

The Screamin’ Eagles open the 1974-75 cage season this Saturday at 7:30 for the annual Munro-Varsity basketball game in the Field House. The following weekend, Nov. 30, Eastern will open its official season against Lewis & Clark in the Field House.

Coach JV “Jerry” Krause calls the outlook for the season “very bright.” With eight returning lettermen including two all league returners among those eight, the Eagles will be looking to improve their 15-11 overall and 8-4 conference records. Eastern tied for the conference championship last year.

The all league duo consists of 6-6 center Ron Cox and 6-4 forward John Alaniva. The 6-5 forward had a 10.4 average and was an honorable mention NAIA All-America choice after being selected first team NAIA District I.

Matching Hite and Cox’s scoring is an accomplishment and to place themselves sixty places apart in the conference standings is an accomplishment and to place themselves sixty places apart in the conference standings.

The Eagles will have their tallest team ever and an all conference performer. Central lead with Eastern and Oregon Tech last year for the championship.

Central Washington has been the EVCO’s powerhouse the last nine years as they have either led or won the championship during eight of those years.

The Wildcats will have their tallest team ever and an all conference performer, Central lead with Eastern and Oregon Tech last year for the championship.

Oregon Tech had the best league record with a 24-5 team. The Owls were the District I and Central was the District I champion. Eastern Oregon lost four starters including the league’s best scorer and Oregon Colton has only two seniors returning. Southern Oregon has the all conference center returning and the league’s second best scorer.

Alaska Games

Eastern will play Whittsworth twice this year and will be in two tournaments during the Christmas break. On Dec. 13-14 they will travel to Fairbanks, Alaska for two games against District I foe University of Alaska.

Eleven home games are scheduled for the year with five games being played before the quarter break in the Fieldhouse. Krause will be directing the team to the EVCO championship then the NAIA District I Playoffs on Mar. 1 and hopefully on to the Nationals beginning on Mar. 10 in Kansas City, Mo.

The Eagles will work a pressure defense centered around the back break at every opportunity, and a pressure defense using zones and basic full court presses.

Hebron Finishes 34th

Eastern Washington placed 12th last Saturday at the NAIA Cross Country Championship in Salina, Kansas as powerful Eastern New Mexico scored 28 points to runner-up U.S. International University’s 16.

The Eagles were led by Rick Hebron who placed 34th with a time of 25:06. Mike Bait’s winning time was 23:45 over the host school Marymount College’s course.

As the EVCO and District I champion the Eagles did well in the meet as they were the second top team from the West. USU is from San Diego.

Hectic Start and Finish

Coach Mike Johnson’s runners started off on a hectic note as their United Flight out of Spokane was delayed an hour due to fog Friday morning.

Johnson said United rounded ahead to hold their Frontier flight out of Denver. After landing they were whisked by a courtesy bus to the other side of the airport to catch their flight for Salina twenty minutes behind schedule.

The team walked the course Friday afternoon and Johnson said it was “much to their liking.” Next morning they were greeted with a snow covered field similar to Cheney in the fall.

The Eagles drew box sixty-three on the front row which was over one hundred yards long. Then the 411 runners, representing 53 teams started the five-mile run.

It was as the first 30 runners finished the race that the end turned hectic. The stacking process of having runners stand in groups of thirty in the order they finished was disrupted as runners began cutting in front of other runners, then as the others runners finished, the entire line turned into a night mare for the officials.

In the melee that followed runners or runners were scored out of positions, sometimes as much as one hundred positions out of place.

Some runners who finished two or three places apart found themselves sixty places apart in the computerized results at the end of the day.

Johnson said the mixing of positions may have affected Hebron’s standing and the team’s total points but as of now there is no way to tell.

All Eagles Score

Kim Sobotta placed 103rd, Jerry Greenman - 113th, Bob Barbero - 136th, Greg Beyerlein - 137, Daryl Schruhl - 210, and Dave Sivils - 248. There were no times for runners past 51st place.

Johnson said he was pleased with the overall results of the team. “Except for the scoring everything was quite a good experience,” he said.

“To earn the right to participate is an accomplishment and to place 13th or perhaps better is a pretty good representation,” he added.
Eagles Wrestle Vikings

The 1974-75 wrestling season opens this Thursday at 7:30 p.m. when Eastern takes on the Vikings from Portland State University in the Fieldhouse.

Coach Curt Byrnes has an outstanding group of returning wrestlers headed by three individual conference champions, Don Draper, Gary Richardson, and Lanny Davidson.

Three other lettermen return from last year's squad that finished the dual meet season with a 17-4 record and second place in the Evergreen Conference. They are Rock Colwell, Garry Stidman, and Tony Byrne.

6th At Nationals

Davidson placed second, Tom Kenny fourth, and Draper fifth in their weight divisions at the NAIA nationals last year and Eagles were 6th as a team.

Byrnes said it will be tough to equal or improve on the over-all year the team had last year.

"We will have the potential to be a fine team and will just have to wait and see what we are made of," Byrnes said.

Young Depth

The Eagles have depth in all but the heavyweight class this year with transfers adding strength to the team. They include Mark Flodin, Greg Darden, and Larry Scheistel. Freshmen whom Byrnes has called "outstanding prospects" are Steve Vaughn, Dale Richards, Keith Burns, and Kirk Delong.

Byrnes said this year's schedule is one of the most challenging Eastern has had. The Eagles will meet Pac-8 teams Washington and Washington State plus Montana powers Boise State and Montana State.

Central Washington was the EVCO champion last year and went on to win the NAIA nationals. The Eagles did defeat the Central 18-16 in a dual meet last year.

Eastern will host the EWSC Open on Nov. 30 in Phase II. Wrestling will last all day.

Eagle wrestlers and their weights for the Portland State match are:

- Heavyweight - Larry Scheistel
- 190 - Greg Darden, Mark Flodin
- 177 - Lanny Davidson, Keith Burns, Kirk Delong
- 167 - Jerry Thew, Elizar Gonzales
- 158 - Mark Robbins, Doug Duncan
- 150 - Tony Byrne, Eric Anderson
- 142 - Garry Stidman, Steve Vaughn
- 126 - Dale Richards, John Delong
- 118 - Kirk Delong, Don Draper.

GO EAGLES.

Eagles Run Third Cheney Marathon

While the qualifiers for Eastern's national cross-country team were competing in Kansas, four Eagle runners were running the hills of Cheney in the third annual Cheney Marathon last Saturday.

The 26-mile 385-yard run between Cheney and Tyler was won by North Idaho College student, Mario Sanchez. Placing second behind Sanchez's winning time of two hours, 37 minutes, 27 seconds was Eagle Jerry Fulwider in 2:40:43. Eagle Cliff finished fifth.

Mini-Marathon

A 12-mile plus "mini-marathon" was also run with two Eagles placing high. Garrie Franklin was second in one hour, 9 minutes, 22 seconds and Williams C. Dobkins, finished fifth with 1:16:13.
