KEWC Staff Gets 'The Axe'

Both KEWC-AM and FM are continuing on the air with the help of students like Freshman Matt Paitlow, working the AM board on the 7-8 p.m. shift.

On the same day that KEWC-AM and FM 89.9 supervisors began a drive to attract listeners, the chairman of the R-TV Department informed them they had been relieved of their station duties.

Dr. Howard Hopf said the dozen students involved were all flunking or nearly flunking.

He said many hadn't turned in assignments or were consistently late to class, and they all used the radio station as their excuse.

"Schooling comes first," Hopf said, "then the station. We just want to get them back into the saddle of studying."

The Monday afternoon move caught the students by surprise. "We're taking the blame for what other people have done," said AM Station Manager Bruce Christofferson.

Christofferson and General Manager Larry Snider both denied that they were flunking any classes. "I pulled a 3.6 summer quarter," Snider said

"I'm pulling a solid three point this quarter."

Snider said that Hopf suggested several weeks ago that some of the radio staff should be fired. Snider declined because he didn't think the move was justified.

"There's a credibility problem—he's lost his credibility," Snider said. "Hopf fell short of commitments he made."

"We did the same thing last year and the same thing the year before," Hopf said. "I don't think you can fault anybody for looking out for the students."

Taking over the duties for the remainder of the quarter, Assistant Professor Lea Ward said that she would keep everyone on their radio shifts.

"People doing news shifts are to continue. All production work for class credit will continue for the last ten days," Ms. Ward said.

Both Hopf and Snider expressed optimism that the radio station supervisors would return to their positions next quarter.

In a more guarded statement, Ms. Ward said she wanted to talk to anyone interested in the positions. "We'll be taking applications and planning policies," she said.

"All the positions will be assigned before Christmas so the station will be running at 6 a.m. the day school opens," Ward said.

Students relieved of their managerial tasks were Snider, Christofferson, Dan Dagsaan—FM station manager, Barb Magee—FM program director, Grant Rosenquist—AM program director, Kevin Anderson—sales manager, Wendy Ure—public service director, Jo Kulczyk—news director, Chuck Spencer—assistant news director, and Ron Emert—public relations director.

Possible Removal

Leg. to Scrutinize Judiciary

By Doug Sly
News Editor

The AS Legislature voted Monday to direct the Legislative Review Committee to establish criteria for evaluating the performance of AS Superior Court justices and AS cabinet members.

The vote indicated the legislature's discontent with the AS Superior Court's inability to gather a quorum for court dates.

A quorum requires that four of the six justices attend a court hearing.

Several court dates have been postponed this year because the court failed to have two-thirds of its members present at a hearing.

Proponents of the evaluation maintain that the same justices are consistently absent at court hearings and that the Legislative Review Committee should also look into the procedure for removing a justice.

The item concerning the performance of AS justices was listed on the agenda as "possible removal of court members."

The legislature also voted to send legislator Gary Nisker as EWSC's student representative to a meeting of the Evergreen Athletic Conference.

Legislator Carol Worthington began a long discussion on sending Nisker to the conference meeting, expressing her doubts concerning Nisker's ability to represent student opinion.

"He (Nisker) would not be truly representing the consensus of student opinion," said Ms. Worthington.

The legislators also argued that since Nisker would not have a vote at the meeting, his input would not be considered by conference members.

The legislature finally decided to send Nisker to the meeting to obtain an answer to the question: Why has the Evergreen Conference failed to reduce the yearly number of football games to eight as stated in a joint resolution from college administrators three years ago?

In other matters, the legislature took the following actions:

—Approved the appointments of Chandru Sajani to Placement Committee and Steve Schroeder to the Bicentennial Committee.

—Voted to request President Shuck to inform institution officials that phone lines are not to be removed from AS offices without prior discussion with the AS.

S.T.S. Hears A.S. Complaints

The EWSC Bus Committee presented a list of Magic Bus fare discrepancies and complaints to Spokane Transit officials in the PUB this Monday.

The recently calculated S.T.S. figures, taken from the period of April 21 to November 1, show a $750 difference between fares actually collected and the amount S.T.S. should have collected.

S.T.S. officials, Chuck Harmon and Bob Harder, heard requests from the committee that the transit system stop the practice of not collecting the correct amount of revenue and stop taking non-existent passes.

The officials stated that they have instructed drivers to accept only cash fares on the Cheney-Spokane run.

"We may have a number of drivers that are not doing their job, or perhaps it is just human error on their part," said Harder. "But to stay on top of the situation, we must know about the problems."

Later in the meeting, the Bus Committee expressed a desire to change the contract between the college and S.T.S. The contract stipulations include, "No passes, discount tickets, or the like will be issued, except for transfers and the Spokane Transit System has the responsibility for collecting fares."

saw no problem in getting these changes in the contract.

When asked what S.T.S. would do about the $750 fare discrepancy, the representatives answered they would review the committee's figures and, if they are accurate, S.T.S. should reimburse the A.S. for the full amount.

In a closing comment Harder said, "There seems to be an attitude of mistrust between Eastern students and S.T.S., but we have bent over backwards trying to keep things fair for EWSC while being criticized not quite so fairly."

Harder later expressed Spokane Transit's desire to be an honest, reliable system for Eastern.

Faculty Senate Hikes English Requirement

By Mark Walker
Staff Writer

By a vote of 21 to 3, the Academic Senate has adopted a proposal which will raise the current English requirements from eight to ten credit hours.

The new program will be implemented at the start of the '76-'77 school year and will change the current English courses from four to five credit hours.

The change stems from a 20-man commission created last year to evaluate Eastern's current English program. Their finding prompted one commission member to comment there is "inability on the part of many students to take an out of class assignment and do a good job on it."

Students will be required to enroll in the first course during their first three quarters of residence. This means either English 101 or 201, or the honors sequence.

Those students with deficiencies will be required to take English 100 which will not count towards the 10-credit requirement.

An added feature of the program is a referral course offered to faculty to aid them in placing students who have writing difficulty in non-English courses.

The Academic Senate has also passed a grading proposal will allow the use of pass/no credit grading in graduate courses at the 500-600 level.

Also the use of plus and minus in grading at the graduate level will now be allowed at the discretion of individual professors.

Holy Hubert Tells His Story

By Michael Heavener
Entertainment Editor

Holy Hubert stands in the mall, surrounded by several hundred hostile students, his face distorted as he preaches the gospel.

"God loves you, sinner!" he shouts at one student, who tried to pin him down on a point of biblical fact.

"I would rather preach to an orderly crowd," he tells an interviewer later, "but I accept and enjoy the interruptions."

He says he enjoys the challenge of bringing the word of God to college campuses. "I feel inadequate to preach to students.

"There are so many things I don't know in life. But I study more than most students, so I can answer them.

"If you don't love 'em you can't reach 'em."

Several students have approached Holy Hubert, as the crowd hoots derisively. One has a rock which he demands to be stoned with.

Center Provides Computer Games

The EWSC computer center may be used for things other than class projects or administrative tasks. A variety of over 90 games can be played with the computer.

According to Academic Program Consultant Dr. Joice Doolittle, these games are a good way to get introduced to the computer. She also said that playing with the computer can reduce the uncertainties of using the computer.

Some of the games include CHOMP, Russian Roulette and successful pizza deliveries. CHOMP intales eating a cookie while trying to avoid the poison piece. This game is for two or more people. Some of the general topics include different types of athletic contests and mathematics.

Hubert uses the moment to preach the parable of the stoning to the captive audience.

"I would rather be a preacher of the Gospel than President of the United States," he says.

Entered in 1972 Primary

"I was preaching to so many students, in 1972 they tried to run me against Nixon in the New Hampshire Primary.

"I'm pessimistic about the political future of the nation," he states emphatically.

"We need another Paul Revere to arouse the citizenry against the bureaucracy, to expose the destruction of freedom of the individual."

A snowball lands at Holy Hubert's feet as he recites an intricate Bible passage from memory.

A female heckler, Bible open to the verse, stands following his every word.

"Eastern is a wonderful body of people to speak to. There are a lot of wonderful brains here. The students have great potential," he says, grinning, "if it wasn't for their dirty hearts.

Hecklers Defended

"I don't disvalue the hecklers. They have the courage of moral convictions. To be quiet is a state of pride. The church world today is too comfortable."

A small group of Christian students has gathered around Holy Hubert, to discuss what meaning and relevance the Bible holds for college living.

One student turns and tells the interviewer, "I love him. He's such a beautiful Christian."

Hubert says later, "My impression of students today is high. I wish the political forces esteemed human life as much as the students do.

"Unless you hate everything that destroys any human being, you don't love any human being."

Holy Hubert was born Hubert Lindsey in Georgia in 1914. His family moved to Alabama, where he was converted to Christianity in 1929.

"My father drove me from home. He didn't want his son to be a preacher."

He began to travel the evangelical routes, preaching before 10,000 to 15,000 people nightly.

Became Businessman

"Then I became a businessman, in the plumbing equipment business first and later in the foundry business."

"I spent the money I made on the ministry. I used it to preach the Gospel."

He quit his business in 1956 to devote full time to preaching. His campus ministry began in 1965.

"I was robbed of a gold coin collection in Boise, Idaho." He made his way to Portland, where he preached on the Portland State campus.

"God led me to Berkeley," where he opened a half-way treatment house for heroin addicts.

Broke Up Rally

He started preaching to the radicals on the University of California campus during the anti-war rallies in 1967 and 1968.

"Many times I broke up the illegal anti-war rallies by presenting Christ to them. It was rough," he says.

"They put me in the hospital seven times in the first year and twelve times altogether."

In the same years, Billy Graham called on Hubert to start the Jesus Movement on campus. Since then, he's preached on every major American college campus.

"I spoke to the greatest crowd ever gathered at Ohio State. I talked to an even bigger crowd at Kent State than was at the anti-war rally the National Guard shot at.

Speaking to Large Crowds

"I speak to 25,000 students per week on the average. Billy Graham says I've preached to more students than any other evangelist," Hubert says, proudly.

Holy Hubert preaches to crowds of people despite having been beaten several times, robbed and even shot at. "Unless I get into the political arena," he says, "I'll probably be back here in January."

He has written two books, Bless Your Dirty Heart and The Saints Count Down To Armageddon. "Look that up in the 16th Chapter of Revelations," he told the interviewer.

"The second book will be off the presses next year. From the response, I believe it to be a best seller."

The sale of his books helps to defray the expenses of the Berkeley half-way house. "It costs me $50,000 a year, but a lot of people have been helped. I'm a personal friend of every one of them."

He also includes among his friends, the promoters of the Radical Left on the Berkeley campus. Hubert speaks of Tom Hayden, Angela Davis and Jerry Rubin. "They respect me," he says.

"The last time I was here, the students were more belligerent. They thought I was a stranger with a wild way of presenting the truth. You know, one member of the football team became a Christian while I was here."

"I don't accept the fact that I can be defeated," says Holy Hubert Lindsey. "Conversion is the work of God, the work of Christ. If I had to convert, I'd be a flop!"

Staff Gets Axed

Emert was working for the station on a directed study. Production supervisor Tim Hicklin retained his position with the radio station.

Snider said he recruited all the radio personnel and that Dagsaan, Emert and he had tried to humanize the station management.

"I came here because it was close to home and I went here before I went into the service," Snider said. "As far as I'm concerned, the radio station comes first. School comes second."

"I'm not going to pull any radical stunt," Snider said, "because I'm a professional." There had been threats against the station initially, made at the Monday meeting with Hopf.

"None of us are suicidal," Snider said, emphatically. "I'm going to co-operate with Ms. Ward and turn all my stuff over, because if I don't, it would be a mess."

Snider said he volunteered to serve as music director but his offer was declined, "since Hopf doesn't want any of the staff involved."

Hopf said the staff was the best ever in history of the operation. "But we can't neglect studies for the radio operation."

Information Center Set Up To Promote Understanding

By Sunni Freyer
Feature Editor

"The earth does not belong to man; man belongs to the earth."

This quote inscribed on the wall of the U.S. Pavilion provided the inspiration for the establishment of the Center for Environmental Understanding. (CEU)

When completed, CEU will be composed of an Environmental Exploratorium, Information Center and an Outdoor Learning Program.

The program's creators plan to locate the Center within a building on the Spokane Riverfront Park.

Presently, CEU is in the beginning or developing stages. Room 109, Monroe Hall, is the headquarters for CEU, where three CETA funded members are laying plans, writing grants and generating material to get it started.

Construction of the Center is anticipated to begin in late 1976 according to a brochure on CEU.

The center's goals are to provide in-depth information to the Spokane area and expert assistance to those using that data, in order to give the community an opportunity to become involved with environmental problem solving.

Another objective is to increase the knowledge of the ecological relationships of the Riverfront Park.

The Environmental Exploratorium will be an exploratory museum, housing exhibits about ecological projects. The main attraction here should be the "Hands On" sign.

A sample exhibit that might be included here would be the "energy bicycle". It consists of the standard playground type bicycle with a generator instead of a rear wheel and some extra support. The basic learning procedure here is that it takes leg power to light up a panel of lights.

Each visitor to the museum will be encouraged to touch and experiment in an atmosphere of free inquiry.

There will be minimal use of presentations involving passing viewing.

Another program planned is the Information Center which will house up-to-date books, periodicals etc. about the environment. It will be staffed by a person with special knowledge of these materials.

The Information Center will also have audio-visual equipment and conference facilities.

Because of its central city location and proximity to the YMCA, and YWCA, this center could be a focal point for action projects employing volunteers.

The third objective of the CEU would be the establishment of the Outdoor Learning Program. Basically, this will be directed towards families and children of school age.

According to the CEU brochure the primary purpose is to promote a basic understanding of the biosphere and its natural systems.

The program will operate on the assumption that an understanding of the biosphere, ecosystems, population, communities, food chains and interaction or organisms with the environment is essential to help prepare people to participate in making intelligent decisions about the earth.

Dennis Biasi, CEU Graphics Illustrator, said that the center will also be a place where the government will return to the hands of the people.

"Environmental policies will be formed at the center," said Dennis Biasi, "And will filter to the top of the governmental structure."

Presently, interested persons can help by formulating concepts to better serve the needs of the community and generating ideas which will help get people to participate.

Dear Sunni,

I recently read that one should keep their bellybutton clean, as dirt within the little one could lead to internal sickness of some sort. (Gut rot?) Anyway I don't seem to be able to find any stores where I can get cleaning utensils for the project. Do you know of any?

Ms. Clean

Dear Clean,

You gotta be kidding... try a naval supply store.

Dear Sunni,

I'd like to be a great politician someday. Do you have any thought on the subject?

B.S.

Dear B.S.,

No, but I will give considerable, in depth study on the matter and I am sure I will have definite opinions by next week.

Dear Sunni,

I'd like to look like Raquel Welch... but just cannot find the courage to go in for silicone, cannot find the money for Mark Eden. I don't want to remain like this the rest of my life so got any suggestions?

Dear Twig,

Yeah kiddo! Wear a stretch bra.

Dear Sunni,

I live in California right now and have heard that another great earthquake is on the way. Being just a tad bit frightened for myself and friends we thought you might give some advice on where we should hide when IT comes?

'Red Barn' Program Offers Quilting Class

Feeling a bit nippy these long winter nights?

You might try your hand at making a mini-quilt during three Quilting Bee Workshops to be held Nov. 18, 20, and 25th.

The classes in quilting are scheduled for 3 to 5 p.m. at the EWSC pavilion. Participants should use the "S" door on the Southeast side of the building.

Registration, which is $3.00, will be held on the first day of class. Be sure to bring needle, thread, scissors and material scraps.

The Bee, is sponsored by the Red Barn program, EWSC Dept. of Continuing Education and the Cheney Golden Age Club.

Members of the Golden Age Club will instruct those attending and organic refreshments will be provided by Tawanka. "This is a rare example of the college and community finally getting together to do something," said Dr. Horace Simms, Head of the Red Barn project.

UYA At Eastern

If It's 'Action' You Want

By Lois Turner
Staff Writer

A college degree no longer guarantees a person a job. Another common complaint is that many of the college classes are not relevant in today's society.

If you feel this way, perhaps University Year for Action (UYA) is for you.

University Year for Action is an anti-poverty volunteer program federally sponsored through ACTION, the agency also in charge of VISTA and Peace Corps.

A student enrolled in UYA works 32 hours a week as a staff member of his assigned agency plus carrying a full academic study load of work related classes.

The classes are scheduled in Mental Health/Community Action and Education blocks. The student attends classes one or two days a week, depending on which block he is enrolled in. The remainder of the week is spent applying the classroom techniques in his job.

"The program gives the student a lot of personal growth and maturation plus an enormous advantage on the job market after graduation. Many enroll simply for the opportunity to help others in a real sense," said Glenn Elkins, asst. professor of UYA.

"There are several older persons in the program who see it as an opportunity to get back into things after the kids are grown, a divorce, whatever," Elkins said, "Most of the students, however, are around the age of 23."

About one-third of the student/volunteers are education majors. The others are working toward degrees in such areas as Psychology and Social Work.

The student must be a sophomore and have around a 3.0 GPA in order to qualify for the program. It is not an easy program and, as their brochure says, "It is far from lucrative!"

Each student receives a monthly income of $200 to help defray costs plus comprehensive medical insurance. The stipends are paid in part by the agencies themselves.

Colville Confederated Tribal Day Care Center, Head Start, Guild School for Retarded Children, the Big Brother Assn. and Eastern State Hospital are just a sample of the many schools and social agencies benefiting from the program.

There will be a new program starting in January 1976 running through Summer quarter. There will also be another starting in September and continuing through the school year. If anyone is interested, they should apply as soon as possible.

For more information, inquire at University Year for Action, Martin Hall 316, 359-7022.

Police Beat

A faulty extension cord caused a mattress to catch fire in the home of John Dang of 11 N. Ninth in Cheney last Friday.

Approximately 100 people gathered to watch as Cheney's firemen put on masks and air tanks and entered the house.

Lt. Gene Bloom said the fire was reported at 4:49 p.m.

"A delay of another ten minutes could have resulted in a major fire," said Bloom.

According to Fire Department officials, the fire caused approximately $125 in damages to the house.

A mattress and box-springs was burned and a window was broken by firemen to aid quick ventilation of the house. The fire caused only minor smoke damage.

A purse and billfold containing $40 cash and assorted credit cards was stolen from Prof. Patricia Coontz, last Thursday.

According to the report, the billfold was turned in to the Cheney Police Department but the purse and money were still missing.

A 1967 Saab belonging to Greg Robin Smith of Dressler Hall was damaged for the second time in eight days while parked in lot 9.

The right front fender was kicked in last Friday resulting in $75 damage.

Smith's car sustained $250 damage on November 6 when it was covered with mud while parked in lot 9.

A Texas Instruments SR-50 calculator, valued at $100, was reported lost between the PUB and Elm Street by Larry Largent of 1507 W. Fourth in Spokane.

Pearce Hall had a false fire alarm at 12:10 a.m. last Saturday. The alarms were pulled in the service entrance and on the third floor.

"Anyone caught pulling an alarm without a fire or threat of a fire is guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to a $250 fine or 90 days in jail or both," warned Detective Athel Wise of Campus Safety.

MT. BAKER: A Sleeping Giant Awakening?

By Colleen McFarland
Staff Writer

On March 10, 1975 an unusually large steam plume was spotted coming from Sherman Crater on 10,788 ft. high Mt. Baker. Air photographs taken the next day revealed major changes in patterns and the amount of thermal-heat energy being released.

An emergency team of seven scientists from Eastern Washington State College (EWSC), the United States Geological Survey (USGS), and the University of Washington was transported to Sherman Crater by Navy helicopter on March 31.

The steam at Mt. Baker now billows up into clouds that can be seen with the naked eye from Puget Sound under ideal weather conditions. Hundreds of small fumarole vents and a few large ones continuously release tremendous quantities of geothermal heat.

In a 150 ft. deep, 100 ft. wide ice pit on the southwest side of Sherman Crater, a steam jet 20 ft. high roars from a six-inch hole in the crater floor. The heat produced melts the more than 100 feet of snow that falls or is drifted into the pit under pressure from overlying ice.

In attempts to determine the significance of this increase in steam discharge, several kinds of monitoring for seismic or earthquake activity, volcanic gas emissions, and steam and rock temperatures are being done by scientists of the University of Washington and the U.S. Geological Survey.

Occasional trips to Sherman Crater by geologist Eugene Kiver, EWSC, and other scientists allow geologic hazards and changing conditions to be reassessed.

Physical signs are conflicting. However, many changes that in the past have been proven indicators of eruption are now evident at Mt. Baker.

Through monitoring by sensitive tiltmeters, small changes in slope have been recorded. The slope is more inclined due to physical swelling, approximately 4 feet, caused by molten rock moving upward in the volcano. However, earthquake activity has not noticeably increased.

Changes in gas emission and increased thermal activity of all types are also significant signs and typify unusual restlessness evident before a volcanic eruption.

Airborne measurements of gas plumes from volcanic vents on Mt. Baker were made on March 27 and June 30, and reveal a 3.7-fold increase in the flow of gaseous sulfur in the 64-day period between measurements.

The emission on June 30 was comparable to Tacoma Smelter, the largest industrial source of sulphur emissions in the Northwest. Today, at the rate of 170 lbs. of sulfur per hour, Mt. Baker is the biggest air pollutant in the Pacific Northwest.

Mt. Baker's ice caves are located on its south flank in a seldom visited crater 1,100 ft. below the summit dome. It is estimated that total length of passage exceeds 4,000 ft.

The caves are in a delicate balance with present heat release. Changes in heat emission in the craters of Mt. Baker will cause significant changes in the caves system and provide indications of an impending eruption.

An estimated 300 ft. of ice cave passage has melted away from the east side of the crater where thermal activity is most intense. A new ice pit, similar to the previously described pit on the southwest side of the crater, has formed on the northwest side.

A large circular depression in the ice-fill near the center had also enlarged considerably in March. During April 1975 this depression collapsed and a crater lake formed at the base of the 140 ft. deep pit. This new lake is extremely acidic and volcanic gases roar from a fumarole at the edge at a velocity of 166 mph. Velocities of gases from large fumaroles in the east gap were not measured but are undoubtedly greater.

Increased concentrations of poisonous gases, polluting of nearby rivers and lakes and other unstable conditions in and around Sherman Crater are a definite hazard to unwary climbers who enter the crater and to the preservation of wildlife and vegetation in the surrounding area.

Most of the Cascade Volcanoes have been active for a few hundred thousand years, and all of them have erupted during the past 12,000 years. The 1900's, however, have been rather dull in comparison to the 1800's from the standpoint of volcano watching in the Cascades.

Except for the famous 1914-1917 eruption of Mt. Lassen, no major outbursts have occurred during this century.

When periods of dormancy exceed man's lifespan, there tends to develop a complacency, or more often, a feeling that a volcano is extinct. In reality, what seems to be a long interval to man may only be a short wisp of time on the geological calendar.

Future eruptions are inevitable, but when and how large is difficult to predict. Volcano eruptions vary from relatively quiet outpourings of lava to violent explosions accompanied by showers of volcanic debris. If magma—reaching the surface above the reservoir, does not find its avenue of escape blocked, it flows out quietly.

The present steam and thermal activities at Mt. Baker may not result in an eruption. However, they should be regarded with suspicion and respect for their potential. It would be well to remember that all the Cascade Volcanoes are the same geological type at Mt. Vesuvius, which erupted in 79 A.D. bringing death and massive destruction to an unprepared Roman populace.

The real danger to surrounding areas during the next eruption should not come directly from the few miles of slow moving lava flows that occur on these volcanoes, but from secondary effects such as hot ash, steam, or lava contacting the vast icefields that store about one cubic mile of water on Mt. Baker; large debris avalanches from precipitous slopes and highly altered rock masses or the cones; and mudflows, mixtures of water and debris, that can race down the surrounding valleys at speeds between 35 and 55 mph.

One of the largest known examples of such an eruption from a Cascade Mountain Volcano occurred at Mt. Mazama or Crater Lake, Oregon, 6,600 years ago.

For thousands of square miles, a gray-white mantle of ash covered everything like newly fallen snow. On the mountain itself, the banks of pumice were more than 50 feet thick.

Approximately 70 miles away, on the present site of Bend, the sheet of volcanic ejecta was six inches deep. All that remained of the green forests on the mountainside were gaunt, charred stumps.

At the mountain base, clouds hurtled forward at hurricane rate, 50 to 100 mph. At the bottom of each, almost hidden from view, was an avalanche of glowing ash and pumice.

Some avalanches swept down the valley of the Rogue River for 35 miles. Others poured over the plateau, now crossed by The Dalles-California Highway, as far as Chemult, carrying lumps of pumice up to 14 feet across.

Still others raced across Diamond Lake into the canyon of the North Umpqua and the glacial canyons on the mountainsides were filled to depths of 200 or 300 feet with debris.

If an eruption occurred during the peak of the tourist season—during the spring when the rivers and springs are swollen by floods and large quantities of winter snow still cover the mountain flanks, or when the reservoirs in surrounding valleys were full, the results of flooding and moving debris could be disastrous to human life and property.

A few thousand skiers flock to the Mt. Baker Lodge area on the northwest flanks of the mountain on winter weekends and over 15,000 people live down-valley from Lake Shannon and Baker Lake on the southeast side of the mountain where a large flood of mudflow could cause overtopping of the reservoirs.

Both the Baker River and Mt. Baker Lodge areas contain some of the most recent lava flows from the mountain and would be likely sites for further volcanic activity.

It should be kept in mind that once development of an area begins, it tends to perpetuate itself indefinitely. Decisions concerning type of development and their location should be made while choices and alternatives still exist.

Possibly, agriculture, parklands, logging and other less intensive uses of certain land area in the vicinity of Mt. Baker should be considered.

Strange Bedfellows

By Doug Sly
News Editor

I like writing about committees about as much as people like reading about them. To make an obscure committee interesting or relevant to the reader is most difficult.

But a committee has recently emerged that could prove interesting, relevant and important to a lot of people.

The Academic Senate—AS Legislature Conference Committee would seem like any other obscure body that everyone forgets about. As a matter of fact, everybody did forget about it for the past four years.

But this small union of students and faculty was brought out of mothballs recently and, after some study, the reasons for doing so are obvious.

The purpose of the Academic Senate—AS Legislature Conference Committee is to discuss items of common interest existing between students and faculty.

One very big item that faculty and students have in common this year is each body's adversary role with the administration.

Some members of the Academic Senate have collective bargaining on their collective minds. Promotion procedures for faculty and the Dr. Minor case combine to add to the difficulties between faculty and administration.

Student government, contrary to popular belief, is making strong moves to recover the services and activities fees control which it feels has been usurped by the administration. The students are better organized than most people realize and they are after a hell of a lot of money. One thing the administration does not want to lose to the students is the power to budget a lot of money.

The Academic Senate—AS Legislature Conference Committee could allow students and faculty to turn a lot of small administrative problems into one very large administrative problem.

Cooperation between students and faculty is a condition that the administration has reason to fear. Faculty and students should realize this and use it to their best advantage.

If a state of cooperation became more visible to the Board of Trustees, the Board would be more likely to take action on complaints from both students and faculty.

Not Nixon Again

By Sunni Freyer
Feature Editor

I think that it is due time our former esteemed President, Mr. Nixon, came out of his ivory tower to get a good look at America and her people.

In a recent interview made public in an AP wire release Nixon was quoted as saying that America needs to restore its pride in itself.

"The Nation is so cynical, so disbelieving," Nixon said, "that it might take a WAR to regain our sense of belief in our country."

I can only surmise that if given the chance he would rationalize Watergate in a similar manner.

"If American lives are threatened," he added, "We may regain our sense of belief in our country. We have very little leadership in the country today."

Eldridge Cleaver flew from Paris to America, resigning his exile status and praising the land of the Free recently.

The one-time leader of the Black Panthers said, "With all its faults, the American political system is the most free and democratic system in the world."

Quite strange, if not startling words to come from the mouth of a man who seven years ago was one of the most radical leaders in the U.S.

I might go so far as to suggest that Mr. Nixon look towards Cleaver for the leadership he finds so lacking in the U.S. Nixon should refrain in the future from making "post office" statements as incredulous as these when he, Himself, was a prominent catalyst in degrading the American system.

We, as Americans, should have faith that now that he is out of office, America will survive the catastrophic effects of his "reign of power."

I suggest that Nixon fight his own private wars. It's he who needs to show pride in America.

Dear Editor,
 I can't believe that your entertainment editor and I attended the same Roberta Flack concert. Not only was the lady's voice as dynamic and unique as any of her "studio" recordings, but she was very sexy and "doing the happy"—smiling and teasing the audience with her exciting dialogue. She sang songs which the audience came to hear, i.e. "Killing Me Softly", but also introduced new material and a new song which Stevie

Minor Praised

Dear Editor,

In the lives of us mere humans, fate sometimes plays a very interesting part in our lives. Being incarcerated in prison we, more than most, labor under the joyous apprehension that fate if not faith will intervene in our cause. Is it mystical fate or Divine faith that brought us hope in the person of Dr. Charles Minor? We, the Black prisoners of Washington State Penitentiary at Walla Walla feel we have been chosen by a higher power to be blessed with the capable helping hands of Dr. Charles Minor. Blessed because in today's crisis prone world we seem to be everyone's whipping post. If society falters in direction: "How are we to see the way?" Are we to have hops? Dr. Minor says "yes." So has he demonstrated in so positive a fashion we cannot impassionately become mere spectators to the macabre drama unfolding before us at Eastern Washington State College.

To the staff we direct a question: Is it education for survival in a highly technological society you offer? Or education for mere ritualized status? Does the color of a man's God given skin determine what his station in life is to be? Do you find fault with his academic capabilities? Do you find fault with his conduct on and off the campus as befitting a man of his responsibility? These are some of the questions you should give concerted answers to as you weigh his continuous participation in the educational program you offer.

We would like to apprise you of the tremendous contribution Dr. Minor has so unselfishly given to the residents both Black and White here at Washington State Penitentiary.

We have an organization inside the Penitentiary dedicated to the improvement of the Black residents. It is impossible to assess the contributions of Dr. Minor

Opinion

Students Talk Turkey

DO YOU AGREE WITH BENJAMIN FRANKLIN THAT THE TURKEY, RATHER THAN THE AMERICAN EAGLE, SHOULD BE OUR NATIONAL BIRD?

Pam Popp—Junior, Dental Hygiene; It's an asinine question, I think.

Roya Molavi—Senior, Political Science; Dumb question.

Dave Harding—Junior, Music; I would suggest a mongoose.

Vincent Voelker—Senior, R/TV; If we had as good a record with the cultivation and preservation of the turkey as we did the eagle, then they'd all be extinct.

Linda Rogers—Freshman, Education; Yes, after all the turkey was used at the first Thanksgiving which marked the beginning of our country.

Chand Saptarshi—Graduate Student, Business and Instructor; I've always been impressed with things which give an impression of grandeur and the eagle seems to be a better bird than a turkey. Besides, how many Americans would want to be called turkeys instead of eagles?

Nick Galbreath—Senior, Psychology; Sure, isn't this country based on the turkey philosophy? In a country of national well-standing that is led by turkeys why change birds in the middle of a screw.

Steve Ellis—Junior, Psychology; Personally, I always had a thing for sparrows.

Barbara Greenleaf—Freshman, P.E.; No, if it were our national bird we couldn't eat it for Thanksgiving.

Grant Rosenquist—Junior, R/TV; No I mean definitely not. The eagle is a picture of grace in flight and the way most people see the turkey is on the Thanksgiving table, burnt.

Sunny Cronkey—Sophomore, Undeclared; Since the nation is run by them, it might as well be.

Tim Hicklin—Senior, R/TV; Well....of course. I thought it was anyway.

towards the residents attempt at self help. Dr. Minor is one of the founding supporters and contributors to helping the Black prisoners create and maintain an organization that can and does afford the opportunity to become aware of the many problems facing offenders incarcerated in isolation away from main stream society. Also, because of Dr. Minor we are proud to identify with the Black contributions to society. As a Black culture nucleus inside a White society, we have acquired tremendous values in personal identity.

Dr. Minor's contribution has not been as a black man, rather as a man possessing humility and concern for all men. We, the residents of Washington State Penitentiary, support Dr. Minor. We ask in all humility that he be judged not by the color of his skin, but by his actions and endeavors of which we salute.

2001 Brings Space Adventure To Pub

2001: A Space Odyssey is being shown Saturday and Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in the PUB multi-purpose room. Admission for the presentation is 75 cents.

The innovative cinematic treatment and the subject matter elevated the film to major attraction when it was released.

Director Stanley Kubrick combined kaleidoscopic visual images with scores of experimental and classical music to achieve a synthesis description of space travel in the 21st Century.

Kubrick, who made such films as Lolita, Dr. Strangelove, Paths of Glory and A Clockwork Orange, co-wrote the script with Arthur C. Clark, dean of American Science fiction.

They included a thread of philosophy in the film which traces man's evolution from the ape through the space age.

Kubrick won Oscars for best cinematography and best special effects for 2001: A Space Odyssey.

He was not nominated for best make-up by the academy Awards selection committee because the members failed to realize that his apes were intricate costumes and make-up

They thought he actually used apes in filming the sequence.

That's Entertainment, which was originally scheduled, was shown on TV Tuesday night.

The Social Activities Review Board (SARB) viewed the televising as compromising the chances of recouping the film's rental cost and 2001: A Space Odyssey was substituted.

Chapin Pleases Audience; Muldaur Quality Declines

By Michael Heavener
Entertainment Editor

Rock performers fall into two categories, as two stars proved last week at the Spokane Opera House.

They can, like Harry Chapin, on Friday, indicate that a receptive audience deserves extra effort from the performer.

Or, like Maria Muldaur on Wednesday, they can play an entire concert without giving any thought to the people who paid to see them perform.

Muldaur wasn't performing poorly, it just seemed she didn't care about Spokane.

She flirted with her band members and sipped rum-and-cokes through the hour-and-a-quarter set. At times she acted more like she was still the back-up singer for Jim Kweskin's Jug Band rather than the lady who had a whole concert to herself.

I'm A Woman was the only song in which her voice really sounded good. The rest, including Midnight at the Oasis, were pale versions of the Muldaur legend.

It didn't help that her sound system was so bad that she was lost in the feedback which startled her several times.

On the other hand, Chapin presented a well-rounded show, with plenty of schmaltzy audience pleasing humor.

He sent his brother Tom, star of ABC TV's Let's Make A Wish, out to warm the audience up. Tom told folksy stories and set the mood pretty well.

A solo number called My Monophonic Symphony Six-String Orchestra led to a song by brother Steve on piano, during which Harry sat in the audience.

He followed this fun number with Cat's in the Cradle and Taxi, his other two hits.

He was obvious in his playing to the audience, his timing was excellent and he gave the crowd what they came for, a good show.

Chapin was using the same sound system Muldaur had and it didn't give a whimper when he took his microphone into the audience.

Not a person moved during Chapin's set, while people streamed out of the Opera House the last half hour Muldaur played.

Both artists played popular tunes, of little lasting value. The difference was that Harry Chapin put on a show, while Maria Muldaur simply played the music.

Orchesis Review

Dancers Show Moods of Drama

Combining elements of dance, music and story-telling into a cohesive whole, the Orchesis dance group performed a work titled Things That Go Bump In The Night last Thursday and Friday.

The dancers, under the tutelage of Edith Bucklin and Leonard Fowler, brought together ballet, classical jazz, rock jazz and pantomime.

Though the story line left much to the audience's imagination, the dancing was professional.

At times the movement in the Dustin Dance Studio was compellingly hypnotic. By contrast, the choreographers included daily mundane occurrences to give a balanced picture.

Things That Go Bump In The Night told of a day in the lives of nine apartment dwellers.

The day was broken into pieces and settings involving small groups of dancers, each performing to a particular mood of music.

The Awakening used Beethoven's Pastoral symphony to convey the peaceful tranquility of waking to sunlight as the milkman makes his rounds.

The Chase, where the hen-pecked husband is rescued from his shrewish wife by a beautiful neighbor, was done to Moussorgsky's Night on Bald Mountain.

This piece and one titled Pink Panther which was performed to Mancini's music, were the stand-outs.

The choreography and timing apparent in the two pieces made the whole Orchesis concert well-worth seeing.

The best characterization in the hour-long performance was given by Connie St. John as the shrewish wife. Her scowls, stooped-over figure and hyper-active movements were convincingly theatrical.

Despite the fact that the sound system was over-amplified and the Dustin Studio couldn't be properly darkened from the afternoon sunlight, the dance group went to a good deal of effort to prepare and promote the concert.

New Gold Album Continues Elton John Winning Streak

By Kevin Harris
Staff Writer

The Superstar of the 70's has earned another gold star with an album totally different from his past successes.

Of course, the only man who can fit that title is Elton John, and his current album, Rock of the Westies, is a new kind of sound for him.

One of the reasons is his new band. Nigel Olsson and Dee Murray are no longer with the group, so in this LP, four new members join Davey Johnston and Ray Cooper.

The new members are not amateurs, having played with such performers as Joe Walsh, Stephen Stills, and Melissa Manchester. They are the kind that can back a star like Elton.

As were his past two albums, this album was recorded at Caribou Ranch in Colorado. It had certified gold in less than a month, containing one of his top ten singles, Island Girl.

There are songs in Westies that touch every kind of contemporary pop music, from the progressive hard rock sound of Grow Some Funk of Your Own to the soundlike beat of Feed Me to the easy listening of I Feel Like a Bullet in the Gun of Robert Ford.

There are some songs in Westies though that do touch the top 40 bracket of music such as Dan Dare (Pilot of the Future) and Hard Luck Story.

These cuts are filled with jargon like "Ooeeooeeoo", and "Holy cow" and repeated choruses, such as the album's final cut, Billy Bones and the White Bird, where you are entertained to about two to three minutes of Elton singing, "Check it out, check it out, check it out."

These are the elements of typical Elton John "fun music," as many music critics are apt to call it.

However, Elton didn't accomplish this all himself. Besides the fact that Westies was produced by the legendary Gus Dudgeon, and Bernie Taupin helped with the songs. There are guest spots in all the songs by Kiki Dee.

Jose Feliciano Sets Lilac Concert Date

When Jose Feliciano sings and plays his guitar Sunday night, he will be displaying the tip of an iceberg of awesome talents.

Although he is best remembered for his World Series performance of The Star-Spangled Banner and his version of Light My Fire, he has written some excellent music.

He was nominated for an Emmy award for his Chico and the Man theme.

His newest albums, And the Feelin' Good and Just Wanna Rock 'n' Roll, are selling phenomenally.

But Feliciano in recent months has demonstrated that he can do things besides compose and perform.

He has a role in the upcoming movie Aaron Loves Angela, which he also scored and performed the theme songs.

Besides entertaining, Feliciano is active in a program called Blind Outdoor Leisure Development (BOLD) which was designed to help fellow blind persons learn horseback riding, skiing and other sports.

Feliciano participates in all of BOLD's outdoor activities, including learning to ski at Aspen, Colorado.

His last triumph was playing lead guitar on Joni Mitchell's hit Free Man in Paris.

Appearing as Special Guest Artist on the 8 p.m. show is Kenny Rankin.

Rankin is also a singer-composer, responsible for reversing the trend of music in the 70's back toward soft, melodic sounds.

The Jose Feliciano-Kenny Rankin show is in the Opera House Sunday night at 8 p.m. Tickets for the performance, for $4.00, $5.00, and $6.00, are available at the Box Office and all Bon Marche outlets.

Soloist With Symphony

An internationally renowned bassoonist will be combining his talents with the EWSC Symphony Orchestra Tuesday at 8:15 p.m. in Showalter Auditorium.

Milan Turkovic, principal bassoonist with the Vienna Symphony has a far-reaching reputation as a teacher in Europe and America.

Turkovic will solo during the Concerto in F Major by Carl Maria von Weber.

Other pieces to be performed by the orchestra are Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4 in A Major, Greig's Norwegian Dances and Charade by young American composer Robert Muczynski.

The orchestra is directed by Dr. Wendal S. Jones.

The concert is open to the public, with admission by donation. Free tickets for students are available at the PUB information desk.

Hungry Cagers Open Season

By Jim Waggoner
Sports Editor

Eastern's basketball season opens here Saturday night with the alumni providing the opposition in the first game played in EWSC's Special Events Pavilion.

A large crowd is expected for the contest as area hoop fans will witness the roundball inauguration of the spacious, new facility which is regarded as the finest in the Northwest. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

And to complement the opening of the Pavilion, Coach Jerry Krause will unveil a star-studded lineup which rates as a definite Evergreen Conference title contender.

"I guarantee you that the fans will be entertained this year," commented Krause. "We have good depth, balance and a lot of unselfish players. They are working very hard to reach their potential and they're making excellent progress."

The players will select the starting lineup today in a team vote—just one facet of Krause's innovative coaching philosophy which stresses shared responsibility.

Lettermen Back

But five hoopsters were starters a year ago and can be expected to see considerable action Saturday. John Alaniva, Jeff McAlister, Eddie Waters, Rob Ridnour and Ron Cox know the system and form the nucleus of the squad.

The pressure defense, patient offense brand of basketball that Krause initiated here nine years ago, will once again be employed this season.

And a host of returning EWSC lettermen, including last year's co-captains Randy Harris and Bernie Hite, will attempt to stymie the well-disciplined Eagle attack.

Randy Buss, Easterns most recent All-American, will return from his home in Illinois to spearhead the alumni's efforts.

Jerry Krause —

"I guarantee you that the fans will be entertained this year."

"The alumni should be very strong," said Krause. "Besides Harris and Hite, they should have another dozen solid players. We're going to have to play pretty good to win."

Eagles Ready

The Eagles appear to be healthy, although 6'9" Idaho State transfer Dave Allen will see limited action because of a knee injury. Raymond Palmer sustained a knee ailment in practice last weekend, and Palmer and another transfer, Ernest Lawrence, do not become eligible for Eagle action until the end of fall quarter.

Some of the alums who have arrived on campus include Eric Davis (72), Joe Bullock (70), John Nugent (59), Dave Pounds (69), Larry Gunn (58), Steve Hook (73), Jack State (66), Dale Straddling (52), and Joe Williams (68).

Other varsity members include Randy Dyer, Emerson Gordon, Kevin Campbell, Terry Pepple and Paul Hungenberg.

Reese Tribute

Krause and assistant Ron Raver reinstated the alumni game when they arrived on the Eastern roundball scene eight years ago. The contest reached its peak in 1972 when over 40 graduate lettermen returned to pay tribute to legendary EWSC coach Red Reese. Reese died in March 1974.

Reese was coach at EWSC from 1930-64 and served as athletic director from 1938-62. His All-Sport lifetime record was 827-358, an unbelievable percentage of .698.

As basketball coach from 1930 on his teams won a total of 473 games in 34 years. EWSC captured 12 EvCo championships and went to the NAIA five times.

The WSU grad was not only a dynamic figure in Northwest sports but was highly respected on a national level. He helped found the NAIA and served as its president in 1952.

EWSC Ski Program Offered This Winter

As the days grow colder the skiers grow bolder in anticipation of the upcoming ski season. With early snowfalls and freezing temperatures already upon us, it looks like nothing but a long, fantastic season is in store.

In coalescence with winter's most popular sport, EWSC and the Department of Health and Physical Education are offering a comprehensive ski program of several different courses applicable to any level skier.

Offered in the program are courses for the beginner, the intermediate, and the advanced skier. In addition to these courses, lessons will also be available for those interested in freestyle, cross country, and instructor preparation training.

Added to this year's program is a special EARLYBIRD session in which beginning skiers are given the opportunity to learn to ski before Christmas. The EARLYBIRD ski lessons will be offered at 49° North near Chewelah, and will be taught through the GLM (Graduated Length Method).

The regular beginner lessons will be held Saturday, Jan. 10 at 49° North. Intermediate skier courses will be offered at both Snowblaze, near Spokane and at 49° North. Classes will begin Friday, January 9 at Snowblaze and Saturday, January 10 at 49° North.

Advanced skiing courses will be available at Snowblaze on Friday, January 9 and at 49° North on Saturday, January 10.

Women Complete Tourney

By Dave Stocker
Sports Writer

The Women's Racquetball tournament was held last Saturday with 14 women participating in two divisions.

In the "A" division, Gail Norvell defeated Debbie Huth 15-4, 15-3 and Tamera Arrasmith 15-0, 15-0 to clinch the championship. Connie Crawford took the "B" division crown as she downed Kelly Hancock 15-8, 15-13, and Tamera Arrasmith 15-9, 15-3.

Coed Volleyball ended its fall campaign Monday by crowning The Diggers as their new champions. Second place honors went to Hawaii Five-O, and third place awards were won by NAIC II.

In the semi-final game between the Diggers and NAIC II, the Diggers rode the excellent spiking of Clay Lewis and Rod Gardner to win 15-9 and 15-7. Then in the final match, the Diggers needed three games to clinch the title. Hawaii Five-O, riding the play of John Dang and Fred Sasan, put up an outstanding fight, but fell 15-7, 11-15, and 15-5.

Men's 3-on-3 basketball took to the courts with a full slate of action this week. Games are played Monday thru Thursday evenings, with action beginning at 5:30 p.m. in both Phase II and the Fieldhouse.

Some of last week's scores include:

Flacid Floggers 48, Peon Patrol 38—Steve Lee netted 20 points to lead the Floggers to victory.

Wool 52, Chinga Chops 42—Norris Palmenter scored 24 for the Chops, but it wasn't enough to stop Wool.

Nets 46, Easterner "A" 40—Jim Waggoner tallied 28 for the Easterner team, but Mark Anderson countered with 20 as the Nets squeaked out the victory.

Ball Hawks 66, Fearless Four 38—Jeff Bethel scored 22 and Gopher Somday netted 28 as the Hawks coasted to victory. Randy Schultz scored 22 for the Fearless Four.

Dudes 48, Trotters 46—Ross Sgan meshed 22 as the Dudes took a nail-biter from the Trotters. Steve Timer hit for 20 points in a losing cause for the Trotters.

Quote of the Week—(Charlie Finley, when he hired Alvin Dark for the second time) "Yes, he has been manager of this club before. Yes, he was fired. Yes, he is back to manage this club. Yes, he expects to be fired again some day."

MIKE HARDING LINES UP for the eight ball in the corner pocket during the preliminary round of the "King of Eight" pool tournament in the PUB game room. The final games of the tournament will be played today (Thursday) at 3:00.

Gridders Finish With Road Victory

By Jim Waggoner
Sports Editor

It's back to the drawing board for Eagle football coach John Massengale and his staff as they hit the recruiting trail and begin making plans for next season's gridiron slate.

And they'll do so on a positive note after Eastern's grididers concluded the season last Saturday with a 33-13 rout over Western Montana in non-conference action at Dillon.

After enduring a 3-6 overall record this season, Massengale knows what he's looking for as he prepares to scour high schools and junior colleges for blossoming talent.

"The key to our success for next year is improving our line play," said Massengale. "We have the potential of being a very good football team next year. We're very strong in the skilled positions."

Consistency Problems

Calling the 1975 campaign "frustrating," Massengale cited inconsistency and nagging injuries as major stumbling blocks.

"I think we could have been a 6-3 football team and what kept us from being 6-3 was inconsistency," the veteran grid mentor said.

EVERGREEN Final Standings

League	All
Ore. College	6-0 9-0
Cent. Wash.	4-2 5-4
So. Oregon	3-3 5-4
West. Wash.	3-3 3-5
East. Ore.	2-4 5-4
East. Wash.	2-4 3-6
Ore. Tech	1-5 3-5

This week's game: Southern Oregon at St. Mary's.

"We played well throughout the year but lacked consistency. And because of injuries, we never started the same backfield two weeks in a row."

Begovich Connects

Marco Begovich's sharp-passing and Barry Sartz' rather unorthodox place kicking led the Eagles past Western Montana.

Begovich, who came on strong late in the season, tossed three touchdown strikes and Sartz booted field goals of 46 and a school and Evergreen Conference record of 54 yards.

Because of raging winds up to 50 miles per hour, Sartz approached the ball from the side and aimed for the corner. On both of his FG's the ball curved over the goalposts.

The Eagles struck immediately into the contest when Tom Bassett hauled in a 20-yard Begovich touchdown pass. Begovich then clicked with Al Berta on a 46-yard aerial toss and Sartz's 46-yarder lifted Eastern to a 17-0 first quarter lead.

The Bulldogs tallied the only second period points on a one-yard sneak by quarterback Shane Westfall.

The outcome was decided in the third stanza as Begovich hit Bassett with a 39-yarder and Sartz kicked his record-shattering field goal from 54 yards out.

"We could not stop their rushing game and they couldn't stop our passing attack," said Massengale. "We did very well throwing, considering the wind conditions."

"It's always good to end the season with a win," he added.

Seniors Praised

Massengale praised the seven Eagle seniors who have concluded their collegiate careers.

"The seniors played well against Western Montana and they were the backbone of the team this season," he said.

"And Mike Richter deserves a great deal of special recognition and I hope he gets that in the form of being named All-American. He's an outstanding leader and person," Massengale remarked.

Wrestling: Winning Tradition

By Bill Bighaus
Sports Writer

This is the second part of a preview of the 1975-76 Eastern wrestling team. In part one last week, Eagle wrestling coach Curt Byrnes reported that with seven returning lettermen, many promising transfer and freshmen prospects and overall depth in the weight classes, this year's Eagle grapplers should have another successful season.

In this part, Byrnes talks about inter-squad competition for starting line-up berths, the winning tradition in the Eastern wrestling program and the upcoming freestyle match tomorrow night against the University of British Columbia.

The team has excellent depth for the first time in years and Coach Byrnes said that everyone on the team is pushing hard to gain a spot in the line up.

"The team is pretty well balanced as far as the weight classes are concerned," said Byrnes. "Our only problem is that we don't have a returning starter at Heavyweight and 190 is also a question mark."

Byrnes hopes that Keith Burns can work up from 177 to 190 and along with Bob Altshuler from Columbia Basin JC, Larry Sichelstiel, who was ineligible last year, and Chuck Lee can help fill the hole at this weight class.

As competition among the weight classes for spots in the Eastern line-up continues, Byrnes offered this capsule summary of each weight division and those wrestlers still fighting for berths.

Nine of the above mentioned wrestlers are freshmen. Byrnes said that Lorton was a tree time state champion in high school at Goldendale. Yonago, from Lewis and Clark in Spokane, was a two time placer in the Triple A championships. Other freshmen who according to Byrnes have "looked real good" are Worthington, Wilcox, Ross and Adams.

A winning tradition has developed in the Eagle wrestling program and Byrnes said, "In the past two years the program has really made some accomplishments."

The high point was when the Eagles finished sixth in the national in 1974. The momentum from that winning season and last year's 10th place finish in national is felt as the Eagles begin the 1975-76 campaign.

Byrnes makes it clear that he is going after the EvCo crown, something that has evaded him the last two years.

"We have set our sights on the conference championship and we're going all out to win it," he said.

"I will be disappointed if we don't end up high in our conference and also in nationals. Our competition is our key to success. We meet some good teams and people during the season which will prepare us for the national championships," he said.

Eastern's season begins at 7:30 tomorrow night in the Special Events Pavilion against the University of British Columbia in a freestyle match. Byrnes said that this match uses international style rules and should be very interesting.

On Saturday the Eagles travel to Coeur d'Alene to participate in the North Idaho Takedown Tournament.

Blood Donor Rejections Numerous

The ROTC Blood Drive, held last Thursday and Friday in the PUB, rejected an unusually high number of persons wishing to donate blood, compared to previous drives.

A significant number of those rejections were said to have been due to iron poor blood.

Several nurses speculated that the blame should be placed on Tawanka Commons for nutritional deficiency in the food they serve.

Although statistics were not available to examine the validity of this speculation, it has nonetheless caused concern among students eating at Tawanka.

Results of the two-day drive is as follows:

Thursday, Nov. 13—116 pts. total, 179 participated, 63 rejected.

Friday, Nov. 14—109 pts. total, 184 participated, 75 rejected.

Totals—225 pts., 359 participated, 138 rejected.
