Council may break child care contract

By Lisa Moon
Staff Writer

Disagreement with service has led the Associated Student Counsel to attempt to terminate their contract with the Cheney Child Care Center.

"We believe we are not getting our money's worth," said Craig Hansen, AS executive assistant. "Eastern is unique in its large number of student parents and there is a need for efficient child care. I believe we have grounds for terminating the contract."

Some of the problems cited by Hansen were ambiguities in the contract wording, and its rates, which are a base fee of $400 per month for 0-20 children receiving assistance. The AS subsidizes a minimum of $4,800 per month for the child care program.

Several complaints concerning conditions at the center were received by the AS during spring and summer quarters of the past year. Letters and phone calls from parents and former employees at the center voiced concern over unsanitary environments, lack of disinfectant use, smoking in food preparation areas, and children being left unsupervised.

Beverly G. Sleight removed her two children from the center last spring after seven months of enrollment. She strongly felt that EWU should discontinue their contract with the Cheney Child Care Center due to reasons stated in a letter she wrote to AS. Portions of that letter are listed below.

"Our children were constantly coming down with rashes, sore throats, temperatures, diarrhea, colds this past month. We had symptoms. We feel that this was due to ill children remaining at the facility rather than being taken home, thereby exposing other children.

...The area where the babies and toddlers had the diaper changed had no provisions to disinfect the changing mat between children.

...Smoking was permitted in the food preparation area, which also doubled as a break area.

...Many times when we dropped off or picked up our children, there was no adult around. At times, the staff could be found in the break room."

Many of the complaints in Sleight's letter were repeated in other letters, especially the claims of sickness, diarrhea, lack of disinfectant, and smoking in food areas.

On May 9, 1983, Susan Helton, former ASEWU executive assistant, submitted observations of her visit to the center, describing the atmosphere as "...very cold and gloomy, with questionable sanitary conditions."

According to Cheney Child Care Director Michael Korcz, no complaints have been received this fall.

The Cheney Child Care Center is operated by a board of directors headed by Joe Chaithurn and is a non-profit corporation. Presently staffed with ten people, the center holds regularly scheduled activities and educational programs.

Expansion options studied

By Cal Vis Simms
Editor

Representatives from the student council will ask the EWU board of trustees at their meeting today for permission to continue working with the administration in their research for a solution to the Pence Union building expansion.

Problems with the expansion plan surfaced last September when bids for construction of the project came back $800,000 over the price the architects had estimated. Since that time the plan has been re-examined, and several options on how to bring the project within the budget have been discussed.

An ad hoc committee composed of members of student government has been meeting several times a week to go over the options in the PUB project. They have also been working with representatives from the administration in the hope of working out some sort of solution that would be acceptable to all parties. Dean Hafner, chairman of the PUB committee, says they are still unsure what the eventual outcome will be, but with some luck he said the expansion could be underway by next February.

One thing the ad hoc committee has done is to have the firm of Brooks, Hensley and Creager, architects who designed the plans, make a "laundry list" of areas where reductions might be made. The firm submitted a report listing areas that might be streamlined from the original plan. The recommendations were made in the form of first, second, and least resort choices for deductions.

The area where the bids came in the farthest from the architects estimate is the firm's reduction of $84,200 under the first choice category. The combined total of the deductions on the new theater, including the least resort deductions, total $381,550.

The option that appears to be the most promising at this point, according to Hafner, is to delay the construction of the new bookstore for at least two years.

"The administration has agreed that the bookstore can be delayed," Hafner said. He also said he hopes the student council will continue to work with the administration on the project.

Another possibility that is being closely examined is the purchase of a substation to generate electricity. It was hoped the construction of the new building at that time will be more competitive and the bids will come in much lower.

Associated Students is expected to make a decision at their Nov. 29 meeting regarding the resolution. The 30-day extension on the bid prices from the council received last month is due to expire Dec. 8.

Head-on crash claims a life

A fatal accident last week on State Highway 904 between Cheney and Four Lakes has drawn attention to potential dangers in driving that section connecting EWU to I-90.

Karen Johnson, a Cheney resident, is concerned with the safety of the highway. "We need more safety-minded drivers, please, to help us," she said.

The most treacherous stretch of Highway 904, the curve near the rodeo grounds, is near the site of the head-on collision that Wednesday claimed the life of a 47-year-old man.
Students will also be asked the chance to choose classes. The next week offers more than just whether they want to donate a dollar to the Washington Student Lobby. Eastern was the last of the state’s six four-year schools to join the student activities supporting the move. The board of trustees approved a positive/negative checkoff funding system. Students failing to complete ad-

Winter-quarter registration will be held only for those who want to give a dollar to the lobby. New forms with the WSL check-off boxes aren’t yet available, so the questions will be asked while students are checking in at the time they register whether or not they want to give a dollar to the lobby.

Lecture set

Friday

By Cassie Andrews

Staff Writer

Dr. Adolphus Turkson, a Fulbright Professor from Portland State University, will be lecturing on the "Retentions of African Musical Tradition in Afro-American Music" Friday, Nov. 18, in Monore Hall.

The lecture, sponsored by the Black Education Program and the Black Student Union, will begin at noon in the lounge on the second floor of Monore Hall.

Dr. Turkson is presently a Fulbright-Hayes visiting professor of music and black studies at Portland State University. He has served as director of the School of Performing Arts at the University of Ghana and was a visiting research scholar at the Institut der Universitat Koln, West Germany.

He is a well respected and recognized international music theorist and historian, and is credited with numerous articles and research studies in the area of African and Afro-American music and culture.

Rejection leads to revised bill

By Alice Kirkman

Staff Writer

The ASEWU Tuesday adopted future means by which it will appoint new members to vacant council positions. But the procedure used in rejecting M.J. Welte's bid to become a council member is still drawing accusations of racism from members of the Eastern community.

Welte, who wished to fill council position 2, was denied the post by a ballot vote at an AS council meeting Sept. 27. The person who eventually did fill the vacant position was selected by a show of hands. According to the council, Welte was denied for many reasons, and they did not include racism.

ASEWU President Gina Hames stated that the whole situation was simply a procedural error on the council's part. "They (the council) are supposed to use a ballot vote every time, but unfortunately they usually choose not to," the council believes that the error made on their part was one of procedure. "We've had minorities on the council up until late spring," Hames said. "How can people assume we're being racist? The procedure was wrong."

Earlier this week, Hames sent a letter to Welte apologizing for the procedure that was followed. Welte said he was disappointed by the letter stating that he didn't feel the letter addressed the real issue. "There is definitely a question of racism involved. The letter is simply a symptom of the illness. Until the council can admit that racial attitudes exist among members of the council the problem will not be resolved. I want the situation to be totally resolved," he said.

The letter, which Hames sent on behalf of ASEWU, has Welte deeply concerned. "The letter states that the procedures normally followed by the council in recent appointments of council members were wrong. Therefore, all those positions that were filled incorrectly would be void," Welte said he didn't know if that would be the case, but he intends to check into it.

Welte feels that council hasn't addressed the real problem. "It scares me to think the council, who is supposed to represent equally the entire student body, has racist attitudes. And I definitely believe that to be the case."

Dr. Felix Boateng, director of the Black Education Program, echoed Welte's concern. "The council first needs to be able to admit that racist attitudes do, in fact, exist in certain members of the council." He went on to add, "One does not have to be a racist to involve himself or herself in racist activities. All of us, including the council, are not free from racism until racism is eliminated from our society. Just as no black person is free as long as one black is not."

Boateng said he is not only concerned because it is Welte who is involved in this issue. "This is an issue that could deeply affect the morale of all minorities on campus. That's where I come in. I feel that it is my responsibility to educate them," he said.

Welte differs. "The council has yet to address the real issue. I will not be satisfied until they face the situation head-on," he said. "Welte also pointed out that when he saw a copy of the minutes of all of last year's meetings, they failed to include the last time they used a ballot vote in appointing a student to a seat on the council. "They either accidentally or intentionally left off the results of that vote," Welte said. "The last time a ballot vote was used was in the case of a Korean student. He, too, was denied a seat on the council. It seems a little strange to me that the council only uses a secret vote for the students who are minorities."

Television message providing education

By Robert Siler
Associate Editor

The nation will face its number one fear this Sunday. Survival after nuclear holocaust will not do double duty among the arguments supporting ABC's "The Day After," a controversial look at a world in which the threat of nuclear war is our greatest fear.

And children already have a deeply instilled fear of nuclear war, the proponents say. Why not let television bring these fears to us graphically and vividly. ABC urges people, especially children, not to view the movie alone, to deal with the emotions that will surely be aroused in the company of family and friends.

Critics of the television event say that it distorts the dangers that face us, and will have an adverse effect on young people.

But let's say the show does a good job of showing the monumental catastrophe that could befal us if the world's leaders push those fateful buttons.

The realities and threats of nuclear war are still there in my mind. Occasionally I see them shaping the moral and political stands I adopt. They haven't yet totally dominated my actions, though. Our call for stewardship of the world's resources and a reason to help our neighbors has kept the nuclear fears at bay.

When I see professional nuclear picketers in West Germany or survivalists in California, I see only a waste. They have turned a single issue into a career. In any profession we need a few people to dedicate their entire lives to what we see as the growing number who have embraced curbing nuclear war means that if there are few and few to do work that is just as important.

Let's watch and discuss "The Day After," no matter how gruesome the facts may be.

But let's not let it run our lives. There is just too much to be done.

Activities lack maturity

To the Editor,

This is my fourth year at EWU, and all this time I've noticed a conflict between the attempt to maintain EWU's intellectual atmosphere and to entertain the student body. The conflict doesn't come from the theater department. I welcome the opportunity to view a play, as they can be a nice change from a dark room and large dog fears that still bother me a bit today.

Eligibility questioned

To the Editor:

Once again a president of the ASEWU is being accused of such a large portion of the live music that is hired to play on campus attract only the age bracket that lives in Cheney.

And is that music even worthy of playing at EWU at all? It is in a place of higher education, so why do we continually hire music that is directed at a seemingly lesser intelligence audience? While neighboring colleges enjoy bands like The Moody Blues, Pat Metheny, Christopher Cross, Jeff Lorber and Earl Klugh, we here at Eastern get nauseating groups like The Tubes (The Tubes??), or Rail (for the one hundredth time) or various other bar bands. I want to see that kind of music. I can go to a bar or see them in the coliseum, where the poor acoustic and background music can only complement their music.

But this is a college; a place where people go when they want to raise their level of intellect. Why is such a large portion of the funding allocated to the "fresh out of high school" intellect? I'm not saying those concerts should be dropped all together. What if I was a freshman, and for most of my sophomore year, I'd sold my soul for rock and roll. The younger rockers and the "never say die" rockers have just as much right as I do to hear their favorite music, but what about the rest of us? What about the generally older audience that lives in Spokane, or what about perspective students? Are people really that uneducated to town to Rail? Not hardly. I think it's about time the money that comes out of our pockets one way or another gets spent on entertainment that is intellectual audience would enjoy.

Op-Ed

Just let Eastern be Eastern

Recent news stories about mergers, consortia and new universities reflect the current debate on the future of higher education in the Northwest.

Today's Op-Ed page is a reprint of a letter to The Spokesman-Review from Dr. Philip Shaver, chairman of Eastern's board of trustees. The Oct. 19 letter was reprinted with Shaver's permission.

The Easterner hopes its readers will use this forum to further discuss the issues Shaver raises.

Wenatchee State's suggestion that Eastern Washington University and Washington State University be merged to better meet Spokane's needs for higher education has helped to narrow and focus attention on the real problem.

At the root of the Spokane needs problem is research programs in business, computer technology/engineering and medicine.

Unfortunately, only the University of Washington and Washington State University are authorized to conduct those research programs in business, computer technology/engineering and medicine.

Feeling that the right to disregard the obligations and restrictions? John Hawkins had to resign because he lacked the necessary of the required six credits per quarter.

4. Why is the current president accepting full-time tuition costs this quarter while only part-time stu­­dents? A former student leader and a proud alumnus, I am shocked and angered that an elected official would take advantage of her office for personal gain. An organization with over 8,000 ac­­tive members deserves honest representatives to manage their one and a half million dollar budget. In order to have a strong student government we must have a strong constitution and officers and students who will abide by that con­­stitution.

Eastern Washington University for some time has responded to the adult students' needs in the Spokane area, and its new $3.1 million downtown center is only the latest example of that.

But although EWU offers very adequate support programs in the liberal arts, the sciences, business and education, it is not permitted to offer Ph.D. research programs in any field. Today, it makes as much sense to locate new business, technology/engineering or medical research programs exclusively at UW or WSU as it would to have located the college of agriculture in Seattle or Spokane at the turn of the century.

"Gradually now" some WSU engineering-type programs to Spokane or Cheney does not necessarily mean that WSU and EWU have to be merged.

The two community colleges in Spokane have never been able to do this, and this pattern is simple to add another layer to the adminis­­trative superstructure.

Thus, why not simply provide EWU with the kinds of additional resources it would need to satisfy Spokane's research needs and allow it to offer those programs?

A highly technical course work can be transmitted via closed-circuit television or computer from the best source locations all over the country.

Alternatively, if the state builds a $13.9 million engineering-type building and an industrial park on the campus at WSU this year, how many Spokane-area businesses, industries or new graduate research students are likely to use them there?

With the budgets of UW and WSU running the way they do, the times that of EWU, it is quite unlikely that Spokane's real needs for higher education will be met until this pattern is broken.

(student body) who remains on the job during summer quarter to regard student interests.

There are several questions that should be addressed.

1. Why hasn't there been a pro­­test, timely, judicial review of these infractions? The student council has only discussed this matter behind closed doors.

2. Why do we have people serving in an office who have not read the Constitution which outlines their responsibilities as set forth in that binding document?

3. Constitutions are adopted to ensure equal justice for all. It is right for the current A.S. presi­­dent to call upon Cardinal Thomas Wolsey, the subject of my paper .

I wrote the paper is reading this column. For his benefit I would like to make a few suggestions.

I will admit from the outset that I am far from an expert on the subject. I will also admit that I hold a somewhat biased attitude toward the preparation of such papers, in that my eyes have yet to adjust to the punishments incurred as a result of the late hours spent directing the life of Cardinal Wolsey, who was, by the way, only fairly fair. But I feel quali­fied to comment on their preparation.

The worst thing, of course, is to avoid the classes that require term papers. This isn't always easy since when registering for classes nowehere in the class description are used to get students addicted.

You might try contacting people who have taken a class you are considering putting on your schedule. This can be beneficial in that they can forewarn you if they can offer you a clear picture or if any of these classes is a science paper.

If you are looking for classes that do not require term papers, it is probably a popular method as demonstrated by the spent some students can rifle through a synop­­tist in the first day of class. If a term paper is required you can watch the class dwindle in numbers as the days go by.

For those of us who find the challenge of a term paper just the right food to feed our masochistic tendencies, term papers are less di­­matic. We look upon these beasts as a academic challenge. This is a common feeling for at least the first few term papers. The reason for this is that the first time you are faced with a term paper.

The standard paper format involves three parts: preparation, composition and evaluation. Writing a term paper is perhaps the most important point in the life of a term paper. Considering a term paper, this can best be illustrated by the following open of the text and the dropping of a pencil on the subject the paper will tackle. This is a mistake. The best way to assure a decent grade on a paper is to carefully probe the instructors' mind for certain facts.

The day before the topic due is due, skim the text and select several key phrases. Approach the professor armed with these phrases and throw a few at him or her. The more interest they show in a subject the less likely your chances of getting a good grade.

When you discover a topic about which the professor seems to know little, you have found your subject.

The reasoning here is that teachers are disgustingly well-educated.

The hours normal human beings spend searching "Here's Com­­pany" return tickets spend reading books. Not just any novels either - they actually read educational books.

If you choose a topic the teacher happens to have been studying recently, each nuance of an error will jump off the paper and into your teachers lap as if读 they were your work. On the other hand, if your topic is one which the instructor last devoted to his studies, you will have a better chance of escaping his analytical eye.

The most important step in the preparation of a term paper is the selection of materials which will serve as sources. Most students flock to card catalogs and the thin Red Book, the first few terms that is nice to gather a few books, but don't leave it at that. Get at least one magazone - for some strange reason this seems to please teachers.

As far as the actual writing goes, you are left on your own. One suggestion though... Read from a book. From the instructor for whom I wrote the paper is reading this column. For his benefit I would like to make a few suggestions.

I think this might also be a good time to consider term papers. After all I have yet to receive the grade for the one I just prepared. And there is always the instructor for whom I wrote the paper is reading this column. For his benefit I would like to say that I took none of the advice that I have just given. I naturally spend the entire quarter researching and writing my paper. And I believe that I wonder what classes he will be teaching next year.

Recent warnings by a state legis­lative committee that local universities cannot sustain their "turf wars" or face the prospect of a statewide administrative system, according to a recent report.

But there is more cooperation than there is "turf war," said Kenneth Dolan, secretary of Eastern's Board of Trustees.

A Sept. 27 ratification by five Spokane area higher education institutions established the Spokane Higher Education Consortium to consider inter-institutional cooperation regarding programs and facilities. It will join other consortium-type programs currently in operation, according to Eastern President H. George Frederickson.

And Steve Christopher, EWU Assistant Provost said that a state-wide university system was unlikely.

"It would only add another layer of administration," he said.

"I don't think they want that." Last August Christopher said he met with officials in the California state system and they agreed that there was still competition between schools.

"There will always be competition between the institutions," he added.

Even though last month's report to the legislature from the Office of Financial Affairs referred to "the history of perceived lack of cooperation between various institutions providing educational service in Spokane," it also says that there is more program cooperation than is commonly recognized.

Eastern is currently involved in several cooperative programs including sharing cable TV airtime with other local institutions to form a cable condominium.

The University is also involved in a language studies consortium with Gonzaga and Whitworth. The institutions pool faculty and arrange for upper-division language majors to select courses taught through the consortium. Students receive college credit and pay tuition through their home schools, said Edmund Yarrow, chairman, EWU language department.

Most of the classrooms used are on the Gonzaga campus.

The Intercollegiate Center for Nursing Education, involving Eastern, Whitworth and WSU, operates differently from other consortiums.

"We are one model of consortium," said Thelma Cleveland, dean of nursing, Eastern.

Formed in 1969 as one of the first inter-institutional cooperative programs, the nursing education center has its own admissions and the three institutions.

"It's a good way to share the resources of the institutions," she said. Even with cooperation between institutions, each school desires FTE (full time students) growth, said the OFM report.

"Schools obviously compete for students," said Christopher. "A little competition is healthy."

Parking decal price goes up
The price of quarterly parking decals will return to $20 for winter quarters.

Last year's parking decals coasted to $17.00 on a trial basis. The price will be raised to make up for a decrease in sales, said Phillip Grafius, parking manager.

"Schools obviously compete for students," said Christopher. "A little competition is healthy."

'Fair Share' at Martin Hall
Eastern students will have the opportunity to view creative and innovative methods of teaching during Martin Hall's "Share Fair."

The Share Fair will be held in Martin #123 on Monday, Nov. 21 and Wednesday, Nov. 23. The methods of teaching showcased will specifically be for use within a classroom atmosphere.

There will be refreshments served at this free event, which will be open to the public from 12-3 p.m. both Monday and Wednesday.

"There will always be competition between the institutions," he added.

Even though last month's report to the legislature from the Office of Financial Affairs referred to "the history of perceived lack of cooperation between various institutions providing educational service in Spokane," it also says that there is more program cooperation than is commonly recognized.

Eastern is currently involved in several cooperative programs including sharing cable TV airtime with other local institutions to form a cable condominium.

The University is also involved in a language studies consortium with Gonzaga and Whitworth. The institutions pool faculty and arrange for upper-division language majors to select courses taught through the consortium. Students receive college credit and pay tuition through their home schools, said Edmund Yarrow, chairman, EWU language department.

Most of the classrooms used are on the Gonzaga campus.

The Intercollegiate Center for Nursing Education, involving Eastern, Whitworth and WSU, operates differently from other consortiums.

"We are one model of consortium," said Thelma Cleveland, dean of nursing, Eastern.

Formed in 1969 as one of the first inter-institutional cooperative programs, the nursing education center has its own admissions and the three institutions.

"It's a good way to share the resources of the institutions," she said. Even with cooperation between institutions, each school desires FTE (full time students) growth, said the OFM report.

"Schools obviously compete for students," said Christopher. "A little competition is healthy."

Parking decal price goes up
The price of quarterly parking decals will return to $20 for winter quarters.

Last year's parking decals coasted to $17.00 on a trial basis. The price will be raised to make up for a decrease in sales, said Phillip Grafius, parking manager.

"Schools obviously compete for students," said Christopher. "A little competition is healthy."

'Fair Share' at Martin Hall
Eastern students will have the opportunity to view creative and innovative methods of teaching during Martin Hall's "Share Fair."

The Share Fair will be held in Martin #123 on Monday, Nov. 21 and Wednesday, Nov. 23. The methods of teaching showcased will specifically be for use within a classroom atmosphere.

There will be refreshments served at this free event, which will be open to the public from 12-3 p.m. both Monday and Wednesday.

Eagles slip by Grizzlies

By Gordon Wittmayer Sports Staff Writer

Jeff Haack led the Eagle ground game to a 27-26 come-from-behind drowning of Montana last Saturday as an estimated 1,000 wet fans watched from rain-saturated Joe Albi Stadium.

Haack rushed for a career-high 213 yards and two decisive fourth-quarter touchdowns in the squeaker. “He had a hell of a fourth-quarter touchdowns in the White, Eastern’s quarterback, tossed four interceptions in the initial three periods, three of which were run back for touchdowns and two of which, in the second quarter, killed consecutive drives inside the Montana ten-yard line.

“For three quarters, he had the worst game of his life,” Zornes said of White. “But you’ve got to give him credit; he came back and played really well in the fourth quarter.”

First-half statistics gave the impression that the Eagles were dominant in that 30 minutes of play. The first-half Eagle turnovers gave the ball to the Grizzlies four times and gave Montana the halftime lead 13-7.

“We just kept giving it to them, giving it to them,” said Zornes.

“We were just self-destructing.”

As the half went by, the Eagles had held possession of the Fall 17 minutes and 56 seconds to 12:34 for the Grizzlies. Eastern had 214 yards of total offense to 54 for Montana (172 to 45 rushing) and EWU led in the first downs department 14-4.

But the Eagles fumbled away one drive and two of those fumbles on white interceptions allowing Montana to become the only team this year to hold a lead over Eastern at halftime.

“They got the turnovers,” said Zornes.

“But that would be all Montana’s offense and we really worried that the defense would get.”

The Eagles climbed back into the game as they took the kickoff following the last Montana score and drove 72 yards for a touchdown. Haack accounted for 46 of those yards with White carrying the drive on a 1-yard pass to tight end Tim Bradbury on fourth and one.

Haack and the Eagles took over the game in the fourth quarter as the senior tailback picked up 85 yards and his two touchdowns on runs of 1 and 37 yards. With the PAT after the 37-yard game-winning run, Eastern took the final lead.

“(It) was one heck uva ballgame,” Zornes said.

The Grizzlies had a chance to win the game in the final seconds, but Montana kicker Eby Dobson booted a 36-yard field goal attempt wide to the right.

Eastern will win, Wazoo lose

Eastern Washington and Washington State can both end the season Saturday with identical streaks.

End the season is correct. Even if WSU upsets the Huskies, the Cougars will not be selected as a participant in one of the 16 post-season extravaganzas.

Victories Saturday by EWU over Portland State in Portland and a win by WSU over cross-river rival Washington in the Apple Bowl match-up in Seattle would give both of the east-of-Cascade universities five-game winning streaks.

Eastern should have a much easier time of it, whereas Wazoo must upset the Huskies for the second straight year. Last year the Cougars ended the season with a 20-17 win over Washington State.

The win was more of a morale booster for WSU. However, it shredded the Huskies’ New Year’s Day plans.

Instead of going to the Rose Bowl – the granddaddy of all bowl games – Washington had to settle for an invitation to the Aloha Bowl in Honolulu on December 28.

Eastern, if it should win its fifth in a row, would add the season a miraculous 5-5. Five weeks ago that didn’t seem possible.

“I thought it was pretty remote,” Eastender Editor Cal FitzSimmons said of the Eagles.

“Though I thought they’d win two, maybe three, and would lose to Long Beach State and Montana.”

Men’s Athletic Director Ron Raver praises the efforts of the players and Dick Zornes and his assistants. “If we were to finish 5-5, my hat’s off to Coach Zornes and his staff for an all-time coaching job,” he said. “The schedule we had this year has a 1 schedule I wanted a year from now.

“It was a schedule of necessity, not a schedule of choice. We weren’t quite ready for that, but you can see how close we played those teams. I think we got the schedule and scholarships out of synch a bit. I wanted to play Big Sky games and preferably five and no Division I-A teams.”

Instead, Eastern has played even Big Sky schools, in which it won two and lost five. Its victories came recently during the win streak over Montana State, 22-17, and Montana, 27-26 and one Division I-A school, Long Beach State. The Eagles, you remember, upset the 40ers of California, 20-17.

“The never think about a record,” said Zornes. “Win or lose you just go on to the next game. I ERNSTATE VS. PORTLAND STATE – This game, believe it or not, has Zornes concerned.

“They pay as good a defense as any team on our schedule. They’re as good as Long Beach State, but maybe not as physical,” said Zornes, 22-16 in five seasons.

“It’s going to be tough for us to win,” said Zornes. “We’ll have to maximize our points. We can’t turn the ball over against them like we did against Montana.”

But Eastern will win and end the season 7-5.

ERNSTE 21, PORTLAND ST. 7

COUGARS VS. HUSKIES – It won’t happen two years in a row. Sorry Jim Walden, but your Cougars will not spoil the Huskies’ planned trip to the Rose Bowl.

Washington will win, pulling away in the fourth quarter. UW, WSU 13

The months of December and January, as usual, are great months for sports enthusiasts.

Besides all the college basketball games on the various networks - USA, ESPN, NBC, CBS and Metro - the bowl games also crowd the channel selector.

Here’s a run down on the bowl games and the dates.

Alaska Bowl, Dec. 26; Bluebonnet Bowl, Dec. 31; California Bowl, Dec. 17; Corron Bowl, Jan. 2; Fiesta Bowl, Jan. 2; Florida Citrus Bowl (formerly Tangerine Bowl), Dec. 17; Gator Bowl, Dec. 30; Hall of Fame Bowl, Dec. 30; Holiday Bowl, Dec. 23; Independence Bowl, Dec. 10; Liberty Bowl, Dec. 29; Orange Bowl, Jan. 2; Peach Bowl, Dec. 30; Rose Bowl, Jan. 2; Sugar Bowl, Dec. 21; Sun Bowl, Dec. 24.

This one comes from Jeff Mor- row, an Eastern senior and former WSU student: “A friend of mine and myself went to the Cougars-UCLA game last year (March 7, 1983) in Pullman. Since it was such a great game (WSU won), we knew the town would be hopping after the game so we went down to Rusty’s Tavern to watch it taped delay. The bar has a juke box and one of the songs on it is the Cougar fight song.

“Well, that song was played over and over and over throughout the game.”

Does Cheney’s own Shovettes or Goofy’s have Eastern’s right song as a selection?”

Executive ruling blocks Eastern

By Greg Lee
Sports Editor

The second part of a three-part series: A hard look at Eastern Washington University's ambition to acquire membership in a Division I conference, including a glance at the hurdles and stumbling blocks Eastern must overcome.

The only summation that one can make is that it's too early to comment or criticize Eastern's effort to obtain conference affiliation.

There's no doubt in Men's Athletic Director Ron Raver's mind that Eastern will some day be a conference member of the Big Sky.

How soon it will take place is the question that remains unanswered.

But that question stands! a good cahnce of getting a reply come January. That's when Raver plans to approach the National Collegiate Athletic Association's executive committee concerning Eastern's hurdle in approaching a conference about membership.

It circles around an executive regulation -- 1-6-b-2(0) -- of the 1983-84 NCAA manual that restricts Eastern and other new-born Division I schools from gaining membership in a multi-sport men's conference.

The portion of the regulation that affects Eastern is: "If an established Division I conference currently receiving automatic qualification elects a new conference member and such institution has been a member of Division I for less than five years, such conference shall remain eligible for automatic qualification in Division I men's basketball. The new member shall not represent the conference as the automatic qualifier until it has been a member of Division I for three consecutive academic years."

If Raver can't persuade the executive committee to make a one-time exception for Eastern and other Division I schools, then the issue will be left up for a vote among the 310 Division I schools. Eastern would need 156 votes, a majority count, to begin serious negotiations with a Division I conference.

If it appears that Raver's proposal would fail miserably, then he would withdraw his rule-exchange proposal. That would mean Eastern would wait another year before it approached the NCAA again.

So Raver has a lot of lobbying to accomplish in the next month and a half.

"This legislation is not to be considered a one-time experiment," Raver said. "It would add to the standing regulations and disadvantages of having a ninth team (possibly Eastern) in the conference. It would give every Sky team an extra football conference game, but would be a hassle for scheduling basketball games."

However, Stephenson has been impressed with Eastern's competitiveness against Big Sky teams in football. "They are a very, very good football team," he said. "They are extremely well-coached. They would be competitive in our conference immediately."

Next issue, part three in a non-part look at Eastern athletics.

The portion of the conference that affects Eastern is: "If an established Division I conference currently receiving automatic qualification elects a new conference member and such institution has been a member of Division I for less than five years, such conference shall remain eligible for automatic qualification in Division I men's basketball until all of its members have fulfilled the five year requirement."

That, in a nutshell, is keeping Eastern from lobbying for membership in the Big Sky. The conference gains an automatic berth into the NCAA basketball playoffs and it, no matter how competitive and attractive Eastern would be for the Big Sky, would not elect EWU as a new member. Not until the matter of automatic qualification is resolved.

The week before the general business session of the NCAA in January in Dallas, Texas, Raver will meet with the executive committee to discuss his proposal of a one-time exception to executive regulation 1-6-b-2(0).

What Raver proposes to add to the standing regulation is: "If an established Division I conference currently receiving automatic qualification elects one new conference member and such institution has been a member of Division I for less than five years, such conference shall remain eligible for automatic qualification in Division I men's basketball until it has been a member of Division I for three consecutive academic years."

“Before the season, we thought if we were healthy we could finish fourth (in league),” said Moe.

“In the future we’ve got to have more height and power,” Moe said. “Fortunately the school is supportive of our move up to Division I.”

Eagles 10th at districts

Eastern's Eagles are proving that they are indeed a force to be reckoned with. Their opening five losses have now been countered with four straight wins. A victory at Portland State this weekend would pull out a .500 mark for the Eagles.

In the past few weeks a number of the early critics of Eastern's poor start have jumped on the bandwagon. This came after consecutive wins over Montana Tech, Long Beach State, the University of Montana, and against the Eagles have won their last schedule. The muffled opinions especially seven in a ten-game turned to open statements as the jor gripe seemed to be that the critics felt Eastern had no place even the Spokane papers. The ma-

Vea satisfied with season

By Greg Lee
Sports Editor

No he hasn't caught 50 passes, scored 10 touchdowns and hauled in 700 reception yards. But Eastern Washington University flanker Jon Vea, a 1982 graduate of Evergreen High School, has had what he terms a "steady season."

Heading into Eastern's match-up with Portland State Saturday in Civic Stadium (kickoff time 1 p.m.), Vea—pronounced VEE uh—has caught 17 passes for 173 yards. He has yet to catch a touchdown aerial. He was one of EWU's top receivers to do his share through the air. The Eagles lost their top receivers to 1982 graduate of Evergreen State, a Division I-A, and Vea, who caught 35 passes for 733 yards and eight touchdowns during his senior season at Evergreen. He gained All-Southwest Washington League twice and was named to the all-state team. "I wanted 25 catches this year. I like the competition (with the other redshirts). There's competition on the practice field, but off the field it's over. We're all good friends."

Vea might have attained his goal for 25 receptions had he not bruised a kidney which forced him to sit out one game. He says he's improved a lot since spring practice. Vea came out of spring drills as the team's starting flanker. "I've had a steady season. I felt I could have had a better season, but it's just experience. That's where I've made a lot of mistakes that up­­shocketes receivers would not have made."

Such as running poor pass routes, missing blocks and not catching catchable passes. Vea doesn't possess afterburner speed. His 4-­foot-­1, 190-pound frames runs the 40-yard dash in 4.7 seconds.

"I don't think we'll ever make a speed demon out of him," Zornes said. "But he does a lot of other things well. He's got good average speed. He's tough, does a good job of blocking and gets the most out of his abilities."

25. The Eagles will face Great Falls in the opening game of a doubleheader, starting at 5:45 p.m. The EWU men will take on Warner Pacific in the nightcap. Sophomore forward Brian Zay (Surrey, B.C.) scored a record 509 points and a record 18.9 average last winter and versatile junior point guard Lisa Comstock (Spokane), a top scorer and passer, also will be available. For All-MWAC honors.

Smithpeters does have concerns under the basket where Zwarych played a year ago before moving back to wing where she may be even more effective.

"He's not doing badly, all things considered," Smithpeters said. "However, we can't get these people back soon, we'll be right back where we were at this time last year - talented, but inexperienced inside."

48. From Sports Information

Coach Jerry Krause will put his 14th Eastern Washington University men's basketball team on public view for the first time Saturday when the Eagles will host a Red and White scrimmage in Reese Court.

"We're not doing badly, all things considered," Krause said. "We need to identify the seven or eight players we can count on as starters. We need to make great strides in a team concept and the injuries and illnesses haven't made it any easier as we try to develop."

Point guard Melvin Bradley (Chicago), centers Tony Chrisman (Wallowa, OR) and Paul Rutherford (Reno), sharp-shooting guard Jeff Reinland (Ponsero) and forward Lincoln Barton (Orchard) are the most experienced veterans available. Transfer Jerry Taylor (Phoenix) also is contending for a starting position.

Meatless dinner set
If you are tired of traditional dinners and would like to experience new tastes the third annual Small Planet Harvest Banquet on Saturday, November 5th, will be just to your taste. The Spokane Community Food Co-op is sponsoring the meatless banquet, to be held from 5:30 p.m. at the Mainline United Methodist Church. The Church is located at 3rd and Washington, and tickets may be purchased in advance from the Co-op. The price for the meatless entrees, soups, salads, and desserts is $5, a bargain for an evening of culin ary culture.

Poet speaking
Professor James J. McAuley, renowned poet and author will present a noon lecture "Poetry is Context" today in Kennedy Library Auditorium. Professor McAuley's work has been published in both this country and abroad. His poems have been included in several anthologies, and he recently wrote the libretto for "Praise," a theater piece with music composed by Wendel Jonas. This noon lecture is sponsored by Phi Kappa Phi Honorary Society at Eastern Washington University. Attendees are encouraged to join Mr. Jonas for lunch to the lecture, which is free.

Jazz concert Friday
By Lisa Moon
Staff Writer
For the first time ever, the EWU Jazz Ensemble and Col legians will perform together in their premier concert of the school season, a "Jazz-A-Rama" tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m. in Showalter Auditorium. The two groups represent the top sections of vocal and instrumental activity at EWU. "Jazz-A-Rama is the first concert of the season," said Director of Choral Activities Ralph Compton, "and always looks forward to our first performance. It gives people an opportunity to see what we have to offer."
This concert is the first event of a two-day jazz festival weekend. Saturday there is a workshop open to the public, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Music Building Recital Hall. That evening at 7:30 p.m. there will be another concert with performed by high school bands from throughout the state, and EWU's Three-O'Clock Jazz group. Students from the University of Victoria are also scheduled to appear.

NOTICE!
Those students who have been disenrolled because of nonpayment may be reinstated by paying the balance of their tuition and fees plus a $25 reinstatement fee. Please pay the balance in the cashier's office, Showalter, 120, prior to 5 p.m., Nov. 18, 1983.

The curtain rose Nov. 3 on the 66th regularly scheduled produc tion of the EWU Theater, "Screwtape." a play adapted by John Forryth from the book "The Screwtape Letters" by C.S. Lewis.
As the lights dimmed I was immediately engrossed by a spectacle on stage. Though the sets seemed simple, I discovered later they were ingeniously designed for versatility, a double bed becoming a church altar, a drafting table, and later, a bench in a garden. The lighting and sound eerie at times, successfully played upon my emotions throughout. Time stood still, and I was absorbed by the story as it unfolded. And, though the plot was a simple one, the characters developed by the eminently skilled actors made me feel as if I were actually living in this story.

MichaeI Green, smothered by the love of his mother (played by Diane Rodocks, who puts in a fine performance and is hilarious at times), turns to the bos's daughter, Judy, splendidly played by the attractive Shelly Bakke, for "real" love.
In the meantime, Screwtape, unknown to Wormwood, calls in reinforcements from the Netherworld—Screwtape! ("You can call me Slu!"), played by Thurea Lystad, putting in one of the most engaging performances of the evening.
Most of the actors displayed talents that were disturbing, even awe-inspiring. Michael's boss, Mr. Macadam, played brilliantly by George Neal, was another surprise. A last minute replacement, he displayed definite talents as an actor. So was the expertly portrayed character of Miflly, played by Krish Johnson. As for Rex, played by Todd "F.C." Wigger, one would hope that in the future his talents were directed to a more starring role, a position Wiggen obviously deserves.
What makes it all so disturbing was how all this talent was wasted. Yes, the play was interesting and fun. But not because it was a good play. It wasn't. It was a poorly written play with a catchy plot. It was the actors who made it work—not the author, John Forryth. It's truly amazing how these actors have successfully managed to produce a worthwhile evening of entertainment when they had such poor material with which to work. Now, that's talent.

I can see these actors performing Edmond Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac," or Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew" and receiving standing ovations. But give great actors a bad play with worse lines...well, the only thing that holds the evening together is appreciating the hard work and expertise these people had to cycle up to make it work. And it works.

It's hard to believe the director Gene Engene willingly chose this play—and I commiss him for taking a script that was lousy and creating an evening of utter enjoyment.
I hope that, in the future, casts and directors pay more attention to the intelligence of the audiences attending. Eastern's students can appreciate well-written literary works. To choose anything less can serve no real purpose.
It is clear that the talent, the technicians, and the facilities exist—and for their sake alone, the play's worth seeing. And, yet... What grand possibilities exist—-squander them?

‘Never Cry Wolf’

By C eastle Andrews

“Never Cry Wolf,” a Disney production is a family-style, animal-oriented movie like those that Disney was known for before the deviations into other genres, for example, the movies “Trekk” and “Warcher in the Woods.”

It is a dramatic documentary, based on a true story about a young biologist who lives in the Arctic wilderness in order to study the wolves that live there. Tyler (Charles Martin Smith) is the biologist who has always dreamed of living off the land, but now that the government is sending him to do just that, he’s nerve-ridden.

He is dropped off in the middle of nowhere by a local bush pilot (Brian Doyle-Murray). As the pilot is leaving, Tyler asks him where he is, and the pilot shows back to him “Bea’s hell out of me,” and flies away.

Tyler begins to unpack the crates that are strewn about on the snow. One contains light bulbs, quite useless out here where there is no electricity, another contains government re-inbursement forms, and another is marked “Do Not Freeze”.

On his first night, he is approached by what he thinks are wolves, but turn out to be sled dogs, driven by an Eskimo. Tyler chases the dog sled until he collides, and the Eskimo, whose name is Ontek (Zachery Ty Bryan) takes him to his makeshift but comfortable cabin.

The Arctic spring comes, and Tyler sets out to observe the wolves. He is supposed to observe them attacking and killing caribou, but he learns that the wolves are actually surviving by eating the abundant mice, as well as many other things. “Never Cry Wolf” is rated PG, not because of the language or any sexual situations, but because there are a few brief shots of nudity. As he gets used to the caribou herd he finally finds. The only other questionable scene is one in which Tyler decides that if wolves can survive by eating mice, then so can he.

“Living with the Volcano: The Artists of Mount St. Helens,” is an exhibition of works exploring the personal impact of the 1980 erup­tions as seen through the eyes of 36 artists, now on display the Showalter Gallery.

The show was organized by the WSU Museum of Art from a nation-wide competition, and contains work in a variety of styles and media. Impressions of aftermath turmoil come to life through acrylic, colored pen, water color, oil pastels, pencil, felt-tip pen, wood-block print, color photography, and gelatin silver print.

Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The collection will be displayed until Dec. 1.

“The Day After”

By Staff Writer

On Sunday at 5 p.m. ABC will broadcast the controversial film “The Day After.” It is also shown at the same time in the Kennedy Auditorium showing. She is sure that all students had a chance to see it.

“The Day After” follows the lives of several people that survive a nuclear attack. Although it is fictionalized, it is based on scientific fact.

In the viewer’s guide to the film, it is stated that the survivors must cope with the terrifying reality of sickness that will result from radiation, and inadequate means to care for the sick and dispose of the dead, limited food and water supplies, outbreaks of violence and lawlessness. These physical hardships are compounded by the people’s psych­numinousness and feelings of helplessness.

According to a statement made by Richard Kozak, an ABC off­cial, the film does not “express a particular political, religious, or ethical philosophy.” It does, however, try to show average citizens and their psychological effects a nuclear war might have on the United States. ABC hopes that viewers will want to gain an understanding of the nuclear issue and the alternatives that there are short of war.

Parents of young children will want to decide whether their children can, and decide it is suitable for 12 to 15 year-olds.

For older children and adults, discussions of “The Day After” can become occasions to identify their deepest fears and voice their hopes for the future. By confronting the perils of nuclear war, individuals can come to terms with their fears and transcend them,” the Guide says.

“The Day After” will also be shown at the same time in the Kennedy Library auditorium on campus for those who do not wish to view it alone and those who do not have access to a television set at that time.

“To see it alone might be not desirable,” said Angela Sylvester, who arranged the Kennedy Auditorium showing. She stressed the importance of the film, saying that she wanted to be sure that all students had a chance to see it.

Seminars dealing with modern issues

By Robert Siler
Associate Editor

Two seminars designed to allow students to discuss and study two current national issues will be ofered next quarter by the University Honors Program, says Director Robert Gariepy.

The first seminar, titled "Humanistic Education," deals with a system of schooling that has developed "in response to an impersonal and dehumanizing system of education which stress-d scientific impersonality, competitiveness, and efforts to 'cover the curriculum,' regardless of a student's ability to grasp, assimilate, and use what was being taught," according to the course description.

The other seminar, titled "Brave New World: Biological, Social and Ethical Issues," concerns recent developments in the World of science that have raised social, legal and ethical questions.

"Test tub babies, organ transplants, recombinant DNA technology and genetic engineer-ies, behavior modification, fetal experimentation, prolongation of life — all of these topics are fraught with potential benefits as well as potential dangers," the course outline states.

The humanistic education

seminar will be offered Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-9 p.m. The four-credit course will be taught by Dr. Russell Nothbro, an associate professor of education.

The recent national discussions on excellence in education and continuing advances in science have made the discussion of these issues in the classroom timely,

Gariepy said. He and Dr. Harreth

Lightfoot, associate professor of biology, will be teaching the Brave New World seminar, Monday and Wednesday from 1-3 p.m.

The two seminars are discussion-oriented classes, Gariepy said. Students will read articles and prepare reports, and in some cases listen to panel discussions and debates.

The classes are open to anyone with at least a 3.3 grade point average. Students interested in more information should contact the Honors Program office in Hargreaves 204, or call Gariepy at 359-2354.

traveling south on the highway in the area of the Escort wagon. An occurring 1978 Ford Maverick, driven by 16-year-old Kirk Verhoef, swerved left apparently to avoid collision with O’Dell as he or O’Dell moved back into his own lane. The cars collided head-on, killing O’Dell and injuring his passenger, Jeanette Puryear.

As of Tuesday, Puryear was in stable condition at Sacred Heart Medical Center in Vernon. Her and O’Dell’s two 15-year-old passengers were treated at Sacred Heart and released the night of the accident.

According to a Department of Transportation report, O’Dell was attempting to pass a school bus, in a no-passing zone.

Johnson was concerned with the safety of children on the school buses that travel on that section of highway every school day. “A lot of my citizens is for the student population...not just the college students but the high school students, too,” she said.

She said her children ride the school buses and that last week’s accident occurred near a bus stop.

She also pointed out that there are “no school bus zones or any kind of separation of students.” She felt that there should be some indication that buses use the highway.

She also said for safety zones “are adequate,” she added. “I have seen those buses that travel on that section of highway.”

As far as enforcement on the road, Osborne said that there are eighteen troopers that patrol that area of road, but those troopers are also in charge of patrols of parts of 190 and Highway 22 and 902.

Osborne also pointed out that the safety factor is not only affected by the road or create hazards through other unlawful acts.

She also suggested that the highway section might be converted into a continuous no-passing zone, but that if someone might drive down the road it might be even more dangerous. She felt that having no signs of a no-passing zone might instigate impatience, causing more danger.

Johnson also feels that Eastern students, as well as other students who drive, create a hazardous situation on the road. “The people don’t have the driving task in mind,” she said, “they want to get to school and get away.”

But Roger Zimmerman of Roger’s Auto Equipment in Cheney, the firm that towed the Maverick from the accident scene, offers differing evidence. He says that he calls the boys during the year “hold pretty much to the road,” indicating that student driving has little effect on the safety of Highway 902.

And Trooper Wagen of the Washington State Patrol said of student traffic during the school year, “that’s just traffic,” adding that the only problem was “too many kids on the road or create fictive flow.”

There were no records of the Osburn, also of the State Patrol, “Yes, there’s more people out there on the road,” commenting on the students’ effect on the safety of the highway.

Both Zimmerman and Osburn agreed that the worst section of road is the curve near the rodeo grounds.

Q: Should you try to totally eliminate fat from your diet?

The fat in your diet serves many important functions. Vitamins A, D, E, and K are fat-soluble vitamins, meaning they are found in fat and fat is needed in order for the body to absorb these vitamins. Fat is an excellent source of energy, supplying 9 calories per gram, while protein and carbohydrates foods supply only 4 calories per gram. Certain fats are also essential to the body for normal growth and development. Fat is also needed by everyone some fat diet, Americans consume far more than they need. It is excess consumption of fat that leads to health problems such as obesity, heart disease, and perhaps even cancer. The average American diet consists of 43 to 50 percent of fat calories. Having some fat is necessary in your diet is only 30 to 35 percent of your daily calories.

By avoiding the obviously greasy and fatty foods, and choosing leaner products you can significantly decrease the amount of fat in your diet, yet still obtain the necessary level of fat and fat-soluble vitamins for good health.

Though you are constantly hearing of the detrimental effects of a high fat diet, just remember fat does play an important part in your diet. Remember, in diet, as in most things in life, moderation is the key.

ballot on the issue of rezoning to involve minorities.” Wente said. “We were surprised to resolve the situation. At this week’s ASEWU council meeting a bill was introduced to the election of people to seats on the council was changed. Now, according to the bill, all members must be appointed, so a ballot vote is no other form of voting can be used in cases where council seats must be filled through a vote by the student body. Wente doesn’t feel the council should wipe their hands of the situation yet.”

Both Boaring and Wente expressed concern over the negative effect the issue may have on the involvement of minorities on campus. Wente said that there are “a lot of things that can be done” and will definitely have some effect on them. “Hopefully, once this situation is resolved to the complete satisfaction of all involved parties, it will give more incentive for minorities to run, not scare them off. But only time will tell if this may be a problem.”

Looking at the dynamics of the issue, Wente said he feels that the situation is not the most important issue that may arise during the election, such as the voucher system or the exact wording of the bill. Rather, “the whole idea is to make sure that everyone has his say.”
