C. C. Club Members Broadcast Interesting Professional Program and Reveal Secrets of Universe

The C.C. Club met Wednesday evening, January 29, in the Y. W. C. A. program room, and blessed in both the C. C. and O. C. program.

The program was headlined with an announcement that the Tied质地 appointment committee and president, Messrs. Tied质地, and members might be of service to the C. C. Club in its general work. He emphasized particularly the importance of the personal touch, and the use of the subtlety of the simple art. The program was interspersed with such tidbits as the principle of the universe.

Ogden, president of the club, welcomed the club's return and mentioned that the club's future will be determined by the group's determination. The club members were then presented with an interesting plan.

Viola Burn, chairman of the program committee, introduced the group by telling the story of the C. C. Club's history and its objectives.

Members of the C. C. Club have been giving talks and discussions at various clubs, and they have been setting up a new table this week. A new table is being set up next Monday.

The success of the Kinship will in a large measure be due to its subscriptions. In years to come, the Kinship will be recognized as an important part of the school, and the staff and the advisor urge all to contribute as much as possible. All who have costume pictures, stunts pictures, or pictures of general interest to the school, are asked to have them taken by the art editor or give them to one of the art editors.

MAKING THE JOURNAL A GOOD
ADVERTISEMENT

NATURALLY we are grateful to bear favorably upon the question of advertising the Journal, due to the use of a better grade of paper. The advertising space is too small, but we believe the money is well expended. The Journal is an advertisement of Cheney Normal. Without advertisements for new and old, it is of no real value. We appeal to every one in a practical way, to think of the Journal as an advertisement of the school. We believe that a feel that a high grade of newspaper will leave a distinct impression upon the student. In our own school, advertisements have been an excellent feature.

It is our aim to make the Journal representative of the high standard of our institution. If we were babies, it would be almost impossible for a small sum of money and additional effort on our part, we believe the money and the effort will be well worth while.

UPHOLDING NORMAL SCHOOL DEGREES

HORACE-MANN — PIONEER CHAMPION OF CHILDREN AND TEACHERS

FROM THE N. E. J. A.

MILLIONS of CHILDREN now have a better chance to learn and to grow up better because of the work of Horace Mann. His democracy is wider, his ideals of living higher, his methods of teaching better. Our great American public school systems owe their foundation to Mann and to other single men, men who would have built half the plans of the platform of the National Education Society, had they been in it.

But how successful was the attempt, if any, to fortify men in their minds during sleepless nights? If the teacher of to-day is twice as brave as the teacher of yesterday, he is not twice as easy to corrupt. The more careful study work now gives to his task. The system seems to work, and if he does but his duty they fully understand the work, and not the necessity we are not challenged now. They are organized to the work, they are on the way to safe and efficient teaching.

Horace Mann was a foremost in the current of leaders that have been found in our nation's school service was rendered during the years of his sec- tion. In 1837 the American educational society of education, 1837-1848. When our association was formed, he was serving as president of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio. His vision was to keep on with what Antioch still stands and which might be more widely organized.

The educational ideals of Horace Mann are the same as those who send system of education. He who had backed, he held that education should be uni- formly free to all and poor as well as rich. He insisted that the chief aim of universal education should be moral character and social efficiency, not abstract culture, but what he termed social evolution, which included many accomplishments.

He declared that school buildings should be beautiful, filled with light, and so on. He believed to be only a short report of the changes during his time in introducing carefully the plans (for rooms, windows, lighting, and heating, etc.)

He believed that instruction should be based upon a study of the geography and history of the students. He did not think of upon authority and tradition. He was the pioneer of the labor-saving methods and for his labor-saving methods.

Mann was an excellent teacher, and his students were excellent teachers trained in special schools, men as well as women, who would be used by him. The school movement today for multiplying and improving schools and institutions for mutual improvement.

He believed that the teacher should have a good command of his work, in a spirit of independence and knowledge, in order to understand the teaching of the day. This was high ground in a day when computer for a day was the rule and child study had to become a science.

That study should be adapted to practical needs, and was another of his convictions. He could now have said, as to what we would expect, he were taught wider than bookkeeping, which he did not think of. He would not think of.

Because of his clear analysis and earnest champion ship of these ideas, Horace Mann came to be known as the world around him, and the great man. Twelve years upon the faculty of the Massachusetts Board of Education, secretary of the State, etc. Eleven Houses with his name were reported and distributed by set of act in the New York express. To read these are now in a like a pilgrimage to an ancient shrine.

A man of such a great education grew especially from the controversy, in which he had an account of his visit to foreign countries and schools as the center of a criticism of their schools and in a battle that continued for some time.

Partly surprising that educational leaders, since Horace Mann, have not made more courage from a study of his struggles. He was the pioneer in the field of education in democracy. Demover had not yet been achieved. He was a man of the times, and his life and work are described by circumstances of his youth stepping into which he entered in his own "God's plan and measure of a schoolman's work."
Outdoor Sports Are Many
Among Many Monroe Hall Girls
On Friday evening, January 15, the Monroe Hall girls took advantage of the weather and went to their favorite spots, including skating and hiking. Some of the girls played in Otis Orchard Thursday afternoon, while others enjoyed skiing and skating. Dorothy Nelson, whose birthday was on Friday, spent the day with her friends. In the evening, Dorothy Nelson entertained her guests with a birthday party. The girls had a delicious cake and enjoyed each other's company.
