I hear that discount airline tickets to Iceland, New Zealand, and Africa went on sale this morning. Real cheap, too. Reason?
Ronald Reagan's landslide victory in the election Tuesday. See any local airline ticket agency.

For those of you who voted for Reagan, well now you have got him, his spineless style, his charismatic method of lying on national television, his nine-to-five daily working schedule (do not overwork this man, he gets cranky without his nap), his overboard scribbly, and best of all, his millionaire business friends who as members of Reagan's cabinet will reap the riches of this country.

Yes, this is what we've got. A seventy-year-old man who ought to look great next to Brezhnev the wealthier. First time they meet (they can see how fast riots break out in Students or administration. Address all inquiries and letters to the

Hey, we didn't do it

Editor:
The article written by Ken Kaassman in the Oct. 23 issue of The Easterner was in my opinion, very poor, biased and irresponsible journalism. Mr. Kaassman asks Jimmy to clean up his act or get out. I would suggest the same to Mr. Ken Kaassman.

Mr. Kaassman says Carter has released confidential information ( Stealth bomber) and has created a crisis (Soviet combat barge in Cuba.) What is his source for these statements?

Senator Church released the information about Cuba, not Carter. Carter did not originally release the Stealth bomber information. However, since Reagan is undermining our national security with some erroneous remarks about our national defense capability, it is probably okay to try to reassure our citizens and our allies that the United States is not an underdeveloped nation when it comes to national security.

Mr. Kaassman says Carter is trying to bribe states with dams. Mr. Carter fought hard to end "pork barrel" water projects but was defeated by Congress. I would suggest that Mr. Kaassman look up the definition of propaganda. Telling people what Reagan has said and what his record was really like as governor of California is not propaganda.

Has Mr. Kaassman been absent from the planet Earth for the last two months? Carter has been working to defeat the oil-politics, air pollution has been solved, that women and blacks do not need equal rights under the law. I thought our founding fathers set this nation up to be a nation of free people. The last time a presidential candidate won by the margin one on one. Would Reagan be willing to debate two Democrats (Carter and Kennedy) at one time? Reagan has not only only has a long time hidden behind the candidate about all the candidates, why has he never suggested to Mr. Clark (a Democrat) or Mr. Kennedy (the Libertarian) and Commoner (erry-how the Citizens party and the other candidates be included--not just Anderson?

Is Reagan who has taken up personal attacks on Carter, not vice versa. Reagan says, "Carter has jammed the tax laws," what a lie! The Commerce Department many months ago made a decision to improve the wholesale price index. At the time the decision was made, the CD did not know if the auto industry would be giving rebates this fall. Even if the Department

In 1978, President Carter said "environmental problems do not stop at national boundaries" and that the protection of the environment must be an international effort.

Carter's point is well illustrated by the fact that by some estimates about 30 percent of the acid rain that falls on Northern Europe has been carried across the Atlantic from North America. Meanwhile, winds that brought acid rain over lakes in the United States can be traced to Canadian sources.

Acid rain is responsible for the corrosion of buildings and monuments such as the Egyptian pyramids from Britain. Acidic than it would be in un-polluted atmosphere.

Acid rain is caused when sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxide, from lead and aluminum from the burning for energy production to production to release of sulfur dioxide. "concentric circles of potential trouble." This 1980s version of the Castro regime also protested the commercial practices of the United States.

Acid rain has been linked to the ecological damage caused by acid rain and to the potential for increasing acid rain.

Acid rain is responsible for the acid rain precipitation in the Northeast and for the reduction in the success of other crops. This measure may aid the U.S. in the energy crisis but will aggravate the acid rain crisis.

On Sept. 23, 1980 the Senate Select Committee on Small Businesses and the Senate Environement and Public Works Committee held a joint hearing on the economic impacts of acid rain.

Dr. Stephen Norton of the University of Maine testified that since the full impact of acid precipitation would not be felt for a long time, waiting for complete documentation could mean irreversible consequences in terms of dead lakes, corroded buildings and depleted nutrient reserves.

Some have found that acid rain has already affected thousands of lakes in New York, Wisconsin, Minnesota and the entire Northeast.

While the most evident effect of acid rain, and if damaged, would cause the death of many species, has been linked to the ecological damage caused by acid rain. The acid rain would involve converting coal to gas, thus reducing the need for sulfur, and burning the gas. This process has been in effect since the mid-1980s.

If we must learn these lessons half way round the globe, however, we must apply them much nearer home. For if the United States is to project political and military power in defense of its vital interests abroad (e.g., in the Middle East), it must have security in this hemisphere. While we cannot any longer afford to neglect the growing threats to our security or to obscure them with wishes for a better world than the one we have got.

For example, Cuba has become a major advance Soviet military base in the Western Hemisphere. It is capable of threatening the heavily-traveled trade route through the Caribbean Sea and the Gulf of Mexico, routes which are crucial to the United States. If the United States were to become militarily involved outside this hemisphere, Cuba—only 90 miles off the Florida coast—would present a serious strategic problem for American security.

The Castro regime also provides the Soviets with a nucleus around which political and economic interests hostile to the United States can be organized. Several Caribbean diplomats have informed Washington that "the Cubans are all over the place in the Caribbean" while "the U.S. is nowhere to be found." Jamaica and Grenada have increasingly taken Castro, anti-American stance; St. Lucia, Martinique, and Dominica are reportedly under growing pressure from Cuban-backed subversives.

Cuba's support of leftist guerrillas in the Caribbean has caused State Department officials to express their concern about "concentric circles of potential trouble." This 1980s version of the Castro anti-American stance has increased, including the Galeta Island sub-bases near the Panama Canal, the naval facility in Barbados. The remaining American communists in Puerto Rico and Guantamano hold the targets of a Castro-led propaganda campaign. Panamá's Omar Torrijos now supports Castro's demand for American withdrawal from Guantana mo, as does Mexican President Lopez Portillo. That enclave may thus become the next major symbol of U.S. "colonialism" in the hemisphere.

Cuban and Soviet agitation in the Caribbean not only threatens America's "third border," it also provides a base for threatening the Panama Canal, Central America and the Mexican oil fields. The unifying of the three Sandinista factions against the Cuban revolutionary was reportedly helped in large part by Castro. Soviet-made arms were airtapped to the Sandinistas and Cuba has been able to supply arms from Europe, Africa, and the Middle East. Virtually every Latin American nation "condemns" the situation (many of which have been taken advantage of by the USSR) sent observers or volunteers to Nicaragua. And in the words of Russian disinformation, "most of the activity, I believe, there has been an upsurge in activity in the Caribbean basin—most notably in El Salvador and Columbia, where several embassies have been seized as part of a broader pattern of anti-government dissensions.

In South America, the Carter Administration has estranged the United States from its traditional allies, while weakening us in the Western Hemisphere. If we must learn these lessons half way round the globe, however, we must apply them much nearer home. For if the United States is to project political and military power in defense of its vital interests abroad (e.g., in the Middle East), it must have security in this hemisphere. While we cannot any longer afford to neglect the growing threats to our security or to obscure them with wishes for a better world than the one we have got.

The hostage crisis, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, and now the Sandinista threat to Nicaragua, have all been compared with a smile, "Anyone who has been around Cuba should know that the Cubans are all over the place in the Caribbean" while "the U.S. is nowhere to be found." Dubai and Grenada have increasingly taken Castro, anti-American stance; St. Lucia, Martinique, and Dominica are reportedly under growing pressure from Cuban-backed subversives.

Getting around is a problem

Life in wheelchair not easy

BY Stephanie Vana
Staff Writer

Since 1973, Brice Jones, 21, a computer major at EWU, has been confined to a wheelchair. He was paralyzed from the chest down while diving off cliffs with his brother, Walter, at Fishhook Park on the Snake River.

For the last three and one-half years, Jones has been getting around with the aid of a custom-made, battery operated wheelchair, and those three and one-half years are beginning to take their toll on the machine.

While he was being interviewed, a belt slipped loose from the pulley wheel on the right side of the chair and sent Jones rolling down the hill by the science building. He steered it off to the left and came to halt on the grass.

"I'm in the process of getting a new chair," said the brown-haired, hazel-eyed Jones, as we replaced the belt. "This one keeps breaking down, and without it I'm helpless."

In order to obtain a new wheelchair, Jones must first prove that he is handicapped, "which isn't very hard for me to do," he laughed.

The new chair will be paid for by Medicaid and will cost around $2,600. Jones should only have to wait two to three months before receiving it, but he ordered it three months ago and has yet to get it.

"My doctor in Walla Walla has to fill out an application which says I need a new chair. The application is sent to Olympia to be okayed," he explained.

"I've called the doctor and he told me that he sent my application to Olympia. So I called Olympia and the Medicaid people said they haven't received the paper work yet."

"I can just imagine the new wheelchair sitting in the corner of some office somewhere between Olympia and Walla Walla," said Jones.

There is no doubt about the necessity of the new chair. Jones eats his meals at Tawanka Commons, which is downhill from his apartment at the Married Student's Court. This also hinders his ability to get to his classes, as anytime he is on a downhill slope, the belt slips off.

Jones has a regular wheelchair, but someone else has to push him around. This presents a problem for him because he does not want to depend on others to get him where he is going.

"The only independence I have is the switch that operates this chair. I don't like the idea of being completely dependent upon other people."

Because Jones can do little more than read books, watch television or listen to his stereo during his free time, his wheelchair is also his main source of recreation. He likes to go for long rides just to think or look at the scenery, but his dependable wheelchair keeps him home more and more.

With winter approaching rapidly, Jones is faced with the problem of getting around on snow and ice. "A new chair won't make slick sidewalks any less slippery, but at least I'll have more control."

In spite of his difficulties, both with the old wheelchair and his trouble getting the new one, Brice Jones seems to handle things rather lightly. "This old wheelchair is pretty noisy, along with all of its other problems. It's especially bad when I go to the library," he smiled. "Ever tried to tiptoe in a wheelchair?"

Three ROTC brothers join ROTC

It isn’t often that three brothers go their separate ways and later find themselves at the same destination. But that is just what happened with the LeBlanc brothers at Eastern Washington University. Their common destination is the Army ROTC program, where each is preparing to receive his commission as a second lieutenant.

It all began last year when Rene, a 21-year-old student in field botany, decided to take a look at what ROTC could offer him.

“I had recently gotten married and was a little concerned about job prospects in my academic discipline, so I took the introductory course and liked what I saw,” he said.

With some encouragement from Rene, younger brother Paul, a 19-year-old business major, registered for the same introductory level course. He has since made the most of this initial exposure. Having accumulated an overall 3.16 grade point average during his first quarter, Paul applied for a three-year Army ROTC scholarship.

Paul was informed in July that he was among four students to win a scholarship.

“Receiving the scholarship certainly changed my immediate future, and it has taken the financial pressure off my parents and me. Like Rene, I plan to spend some time on active duty when I graduate and then take things from there,” Paul said.

Having heard Rene and Paul discuss their mutual plans, older brother Jim, 34, a graduate student in Urban and Regional Planning, said he became convinced, too, that he should consider the advantages of ROTC.

“The more my brothers and I talked, the more it seemed that here was a super opportunity which I should explore further. So, I arranged to take the intro courses during summer school, and now I’m sold on it,” he said.

The brothers are natives of Medical Lake, Wash., where each was involved in sports and other student activities at Medical Lake High School. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph LeBlanc, also of Medical Lake. The brothers’ father, a retired Air Force master sergeant, said “I believe there is considerable prestige associated with your commission as an officer. We are very proud that the boys have a desire to serve their country.”

Uncle Al’ trusts students, unless...

His job title may be thought of as playing the role of judge, jury, police officer, and towards that end, it's not really the case for EWU's Disciplinary Officer Al Ogdon. Ogdon also carries the title of Assistant Provost to Student Services.

Ogdon's responsibility as University Disciplinary Officer is to regulate by the norms of behavior of the students and apply the university disciplinary code accordingly.

"I maintain a working relationship with local law and judicial systems," Ogdon said. "We are able to police our own affairs as long as we're doing it in a fair and consistent manner."

As Assistant Provost, Ogdon assumes a multitude of obligations. Working as a counselor, running orientation, and serving on many Associated Student Committee gives Ogdon a closer relationship with the students.

Ogdon, beginning his 20th year at EWU, has seen many changes at the university. In his freshman year, enrollment broke the 2,000 barrier, and this year the number of students enrolled is more than 8,000.

Ogdon feels the biggest change that has been in the facilities. "Twenty years ago not many of our present facilities were in existence," Ogdon said. "The football field was torn up to build the library, which not many universities would do. For two years our games were played at Albi Stadium, and we played for the national championship."

"Uncle Al," as he is known to Ogdon, is proud of his nickname. "It implies a somewhat non-threatening type of person, more friend than judge," said the name originator in the dorms about five years ago.

Many students have said that Eastern is too strict in enforcing the rules and laws of the university. Ogdon says every school has a different manner. "Eastern serves an extremely conservative region. This atmosphere prevents the legislators from our districts who determine funding for Eastern to base their campaign on when running on an acknowledged conservative ticket."

Ogdon says he generally trusts students unless there is an overwhelming amount of evidence against them. "However, I become less of a nice guy if I find out they haven't told the truth."

Ogdon was disappointed with the young voters for not voting to lower the drinking age to 19. "The 19-year-old is better prepared for society and in a better position to make wise choices," he continued against Ogdon.

In his 20 years at EWU, Ogdon says that his work has been to make wise choices. "It would even be unpicking, according to Ogdon, to pay for the tuition."

Students are once again having fun, according to Ogdon, who said, "Ten years ago it used to be look cool, do your own thing. It was a dracary existence."

Ogdon serves on the Cheney City Council, Chamber of Commerce, and on the board of two non-profit organizations in Spokane. Ogdon also serves as the liaison between the university and Cheney.

Tawanka seeks input on food

by Henry Salzano
special to The Easterner
Eastern just got fed up with Tawanka and feel like complaining to them. If so, complain to Hossein Moini, student manager of Tawanka and the man many students talk about complaints or compliments.

"One of our problems right now is that a lot of people don't know who to complain to," explained Moini, "and I want the people to recognize me as the man to talk to."

Moini said that he actually loves hearing the people's complaints because it helps him improve the service. "It's kind of a challenge too, because I've found that for every complaint there is a definite reason behind that complaint."

"Like once a student asked about a certain brand of cereal he noticed hadn't been out lately, so I checked around and found out that the reason it hadn't been out was because that cereal company was on strike," explained Moini.

Moini said that all the negative comments about Tawanka used to bug him at first, but now he realizes it's just a tradition for the students to hate the food service.

"What's funny is to see the people who were really complaining about how 'crummy' the food is all lined up again in the second line just waiting to get its own 'crummy' food," said Moini.

Moini also went on to say that he has talked to many other people who have eaten at other schools and they've said Eastern is the best place they've ever eaten at.

"We have a lot of pride in our work and the cooks who have been with us awhile feel as if they're cooking for their own kids and they're really hurt by some of the comments," said Moini.

Moini says Tawanka has made a special effort this year to make the food look better and that they are being helped in preparing the food by a nutritionist. "We've made our meatloaf different this year so that it will look better and still taste good, thanks to the help of the nutritionist," said Moini.

"Our meals are planned out so that if everyone takes a regular helping of all the choices offered, then they'll be getting all their body needs," explained Moini.

When Moini was asked if the food at Tawanka is starchy and makes people gain weight, he said that he didn't think so and the reason he thinks a lot of people gain weight is because they get all the food around them and consequently they just eat more than when they didn't have so much food around them.

"Of course it's not like Mom's, but Mom doesn't cook 3000 pieces of chicken either," Moini said.

But, if Tawanka eaters do have any complaints about Tawanka, then they should tell them to Hossein Moi. He'll love it!

Zornes dedicated, determined to build a winning program

by Chuck Bandel

Easterner Staff

Strike the words “dedicated” and “determined” from the English language and it would be impossible to paint an accurate picture of EWU head football coach Dick Zornes.

It is dedication and determination that makes Zornes a winner. And in his short, two-year stint as head of Eastern’s football program, he has brought the school a winning record and the 1978 national championship. Zornes has toiled tirelessly as head coach at Eastern.

Returning to his alma mater last season, he guided the Eagles to a 7-3 record, best by an EWU football team since 1967. So far this year his squad has compiled an even 4-4 mark against the toughest schedule in the school’s history.

Prior to his return to Eastern, Zornes was the head coach at Columbia Basin in Pasco. In two years he guided CBC to a 17-3 record and the 1978 national championship among junior colleges following an undefeated season.

During the regular season Zornes spends between 70 and 80 hours a week in his head coaching role. Even Sundays are a busy part of the schedule.

“We meet at 2:30 (p.m.) on Sundays and start going over what happened the day before,” Zornes said in reference to a gathering of the coaching staff each Sunday afternoon.

At 4:30 the players come in for stretching exercises to help get the kinks out, and then at 6:30 we all go over the game film,” Zornes said in relation to the Sunday schedule.

Much of Zornes’ coaching philosophy centers on the individual helping himself.

“Hit the individual athlete has got to be the one to make things happen,” Zornes said. “We will provide all the assistance he needs in preparing himself, but it’s up to the individual to make it work,” he added.

Zornes’ concerns for the development of each player is best reflected in his love for spring practice. It is during the spring program that he feels he has the most time to work with individual, due to the “slower pace”.

Getting started in college coaching was not exactly what Zornes had planned to do after graduation from college.

“It was purely by accident that I got into coaching,” Zornes said. Zornes stayed on after his four years as a player at Eastern and worked under coach Dave Holmes as a graduate assistant in 1967. That year the Eagles racked up an 11-1 record, losing only to Fairmont College in the NAIA championship game.

The following year Holmes moved on to Hawaii to become head coach and took Zornes with him as an assistant coach in charge of the defensive backs. It was in Hawaii that Zornes decided coaching was for him.

From Hawaii Zornes came back to EWU to work on his master’s degree in education. He once again worked as a graduate assistant at Eastern before accepting an assistant job at Montana Tech. Following two seasons in Butte, Zornes ventured into the world of pro ball as defensive coordinator for the British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League. Then came the opportunity at CBC.

As head coach at Eastern, Zornes’ main goal is to build the program to Big Sky Conference levels. The main obstacle so far has been recruiting. Big Sky football teams have considerably larger budgets, which in turn means more scholarships with which to lure prospective athletes. But Zornes remains confident EWU will catch up.

“It’s a matter of our X’s being as big as their O’s,” Zornes said with a smile as he discussed the disadvantage of trying to recruit area athletes who are also sought by the larger schools.

When he does find a free moment in his schedule, Zornes likes to spend time with his family. He also like to participate in all kinds of sporting activities, especially fishing in the spring and summer, when the pace has somewhat slowed. Zornes occasionally tries to go skiing in the winter, but his recruiting chores usually take up most of his free time.

“I enjoy it here,” Zornes said when asked his feelings about EWU. “My family likes it here. It’s nice to have roots now that the kids are of school age.”

How long Eastern will be fortunate to have Coach Zornes as head coach remains to be seen. With his record and growing reputation as a head coach, Zornes may well move faster than the budget at Eastern will allow.

“Naturally I want to remain head coach at the highest level I can with the ability I have so far,” he said.

And if Dick Zornes’ future rests on his ability, he will no doubt move up the ladder in leaps and bounds.

The EWU-Montana Tech football game this Saturday at Woodward Field will kick off at 1:30 p.m. rather than the regularly scheduled time of 1:00. The time change is a precautionary move to avoid darkness.

Intramural football starts playoffs: roundball next week.

With most intramurals in full stride, both men’s and women’s football playoffs are underway this week.

Ten teams in men’s leagues qualified for this week’s playoff action. Qualifying for post season play were Magic Mits Unlimited, B.A.M.F., Something Awesome, Moose Breath, Sure Would Ball, Muff Divers, Flyers III, Wench, Columbian Gold and the Pearl 6th Floor Whores. The championship game is scheduled for 3 p.m. Friday on Woodward Field.

In women’s football, the Toxic Shock Syndrome Rely’s will take on the Streeter Massacres for the championship.

The intramural department reports that racquetball, 3-on-3 basketball and pool are the next scheduled events.

Entry forms for the pool tourneys will be held Nov. 17-20 in the Dressler Hall games room. Categories will include men’s and women’s singles and a mixed doubles tourney. T-shirts will be awarded to all winners.

Referees are needed for 3-on-3 basketball. Anyone interested should contact the IM department.

Martin is crowned

John Martin is one man who wanted to be king and became one.

Tuesday afternoon Martin was crowned the ruler of the Holy Godswaland Empire, Titular Head of the Imperial Geological Society (formerly EWU's Geology Club).

Martin, the society's president, said the coronation in the science building was part of a promotion effort to arouse student interest in the geological society.

"There is a lot of things we want to do this year. One offering is a resume seminar for aspiring geologists. The seminar will prepare the students for the North-west Mining Convention to be held in Spokane," he said.

A graduate student, Martin said in the past student's interest in the club was low.

"I'd like to let more people know what the geology club is doing and what geology is," he said.

The club which has 25 members, meets once a month and is sponsored by the American Institute of Mining Engineers. This is the first year the society has been recognized by the AS.

"We are hoping that people will join the department a year earlier, rather than Thielor. So, at that time, I continued my domestic responsibilities of being a wife and mother."

Martin is married to a chemist who on a Nuclear. He is also a part-time reserve policeman for the Cheney Police Department.

They have two girls, Lizbeth, 6, and Lauren, 3.

Following an interview with the Cheney Police Department, Twiss was hired. Her first duty--assistant police academy were she was instructed in police procedures and laws.

"I even had to pass tests in public speaking and physical aptitude," she said.

With the tests completed, Twiss became, as her chief puts it, "the first female police officer on this side of the mountains."

Cop likes her work

The 5-foot-8 strawberry blonde talked about it is like to be a woman cop.

"The major concern for most of the officers was whether I could back them up properly in a tense situation."

"Could you cover my butt?"

"They were honest and above board about it. They would come right out and ask how I might be in a fight situation."

"Oh, as they put it, "could you cover my butt?"

Twiss continued: "I told them that didn't know for sure, but that I would certainly do something. I wouldn't hang back leaving them hanging out. If they were to get hurt, it certainly wouldn't be my fault."

"He was small, but very strong. I had to knock him down, sit on him and put the cuffs on him."

For as hazards of the job, Twiss recalled her most unusual situation involved "a little guy we had already cuffed who decided he was dead out to get us."

"I knocked him down a second time and again sat on him," she said.

Overall, Twiss said that most men have a "basic respect for me as a police officer. Sometimes they'll even apologize for coming in my presence."

"What they don't know-and I'm not about to tell them-is that sometimes I cuss like a drunken sailor," she said with a chuckle.

Twiss said that on certain occasions, women seem to cause the biggest hassles especially if they've been drinking."

One incident Twiss remembered was during the arrest of a "little-bitty thing" on a charge of assaulting an officer.

"For the most part, the subject was a little monster...mouthy, fierce and slightly physical...kicking and slapping."

What the "subject," a woman, was ultimately subdued and transported to the Spokane County Jail, "as Cheney facility lacked a woman jailer," she said.

"I am sometimes scared to death."

Twiss has coped with many situations, some good, some not so good. "When the really dangerous people come up, I am sometimes scared to death! But I channel and utilize that energy to be alert," she said.

"I have trust in my training, know what I am doing and what I can do. I try to work with the other officers as a team."

With one finger next to her chin, Twiss talked about what she enjoys most.

"I enjoy talking with people and, well, just being there where somebody needs you."
Prices increase; demand steady

Campus Tuck-In Service bows to inflationary times

by Henry Saltzoo
EWU Journalism Center

Soon or later, it had to happen. The price of a good tuck has gone up.

"The reason we rose our prices from 50 cents to $1 is because the girls were always saying 'why don't you charge more?' Well, we decided to," said Tom Julian, director of EWU's only Tuck-In Service.

But even with the increased price, the service's emphasis is still the same: Please the customer.

"Our main purpose is to relieve the girls of the tensions of studying and just to have a good time," said Julian.

"We still do the same thing, you know, tell them a bedtime story, sing them some nice songs to make them laugh and give them a little backrub," Julian added.

"What we want people to realize is that we are a very legitimate organization and we do not want to have anything to do with anything suggestive," he said.

And since business is "good," about $80, Julian said the service decided to offer students a discount--15 tuck-ins for $10.

The money the service makes goes to the Dryden first floor fund. It is to be used for floor projects. Julian said, Julian also said that the tuck-in service is also a great way to meet new people and make new friends.

Jenkins is joined by four other men who make the service's rounds once in every eight nights. On group tuck-ins, all five men work; on two people tuck-ins, three work; and on single tuck-ins, two work.

The Tuck-In Service is averaging about seven tuck-ins a night. On weekends the men have found themselves up until 3 a.m. "tucking 'em in."

"We've surprised a lot of people with our success," said Julian. "We've been getting good comments from everyone, even from the guys. At first the guys were really skeptical but when they found out how well we are doing and what a good time we are having they end up asking if they can help."

Tuck-In Service is doing so well that now they even have regular overnight calls. They usually have about six girls at the door of every tuck in just watching and laughing and asking when they can get tuck-ined.

The "Tuck-In" plans to continue the service all-year round and maybe add some new ideas for those cold winter nights.

Their strategy is to concentrate on the dormitories and stay away from the off-campus calls.

To get tucked-in, call Tom at 359-7230 or Jeff at 359-7211. Julian said "Tuck-In won't rub you the wrong way!"

Jenkins concludes with the end of his trip in John Day, Oregon. He and his wife, Barbara, after lengthy discussions, decided to send invitations to all the people they had met on the trip to invite them to walk the last mile with them.

"We really didn't expect very many people to come because of the distance and the financial cost," Jenkins said. However, when they arrived in Florence, Oregon to walk the last mile, there were more than 300 people gathered to join them.

The black family from North Carolina was there, on their first trip outside their home state, along with an 85-year-old grand­mother from New Orleans. When they reached the Pacific Ocean in John Day, everyone plunged into the ocean with tears of happiness as Peter Jenkins and friends, celebrated his walk across America.

Hypnosis

During the process the hypnotist psychologists hypnotize another. Involves orie person watching the Erickson, a noted hypnotist who made a career out of devising ways to hypnotize people according to their personality.

A boy went to Erickson for help. She was easily distracted. He looked pictures on his desk and ask, 'Are those your children?' He would say, 'You 'r doing it, why not know more about them?' She would say, 'No, I was just curious.'

Then the conversation would continue. After a short time she might notice his letter opener and ask about it. He would answer and the conversation would resume again.

'Soon she would again divert from the conversation, asking about the age of his children. Erickson realized if he was ever going to control her he would have to control her attention.

'He began introducing the distraction of her attention for a purpose as a means to a goal as a Sonata, a long. This demonstrat-ed he was in control and he was able to manipulate her.'

Williams then spoke about ruckus. Even at a young age he was asked to a high school in Salt Lake City. He asked for volunteering and joined many of an auditorium full of students. The psychologist told of taking an imaginary trip to the Amazon jungle.

They thought: 'It's a very hot day, you're sweating—you have scratches from the plants... Itches from the insects... You're hungry...in the distance you see a beautiful, translucent water...a lagoon... the water a mist passes over you. Let's go swimming.'

Williams pursued. 'A boy in the front row did a ruckus. There were two the audience floor, and began swimming feverishly. He moved around like a snake.

'I could see the boy's chipped and bleeding teeth. I couldn't believe my eyes. It didn't scare the hell out of me!'

'This experience made me very realized and interested.

Williams noted that anyone practicing hypnosis should have a professional background in psychology, human services or social work.

Chinese student enrolls

Amy Hui, 21, is Eastern Washington University's first student from the People's Republic of China.

A native of Guangdong Province, Hui arrived for the first time in the United States just a week before fall-quarter classes began. She joins some 380 other foreign students enrolled at Eastern; they represent 39 countries and territories.

She completed two years of study at Chang Chun Geological Institute in Manchuria and will continue studying chemical analysis of geology at EWU. Although she studied English in China, she must further study the language before she can enroll in higher level classes. She carries a full load of three English classes this quarter. H.T. Wong, director of the university's international student program, explains that "I studied English before I came here, but I did not have any special training in English," Hui says. "I want to study harder to get from that basic level where I'm at to that higher level."

"I get lots of help from other people and I'm grateful for it," Hui said. "I want to study harder to get from that basic level where I'm at to that higher level."

Because she has a granduncle, Barr Yep, living in Spokane, according to Wong, "Amy must make more adjustments than most students because of differences in environments. She's fortunate to have a granduncle here with friends to help make that adjustment." But the contact isn't the ideal communication one might expect. The granduncle is from Hong Kong and speaks a different Chinese dialect than that she knows. They communicate by writing.

She lives with a family in the Spokane Valley, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Wong. She commutes to Eastern, spending nearly four hours each day on the bus. But she doesn't mind the ride, explaining that it gives her a chance to meet and talk to many people.

Dr. S.M. Jameel Hasan, associate professor of management, was recently awarded a $50 check for being "the most outstanding teacher in the discipline and department of management." The award, based on input from alumni, faculty and students, was issued by the Eastern Washington University Foundation.

On behalf of Alyomi Hamson, the Easterners would like to thank all those who donated clothes and money. As you may recall, Alyomi Hamson is the unfortunate Nigerian student who was robbed of his belongings at the John F. Kennedy Airport in New York. As of Nov. 3, he has received clothes, towels and $100 in cash. Once again, thank you for your generosity and thoughtfulness.

Racquetball team moves closer to top of league

by Chuck Randel
Eastern Staff

The EWU men's racquetball team remained close to the top of the Greater Spokane Racquetball League following a narrow 7-6 win over the Spokane Club in a match at Eastern last Thursday.

The women were not so lucky, as they dropped a 4-0 decision to the North Park racquetball club. Two members of the team failed to show for the match because of a mix-up in scheduling and the Eagle women were forced to forfeit two matches.

The men upped their season record to 5-1 with the win over the Spokane Club. Veteran Bill Broadhead led the Eagle attack with a win in the A division. Other EWU men to win matches were Skip Amsden, Mike Feser, Tim Tonani, Dave Braun, Tom Julian, and Mike Hess.

The victory puts the men's team in either second or third place in USKL standings, pending the results of other matches played last week. A combination of won-loss record and total matches won is used in determining overall standings.

The women dropped to 5th place in league play following the loss to North Park. The double forfeit put the Eagle women down 2-4 to begin the match. The next two matches were both three-set affairs, with North Park coming out on top to sweep the contest.

The women will attempt to regroup Tuesday night against the Spokane Club in a match in Spokane.

The men take on North Park tonight and then play Fairchild AFB the following week. Both matches are on the road.

Student to win Seahawk trip

Two loyal Eagle fans who attend Saturday's game against Montana Tech at 1 p.m. at Woodward Field, will leave with an all-expense paid weekend in Seattle.

The ASCWU will sign up every student who attends the game until five minutes before halftime. Winners must be present during the halftime drawing.

The winner of the drawing will be flown to Seattle for the Dec. 7 Seahawk game against the New York Giants. Transportation to and from the Kingdome and hotel accommodations at the Wash­ington Plaza are included in the package.

If a hedonistic escape the week end before finals appeals to you, be sure to attend Saturday's game at Woodward Field. One of you will leave with two tickets guaranteeing two days of plea­sure.

Kickers win two of three

by Dennis Hays

Two out of three ain't bad. Eastern's Soccer team won two games and lost one in the North­west Collegiate Soccer Confer­ence action last week.

Last Thursday, the Eagles shut out Whitworth for the second time this season. Mike Campbell scored one goal and Saed Yakalem put in a bicycle kick later in the game to account for Eastern's goals. Goalie Greg Perry registered his third shutout of the year. Earlier in the season, Perry and the Eagles had beaten Whit­worth 7-0.

Over the weekend, Eastern split a pair of matches, losing to Central 2-1 and beating the Uni­versity of Idaho by the same score.

Henry Groenen scored the Eagles' only goal in the Central match, but two quick strikes by the Wildcats spelled defeat for the home team. The Wildcats scored early in each of the halves, but Eastern coach Mike Holland said that the Eagles dominated the rest of the game.

"Central scored in the first three minutes of the first half," he said, "and they scored their second goal in the first two minutes of the second half. Other­wise we were in complete control of the game. We are finally starting to put together two good halves instead of one. We are playing much better soccer now than we were playing early in the season."

Eastern put together two good halves Sunday and beat the Uni­versity of Idaho 2-1. Adel Makbel, in his first game since coming off an ankle injury, scored one goal and Yakalem scored another. Yakalem's goal came off a free kick, when Campbell fell to the turf with an apparent injury. The Idaho defense relaxed, ex­pecting a time-out. But suddenly Campbell jumped up and booted a pass to Yakalem who was standing all alone to the le­ft of the Idaho goal. And he calmly kicked the ball into the net for what proved to be the winning goal.

With three games remaining, the Eagles have raised their season record to 4-7. If his team stays healthy, Holland feels that the Eagles may have a chance to finish the year with an even .500 record.

"We finally have everybody healthy," he said. "Having Adel back for the Idaho game really sparked our offense. Now that everybody is back, we are playing like a team. The Idaho match was our best team effort of the year. We have three games left, so we have a chance to finish even, if we continue to play like we did this week."

The Eagles have a match today with North Idaho. The game will be played on the intramural field at 2:30. On Sunday, Eastern will be on the road for a match with the University of Montana.

Eagles look to end football losing streak Saturday

by Jack Peasley

Eastern Washington University will try to snap a three-game football losing streak Saturday when the Eagles host skidding Montana Tech in their final home game at Woodward Field on Armed Forces Day.

EWU (4-4) and the Orediggers will meet for the third time this season although Eastern will make its first home appearance in the series after losing a 46-8 decision to Montana Tech in Butte last fall.

Eastern lost its first home game of the season Saturday when Simon Fraser recorded a 13-15 victory in a hostilely played contest in the rain. EWU had won 11 straight at home. Carroll College, routed by Eastern earlier in the season, upset Montana Tech, 28-21, to knock the Orediggers out of the Frontier Conference race.

Montana Tech, coached by Bill Cimmor, had lost three straight. The Orediggers have a 2-4 mark for the season.

Kickoff Saturday will be at 1 p.m.

Running from the Power-I, Montana Tech features a strong ground attack led by tailback Kevin Housler, 6-2, 220, ranked third in rushing and fifth in scoring in the NAIA as a junior. Housler, a native of Danville, Ky., is a key for the 1,000-yard mark in rushing this season.

Eastern, which has struggled on offense the last two weeks, may have the services of tailback Bryan Johnson for the first time in a month. Johnson is expected to return to practice Tuesday after suffering a deep bruise to the right thigh in the second quarter of EWU's loss to Puget Sound Oct. 4. Last fall, teamed with tailback Darryl Bell, Johnson helped the starting backfield accumulate more than 1,300 yards rushing.

Bell paces the Eagles in rushing for the second straight season. In eight games, the Federal Way senior has gained 523 yards in 128 carries.

Eastern could be without strongside linebacker Eric McIntrye. The Spokane junior suffered a concussion last Saturday and, early in the week, he continued to have a bad headache.

Otherwise, EWU escaped serious injury although Jim Brittain, who shares quarterback duties with Dan Daly, remains available for only a spot duty with a sore right shoulder.

Following the date with Montana Tech, Eastern will conclude its 10-game schedule Nov. 15, meeting Mesa College in Grand Junction, Colo.

Saturday, representatives of military service organizations and their families from throughout the Spokane area will be admitted at half price with adult tickets at $1.50 and children's tickets for 75 cents. In addition, the Washington National Guard Helicopter Ambulance Demonstration will stage a special flyover at half-time and the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve will fire a howitzer after each EWU score.

The game will be broadcast on KUDY (1280) at 1:30 p.m.

Men's cross country finish 7th in nation

by Jack Peasley

EWU's men's cross country team completed its 1980 season on a positive note last Saturday, taking seventh place in the eighteen team field at the NCAA II Far West Regionals in California.

EWU finished the meet with a score of 176 points. Host school Cal-Poly San Luis Obispo, ranked first in the national cross country poll, won the meet with a score of 36. Nationally ranked Humboldt State and the University of California-Riverside claimed second and third respectively in the 10,000 meter race held at Morrow Bay State Park.

Mark Conover of Humboldt State won the race with a time of 30:56. Conover was one of four runners to eclipse the old record of 31:32. EWU was paced by Steve Pylus, who finished 22nd with a time of 32:34. Robie Hood took 27th and Ron Westman finished 38th in the 106 man field.

"We did very well," he said. "I'm very pleased with the way we performed. The heat hurt us quite a bit—it was 80 degrees during the race and I don't think we were prepared for that. Under the circumstances, we ran as well as we could."

Martin noted that although the EWU season is officially over, some of his runners may be travelling to Canada to run in the British Columbia Championships Nov. 15.

Women 4th in region

by Jack Peasley

The EWU women's cross country team missed a trip to the nationals by only one place last Saturday, taking fourth in the NCAA Regionals in Missoula.

Only the top three teams from this region qualify for the finals and Eastern's score of 124 points left them short of Boise State's total of 71. Seattle-Pacific won the five team meet with a score of 31 points, followed closely by the University of Idaho with 34. The University of Portland took fifth with 120 points.

The 5,000 meter race was won by Patsey Sharples of the University of Idaho with a time of 17:37. Eastern's Tracy Binfield finished 16th with a time of 19:37 which was nearly good enough to qualify her for the nationals. The top 15 women also attend the finals.

Denise Freeman finished 21st with a time of 20:00 and Jackie Vandelbrake took 23rd in the field of 90 runners. Cathly Ayers and Sheryl Piper completed the Eagle squad.

"We just didn't run as well as Missoula as we are capable of," she said. "We ran better earlier in Seattle than we did at the Regionals, and the course in Seattle was much tougher."

EWU rips Zags

by Jack Peasley

Staff Writer

The EWU women's volleyball team tuned up for this weekend's league championships by beating Gonzaga last Thursday. The Eagles dominated the match, winning 15-4, 15-5, and 15-7.

According to EWU coach Mary Rubright, the non-league match with the Bulldogs gave Eastern the chance to work on a problem that has been plaguing them all year—ineconsistency.

"We're still working on our mental game," she said. "We need to stay consistently pumped up when we play. This match was good for us. We didn't have to play hard—it was non-league—but we played well all the way through. I think we're ready for the league playoffs."

The Interstate League playoffs will start tomorrow night in Moscow, Idaho. EWU won the tournament last year and went on to place seventh in the national tournament. The Eagles must finish first or second in the league championships to automatically qualify for the regional tournament. It will be a tough tournament; but Rubright hopes it isn't as tough as it was last year.

"Last year we lost our second game," she said. "Then we had to work our way up through the loser's bracket. That meant we had to beat the number one team twice in a row to win it. I'm hoping that we are the number one team in the winner's bracket this year."

The Eagles' first match will be at 6 p.m. tomorrow night against the University of Portland. If they win that one, they will play again at 8 p.m.

As an experiment, NBC television plans to omit announcers when it covers the National Football League game between the New York Jets and Miami Dolphins in the Orange Bowl in Miami Dec. 20.

Announcing the plan, Don Ohlmeyer, executive producer of NBC Sports, explained that what viewers would hear for the most part would be sounds of the game—"the crunch of the bodice, the pads clashing, the public address—what you'd hear if you were at the game in the best seat in the house."

"It's a gamble," he explained. "We haven't progressed this far without taking a chance or two. If you don't want to take a risk, you'd better get out of this business. I am not saying it's going to work, but it's worth trying."

The program will have one sports commentator, Bryant Gumbel, who will provide periodic updates on the progress of the game. In addition, information on the game will be shown from time to time on the bottom of the television screen. But the usual play-by-play and color commentator will not appear, provided that the game has no significance to either team concerning the forthcoming playoffs.

If it turns out that the game will affect either team's chance of entering the playoffs, the experiment will be cancelled and the usual coverage with announcers will be provided, a spokesman said.

Maybe ABC will take a hint and get rid of Howard "muffler mouth" Cosell. I'd rather hear the players rambling than Howard.. . .

Former National Football League quarterback Roman Gabriel, now coach at Cal Poly Pomona, was numb from the experience.

He watched as Portland State University set an NCAA Division I-AA record for the pads clashing, the public address—what you'd hear if you were at the game in the best seat in the house.

"I tried to commit suicide but the bullet went wide to the left..."

Roger Staubach, former quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys and now color commentator for CBS coverage of NFL football, was asked last Sunday by the play-by-play announcer what he thought St. Louis would have to do to beat Dallas. "I asked Amy and she said the number one problem was defending against the bomb," Staubach said.

The comment drew plenty of phone calls from irate Democrats who were angry with Staubach. "Good for them," he said. "I've been angry with Carter for four years!"
