The Machine to Replace Teachers!

Several scientists are working on an "Automation Aid" for teachers, and one prototype has emerged at the University of Connecticut. It is "slightly bigger than a typewriter but considerably less complicated," explains its inventor, Dr. James Sakoda, University of Connecticut social psychologist.

Students can ask the teaching machine questions in arithmetic, spelling, poetry, foreign languages, and science. And a whirring moment later, the machine will spit out an answer.

"Dogmatic claims should not be accepted uncritically," the inventor states. "Carefully planned research is required to establish basic principles on which they are to be utilized before they are introduced on any large scale."

Dr. Sakoda has a $14,950 United States Public Health Service grant to help him with this project.

No matter how much the machines mimic the teachers, and even when they are mass-produced, the teachers should not fear losing their jobs, the inventor reassures.

"The machine will only be an assistant," he explains, "a tool which permits the teacher to give more individual attention to students."

And again, the machines will always need teachers to whisper hints to them and feed them the right answers.

The Big Question

If this were the last and only statement that you could make before leaving Eastern, what would that statement be?

Shannon Caldwell—"If less people thought ignorance was bliss, it might be a little more bearable here."

Herman Pump—"If I'd have known four years ago what I know now, I never would have come to school."

Mike Green—"If I had my four years to do over at Eastern, I wouldn't waste any time in some of the near useless courses required by the education department."

Bill Pickeral—"People who are dissatisfied with the education program here at Eastern should keep still unless they can offer some constructive criticism."

Joe Commuter—"How come refills are 10 cents?"

Five Attend EW Under War Orphans Program

By Ron Taylor

... We are met on a great battlefield of that living rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work of a Veteran's administration program called the War Orphans Education program.

According to Mrs. Jeraldine Caviness, a student attending EWU on this plan, it is a program of financial aid for the education of young men and women whose parents—World War I, World war II or Korea veterans—died of injuries or diseases resulting from military service.

The purpose, as stated in law, is to give these young people an opportunity to get the education they otherwise might have obtained, had their parents lived.

Eligibility is determined by the age of the deceased veteran's children, and the manner in which he died. He must have died of a disease resulting from military service, the veteran must have been discharged under other-than-dishonorable conditions.

The orphan's age must generally be between 16 and 25 years, although if the VA finds that it would be in his best interest to begin training before he reaches his 18th birthday, it may be arranged. The length of training is up to 36 months, or the equivalent of 36 months if he is enrolled in part-time schooling.

The monthly allowance paid to the recipient is $110 if he attends school full-time. It is paid at the end of each month of school the recipient finishes, and is paid by check to the parent or guardian of the student.

JERIALDINE CAVINESS

A unique feature of this program is that it provides for special restorative training to the veterans' child who is unable to pursue a program of education because of some physical or mental disability.

Each of the students who is, or who expects to be enrolled in Eastern under this law agree that it is a profound advantage to their future.

These students include Mrs. Caviness, Wayne Archer, William Gant, Sandra Lynn Karts and Wolda Jean Gonsoy.

Dr. Dayton No's Johnson As Candidate
The second of the series of panel discussions on the leading Democratic party candidates for the presidential nomination was held last Thursday night in the Capri room, Mike Green, club vice president reported.

Dr. A. A. Dayton, head of the social studies division, and James Ziegler, assistant professor of history, presented stimulating analyses on the qualifications and prospects of Senator Lyndon Johnson of Texas and Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri.

Dr. Dayton pointed out that Senator Johnson, who began his career as a liberal and deal congress man, has become more conservative with the change in the economic and political climate in Texas. He also expressed the opinion that the Democratic party would be making a mistake in nominating Johnson and felt that a liberal candidate would fare much better in a race with vice president Nixon, the apparent nominee of the Republican party.

Ziegler, in discussing Senator Symington's chances, commented on the major contribution he has made to the Democratic ticket by assuming the role of a compromise candidate, being acceptable to the major wings of the Democratic party. Symington is termed Symington mildly conservative, but the IMC is located in room 202A in Martin hall. mentioned his liberal voting record as an asset. Symington's rather poor ability as a public speaker was cited as a handicap, if he were to get the nomination.

Daytonパス」 Rally For Andrews
A rally for Lloyd Andrews, sponsored by Spokane area and EWC young Republicans, is scheduled for March 4 and 5.

McVicker, president of the EWC young Republicans, says speakers tentatively scheduled for the rally are Congressman Walt Boston and Spokane attorney Bill Bains, unsuccessful candidate for the senate.

McVicker, president of the present state superintendent of schools, has been mentioned as a candidate for governor on the Republican ticket. He has said he will declare one way or the other after March 1.

The rally is free and open to all persons," says McVicker, "and tickets may be obtained from either Dr. Kenneth Hos good, of the division of history and social studies or myself. Tickets will be served and I hope that many persons will turn out for the rally."

The rally, which is the first in 25 years that there have been a possible candidate for governor from this side of the mountains," McVickers said.

IMC Sound Lab Now Ready For Use
The Instructional Materials Center now has its sound laboratory ready for student use.

Dr. John Church, head of the social studies division, said that the IMC is located in room 202A in Martin hall. mentioned his liberal voting record as an asset. Symington's rather poor ability as a public speaker was cited as a handicap, if he were to get the nomination.

Workroom Offers New Services

A wider variety of services are now being made available to Eastern students. Don Williams, assistant in student services, said. One such service is the student center workroom, located in last year's book store, which was made possible through the efforts of last year's ASB activity coordinator, Don Duncan.

After presenting the idea of a workroom to the student council, Duncan headed a committee to buy the necessary items and set up the room.

Created to give campus organizations or individual students a convenient working place, the room contains posters, dance decorations and other such items. The room offers a paper cutter, decoration materials, storage shelves for campus organizations, working counter, some poster materials and a Ditto machine.

There is also a complete line of hard tools for carpenter work. These tools belong to the ASB and can be checked out through Williams or the ASB activity coordinator.
