NEWS Highlights

by Lloyd Humphrey

There is a story being told by a�ing portion of those who lived in Europe fifty years ago. One area of this story is being told on the campus of Eastern Washington College this week by the representatives from Eastern's advanced public relations class. These are the same people who some sixty years ago were told to bring their children to school with them because of the bloodcurdling sound of the school bell. This bell is still in use today, but it is no longer necessary to bring children to school with their parents.

Both Soviet Russia and the United States are trying to devalue the products of their respective economies through the production of goods and services which neither nation can use. The reason they are doing this is that neither side can do without an armament buildup which will not be used. The cost of these armaments is so high that neither nation can afford to produce them. This is a war that is a waste of time, and it is becoming increasingly clear that it is a war that will never end.

The fact is, war has become obsolete. The cost of war is so high and the benefits so minimal that it is no longer a viable option for either nation. When an armament buildup becomes necessary, it is not because there is a war, but because there is a need to prevent a war from breaking out. The only way to prevent a war is to make sure that the sides are not strong enough to start one. This is why the United States and the Soviet Union are spending so much money on armaments. It is not to start a war, but to prevent one.

The war in Europe is not a war that can be won. It is not a war that can be lost. It is a war that can only be prevented. The United States and the Soviet Union are spending so much money on armaments because they know that a war cannot be won. They are spending this money to make sure that the sides are not strong enough to start a war.

In Europe, the sides are becoming weaker. The United States and the Soviet Union are reducing their armaments. This is not because they want to stop the war, but because they want to prevent a war from breaking out.

Savages, Bucs To Battle For Cinder Crown

The highlight of the spring sports season, the Evergreen conference track meet gets under way Friday at Whitworth college, and should again feature the personal prowess of the Bills, Eastern Washington and the defending champion and host school, Whitworth.

In the last two seasons Eastern has taken the crown seven times. Whitworth has been a close second twice and two years ago the two schools shared the honors.

Predications are scheduled for Friday in the field events, the sprint and hurdle tests. The finals are slated for 1 p.m. Saturday.

Teams To Watch

A preview of the action was given at Gravity Hwy. Saturday as the two schools battled to a tie for first place in track meet against in the Montana State Relays.

The Savannah have two point leaders in first place in the event of the season. Bill Carpenter and Roland DeBoer. Carpenter won both the mile and two mile last season and looks good for a repeat performance. His best in the mile is 4:32.8, and his best two mile mark is 10:16.

DeBoer, Bower

DeBoer is favored. Bower is in the quarter mile. Saturday he defeated confrerence record holder Dary's Russell, with his best time of the season of 49.8. Other 440 competition will come from Gary Phillips of Western Washington, who held the record at 49.9 before Russell set the new mark last year. He could also come into it with a tie. Whistler in the 220 yard dash.

Sparr, Steadman

Sparr, Steadman should be another first place winner for the Savannah. He was named first runner of the team in the 100 yard dash. By Larry Quinney of Montana State college. Steadman's third time of the year has been 10.8 and has also placed first several times in the 200.

Fuller, Goodwin Win

Conference high hurdles record holder Gary Fuller is the only unbeaten individual in the Eastern squad. He has bettered his season record of 3:08 by 2 seconds of a second and is one of the solid odds on favorites of the meet.

Ruth Neubert gave each Savannah hope of a first in the field events last year as he upset Whitworth's Dan Maclean in the javelin with a throw of 227 feet 10 inches, the best mark of his career. It was the first time that had ever been "beaten" in conference competition.

Whitworth is expected to get first in a field where the six field events: the high jump, the broad jump, the discus and the mile and the mile relay. The Savannah team of Roy Shabazz, Wilbur Bell, Art Goodwin and Clyde Carpenter took first in the 122 yard victory and lost the team title, 75-74.

The meet is open to all comers, and those people who have either earned a medal in varsity sports or are present a guarantee of the varsity track team. All of the men's births on earth are encouraged to participate.

The meet starts at 1:30 in the afternoon and all participants should be at the field and warm up for six hours until the meet starts. The following is an outline of the events and tests for which they are scheduled to start.

The shot put, pole vault, high jump, and hurdles will all start at 1:30; the broad jump, discus and 120 yard low hurdles will start at 2:00.
