Campus Assumes Deathly Quiet As Students Cram For Exams
Unfilled Parking Lots Throw New Light On Space Problem; Students Too Lazy To Walk!

By Chuck Plumb

Between 9:40 and 10:00 a.m. Friday morning, one of the peak hour students would have to walk a couple of miles across campus to reach the SUB parking lot.

This individual study was prompted by an editorial in last week's Easterner stating that there were 885 parking spaces in student parking lots.

For the past year or so, commuters have been complaining about the lack of parking spaces on Eastern's campus. Several letters and editorials have been written on the subject. But this unscientific study has raised the question as to whether there actually is a parking problem on Eastern's campus.

According to Dr. Wayne W. Lemons, Associate Professor of Business Administration and President of the campus parking association, the peak student parking hour is 9:40 to 9:45 a.m. Students would have to walk to classes.

Another parking lot to be built is the one located near the SUB parking lot.

Dr. Lemons said that new lots are being planned right now. One, to be located just southwest of the campus school, is to be opened sometime this summer.

Another is being planned for the lot behind Hargreaves Library. As soon as the houses located there are bought, the land will be cleared for a parking lot.

A third lot will be built west of the Science Building across Washington. This will be completed after Washington street is paved and improved.

Money for the building of these lots will be taken from the parking fee that Eastern's students have been paying.

There has been no luck, no cheating of the students by the administration. What has been done is perfectly legal.

It is unfortunate that students cannot park right in front of their classes, but these are the facts of life.

By arriving all the way to Cheney shop school from three blocks away, students are just going to have to walk a block or two to classes if they want to use student parking lots.

After all, President Kennedy doesn't expect his students to walk from three blocks away.

The result of all this is that Eastern's campus is not a very pleasant place to visit.

According to John F. Smith, senior at Eastern, if the students would just get a car and not let the administration get away with it, there would be an increase in parking space.

But what about the other side of the war? A few helpful hints for progressive professors. Never give a test on the day it is scheduled. Students will be too sleepy from studying all night.

Tell the class approximately when to expect a test, but avoid specifics. The suspense will keep them away long enough that you can soon drop them from the roll.

If, like your students, you must have attendance, don't last Thursday night for a couple of weeks. A few days before registering the test, tell the class that any time a student flunked it several suicides would help the forsaking situation.

Ask questions about a famous person's personal life. For example: "Did he like his nickname?" or "The one he beat his wife?" Put the highest point value on these answers.

Have daily assignments turned in. This is a convenient way of checking roll. Even if half of them are carboys, they will probably be signed.

Interrupt memorized speech-es with helpful comments. A student's memory is infinite. Women may wear the same dress for a week. The monotony helps students concentrate on tonight's date.

Refer to the campus at least five minutes after the bell rings. The bells are on an automatic set- up. The five minute signal across campus will awaken your students, and other professors don't mind tardiness.

Put these tips into action and be the first to rank with your more experienced colleagues.

Dressler Writes Panhellenic Committee; Requests National Contacts By Greeks

A letter asking for national contacts by fraternities and sororities was sent to the National Panhellenic Conference and the Interfraternity Council last Thursday.

The letter sent last Thursday was addressed to Mrs. Ar- thur Bergman, chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Dressler said that this action was normal for the Panhellenic conference fraternity of the situation at Eastern Washington State College.

A clipping of the story on the board meeting which appeared in the Easterner was included with the notation: "The unofficial study by the board should be interpreted as indicating the ultimate recognition might be given. However, national contacts now seem in order.'"

Mrs. Dressler verbally ad- vised, later that the board's decision could be interpreted that an ultimate acceptance of recognition might be given.

The letter said in part: "This letter serves as a notice to you to send a general notice to all National Panhellenic Conference the situation at Eastern Washington State College."

A mimeographed version for the lots behind Hargreaves will be mailed to students after the permanent schedule comes out.

The full year's schedule will be available about August 1, 1963.
Colonel Nilsson Receives AS Award For Outstanding Faculty Member Of The Year

A "complete surprise and a much greater honor" was given to Colonel E. G. Nilsson, May 21 at the awards convocation.

Nilsson was raised in Oregon and attended the University of Oregon and Northwestern Law school. He practiced law for one year, joining the army at the beginning of World War II.

"I found life in the service very much to my liking and decided to make it my career," Nilsson said.

Since the war, Nilsson has served and attended school in Alaska, Fort Lewis, Fort Lewis, Georgia. Just before coming to Eastern, Nilsson served in Korea.

As his first ROTC duty, Nilsson has found Eastern very pleasing. He cited both the improvement of the school and relationship with faculty and students as reasons for liking EWSC.

Although he had not seen eastern Washington before his commission, Nilsson said that he likes very much the "climate, country and people—even though I'm not a fisherman.

Nilsson said that his family shared his enjoyment of eastern Washington and have become "real Cheneyites." Salty Nilsson, his oldest daughter, is a junior at EWSC, majoring in sociology. His other three children are in the first, second and seventh grades.

Nilsson will be transferred this summer. His family, the Colonel said, will leave with "peaceful regret." Although they like Cheney, being used to army as they are, they also

Who Needs Help?

Last Friday night, after attending the Military Ball, two couples were returned to Spokane via the Marshall (Fish Lake) road.

A few miles past the lake they spotted two teenagers staggering on the road. The bloodied couple was too weak and was near the busy road with no means of immediate help.

The leader of the Cheney Emergency operator and leaving the information of what happened, the driver decided to expedite action by personally contacting the police. This was not as easy as it appeared. The first and only local he had contacted offered two concrete excuses for not offering aid. He said his wife had recovered a report that the accident was merely a fight (everyone knew about it) and that it was certain the local officers would have the situation under control within minutes. Observe the local officer in the throws of making an earth-shaking decision on just what action to take was too much for the driver.

Before his ideal to leave his "relaxing" of the Fish Lake-Spokane highway stop sign, the officer might have missed one of those wild college kids returning home from the ball.

The driver finally located a state trooper in the A & W lot and once again relayed his message. Before the last words were out of his mouth, the trooper was enroute.

After waiting nearly half an hour, help finally arrived to the badly injured victim.

This span of time could have been cut in half if the Cheney police would have acted when first told of the incident.

It's too bad when something happens, rather than a student running a stop sign or making a U-turn in the heart of the booming metropolis, the Cheney police become paralyzed with indecision.

And if no other message is conveyed through this editorial—remember to stop when coming off the Marshall road.

Grab Your 'Grubbies'!

Spring is coming. And with the sun—Come finals.

During the next nine or ten days nearly 2500 students will flock to classrooms in much the same manner as sheep entering a slaughterhouse.

There will march to campus dressed in their best "grubbies," unshaven, unkempt and physically exhausted. They will sprawl in the sun all morning, drink and swim throughout the afternoon, and sleep all night.

The reason for this "don't give a damn attitude" is a thing career oriented. The time that the students are too busy doing too many things to look after their own personal appearance.

After taking part in so many activities, students tend to be a little droopy around the margins and sagging around the fact. This is one of the many annoyances of dragging themselves to the classroom on time for the test. This is perhaps the reason for the wearing of ugly clothing—usually not quite so weighty as the usual garb.

Even the instructors seem to join the movement. Indeed, for profit's sake, one might even call the swelling grubby clothes—usually in quite so weighty as the usual garb.

Instructors see the students and pass the message—indeed, for profit's sake, one might even call the swelling grubby clothes—usually soon to come up at class looking so darn scruffy. Why? Most definitely—soon!
Dr. D. P. Morse:

"Yes! I feel that informal contact between student and teacher is an important aspect of college life. However, if a student or faculty member develops an informal relationship, the problem could be that it might come to the attention of the other person, who may react negatively. It seems that the faculty member should keep the relationship confidential and not tell anyone else about it. If the student feels uncomfortable, they should simply ask the faculty member to stop the informal contact."

Dr. Kenneth Hossum:

"Informal contact between students and faculty can present a useful and exciting opportunity for students to learn and grow. However, there is a risk that these contacts could be perceived as inappropriate, especially if they involve intimate or personal conversations. Therefore, it is important for both students and faculty to be aware of the potential consequences of such contacts and to set clear boundaries to prevent any misuse."

March 24, 1963, was a most important date. At least, Penny Smith and John Garcia will always consider it so. For it was on that important date, between winter and spring quarters, that Penny Smith and John Garcia became a freshman. He commutes daily from Spokane, driving every week in a car pool.

An education major at Eastern, Rich manages to pay his expenses by giving Dad an assist at Al's Mobile Service, which he just happens to own. Pop owns.

If there's one thing you notice first about Rich, it's that he really diggs his gig. If Rich does anything, he does it exuberantly! If he thinks something... he thinks it positive- ly! He agrees with you.... he agrees all the way and out- loud. In short, Rich is the kind of student, students like, yes, even the teachers like. He's quiet, and attentive in the classroom, cheerful and friendly outside of it.

Rich likes to double date and usually spends his $5 to $7 weekly entertainment allotment doing just that. "Going steady is too expensive," was his considered opinion on the subject of "particular" girl.

Studies occupy Rich from 3:30 to 5 each afternoon and again the next day, so there is free time to help out at the station. Rich often plays the position of an only child at Smith name, since his only competition, an older sister, 25, up and got married.

Middle- for Cathey Lindvall, 2-year secretarial major, and Senior,

Since the foot that weddings cost money, is hardly new to anyone, it can pose a formidable problem for a young couple, each with his or her own set of ideals. Typically, the upper-division students, are planning a trip there as soon as finances and leave accrue.

"We couldn't get by on what we do," remarks Penny, "if it weren't that I go to school on the National Defense Loan and we can save a little on things we buy at the base commissary."

with Freshman, Dan Meckel

The 10,000-word picture accompanying this brief biography portrays a rather simple new law called, "Meckel's Law." Meckel's law states that: "If one, Nordic-type 6-foot-plus, male student practices pulling one under-sized, disinterested, Volksvagen, he will eventually work up to pushing one, dark-blue, 4-door, '53 Ford Sedan... in case he has to.

Since Penny and Dan Meckel, inventor of the law, I suppose you could say it is up to him to prove. And, that may be just what he'll have to do, come summer vacation when he takes off for Columbus Basin and waits. In the meantime, if you happen to see a Nordic-type, six-foot-plus... oh, well! You get the drift.

Aside from posing for corny prop-shots, Dan has a serious side to him. He wants to be a pharmacist in some not-too-distant future, and is working diligently toward that end.

Nineteen-year-old Dan comes to Eastern from the family farm in Rockford, south of Spokane. Dan earned most of the money for his college expenses, himself, helping out on the farm. He has a sister Debbie, 8 years old at home, and a married sister, Carolyn, who also attended Eastern. Carolyn married another Eastern student, Doug McPolis, just to keep it in the family.

All of Eastern's athletes have completed their seasons except for track stars Jack Stewart and Chuck Messenger. Jack and Chuck have qualified for its national NAIA meet at Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Stewart, who needed to run the mile in 4:15 or better to qualify for the national meet, broke the NAIA District one three-mile record with a clocking of 14:22.2. Messenger had to settle for third in third district with a 13' foot 6 inch effort in the pole vault.

Jack Curtwright of Central won the pole vault with a record of 13'-8½". Two-time NAIA national record holder and broad jumper Ed Matthew will compete.

Four Western players were named to the All-Everette baseball team. They were shortstop Rich Whart, first baseman Ed Taylor, second baseman Joe Walker, and pitcher Fred Neumann.

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

With today's installment I complete my ninth year of writing columns in your college newspaper for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes. In view of the occasion, I hope I may be forgiven if I take a side step.

These nine years have passed like nine minutes. In fact, I would not believe that so much time has gone by except that I have my wife nearby as a handy reference. When I started columning for Marlboro, she was a slip of a girl--as reed and as fragile as a blade of grass. Today she is a strong woman given to biting the postman. Still, I count myself lucky. Most of the fellows who choose this work are married and have a wife who chooses cars as my wife. I myself have never had this trouble and I attribute my good fortune to the fact that I have never struck my wife with my hand. I have always used a folded newspaper--even throughout the prolonged newspaper strike in New York. During this period I had the annual edition of the Manchester Guardian flown in daily from England. For all this, however, that it was not entirely satisfactory. The air-mail edition of the Guardian is printed on paper so light and flimsy that it makes little or no impression when one slaps one's wife. Mine, in fact, thought it was some kind of game, and tore it flimsy that it makes little or no impression when one slaps one's wife. Mine, in fact, thought it was some kind of game, and tore it

But I digress. I was saying what a pleasure it has been to write this column for the last nine years for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes--a fine group of men, as anyone who has sampled their wares would suspect. They are not as noble as the Salvationists, but they hold the same fields to which the Salvationists have extended their influence.

But working for the makers of Marlboro has not been the greatest of my pleasures over the last nine years. The chief satisfaction has been writing for you--the college population of America. It is a rare and lucky columnist who can find an audience as full of intelligence and verve. I would like very much to show my appreciation by asking you all to vote for Marlboro Cigarettes. I am sure they will appreciate the help of the college population of America.

To all of you let me say one thing: during the year I have often thought how much could have been written. I hope that this will be the reason why our college population of America will have never had this trouble and I attribute my good fortune to the fact that I have never struck my wife with my hand. I have always used a folded
