Nick Carper is the principal violist with the Spokane Symphony Orchestra. Since joining the orchestra in 2001, he has devoted himself to performing and teaching in the region and abroad. Born in Spokane, Nick holds degrees from Columbus State and Butler Universities, where he studied with violists Manuel Diaz and Csaba Erdélyi. Mr. Carper has performed widely throughout the U.S. in various capacities as principal violist, chamber musician, and soloist. As principal violist and section player, he has performed with the Eugene, Columbus, Macon, La Grange, and Muncie Symphony Orchestras and the Marion Philharmonic. He has been principal violist of the Ash Lawn Opera Festival and has regularly participated in performances of the Spokane Opera and the Northwest Bach Festival. Recently Nick was guest principal violist with the 2010 American Prize-winning Lancaster Festival Orchestra in Ohio.

Rachel Dorfman started the violin at age five. Her major teachers include Vera McCoy Sulentic, Sharron Smith, and Kathryn Lucktenberg. Rachel graduated from the University of Oregon in 2001 with a BA in violin performance. After spending a year freelancing with the Eugene Symphony Orchestra, Oregon Mozart Players, and OSU-Corvallis Symphony (and also playing Bach on the streets of Portland), Rachel won her job with the Spokane Symphony Orchestra in the fall of 2002. She now happily resides on the South Hill of Spokane with her husband, Nick Carper, where she maintains a full private studio. When not practicing, teaching, or performing, Rachel likes to read, cook, quilt, and play with her two cats, Jack and Mario.
