Disharmony

Shifting expectations
Drifting out of sync
Then diverging in a blink

Chasing favorite notions
Emotions left to incubate
To hatch some future date

Seems I could do nothing as it happened by and by
A series of doors walked through and novel things we tried
You went your way, I went mine

Nursing phantom vanities
A language of discontent
A silence far and tense

Well-learned in rehearsal
Reversal can there be?
I have yet to see

I want you to know that I remember all the best
Though we often forget and we may never learn the rest
Can once for ever be
If it's understood between you and me?

For every gain a trade
For every trade a choice
For every choice an end
That may not match the aim...
And though no reason to doubt the aim
It struck disharmony just the same

Old vows ringing hollow
Follow I cannot
There's something I have sought

Something unpronounceable
Something to move toward
That is its own reward

If fortune appraise us, let it also bear us through
But if we must ourselves, then let us finally share in truth
Before we lose the taste
And as grey strangers these years waste
